"The government will insist as a condition of the sale that it retains control of Polymer. There will be no danger of it falling into the hands of its competitors. The provision for some direct public participation in Polymer will make it possible for Polymer employees to buy shares in their company if they wish to do so."

Pearson Tells Story On His Grandson

WINKLER, Man. (CP) — The Nov. 8 election is the "Grandchild Election."

Prime Minister Pearson virtually dubbed it that in telling an election rally crowd of about 600 here Thursday a story about his five-year-old grandson, Michael.

He said the boy's father had asked Michael what the election was all about.

Michael told his father: "I is to see who's going to be granddaddy."

"So after Nov. 8," Mr. Pearson said, "I'm going to be granddaddy and I hope I'm going to be prime minister as well."

Mr. Pearson toured southern Manitoba throughout the morning. At three points on the route here from Winnipeg he was mobbed by enthusiastic crowds of school children waving maple leaf flags.

Coming Book Declares 2 Top Cabinet Members Came Close to Resigning

TORONTO (CP) — Two top members of the federal cabinet came close to resigning over Prime Minister Pearson's delay last fall in disclosing when he first heard of the bribe-offer charge against executive assistant Raymond Denis, according to a forthcoming book.

Richard J. Gwyn of Time magazine's Ottawa bureau writes that Transport Minister Pickersgill and Defence Minister Hellyer considered the move because they felt the prime minister's silence for more than a fortnight was allowing then justice minister Favreau's reputation to be "torn to shreds."

The book, The Shape of Scandal (Clarke-Irwin) will be published Oct. 15. It deals mainly with the series of scandals that plagued the Liberal government from last November on, and the Lucien Rivard narcotics case with its political offshoots and booms large.

It purports to give the inside story of cabinet colleagues' anguish while Mr. Favreau was writhing over press and opposition attacks based on the supposition—as Mr. Pearson had told the Commons to believe—that the prime minister did not tell Mr. Pearson until Nov. 22 of bribery allegations against Denis.

PM DELAYED ACTION

When this was drawn to Mr. Pearson's attention by colleagues, Mr. Gwyn says, the prime minister let one day after another go by without acting on the erroneous information he had given the House Nov. 22. Finally he made the correction, but on Dec. 14 and in response to Chief Justice Frederic Dorion.

Meanwhile, Mr. Gwyn writes, "powerful figures" had been pressing him to set the record straight. These included Mr. Pickersgill, policy secretary Tom Kent and Gordon Robertson, clerk of the Privy Council.

The writer says strong arguments against breaking silence came from advisers such as External Affairs Minister Martin, Finance Minister Gordon and Labor Minister Nicholas Eachen.

He says that Mr. Pickersgill and Mr. Hellyer "came close to resigning" because the issue to them—and others in the administration — was the moral one that "Guy Favreau's reputation was being torn to shreds and nothing was done to shield him."

Mr. Favreau eventually was criticized by the Dorion inquiry over failure to follow through on the allegation that Denis offered a $20,000 bribe to prosecutor Pierre Lamontagne to refrain from going to bail for Rivard, then held on extradition proceedings for the United States government. Denis since has been charged.

Mr. Favreau resigned his portfolio but was taken back into the cabinet as president of the Privy Council.

"I never for a single second considered resigning," he said in an interview.

He declined comment on the assertion in the book that he and others urged Mr. Pearson to disclose earlier than he did what it was on Sept. 1 or Nov. 22, last year that Mr. Favreau first told him of the allegation against Denis.

"I never make comments on what goes on between cabinet members," Mr. Pickersgill said.

Manning Against Compulsory Proposals in Medicare Bill

OTTAWA (CP)—The compulsory aspect of the federal government's proposed medical insurance plan is wrong and dangerous to the best interest of Canadians, Premier Ernest Manning of Alberta said Thursday night.

The Social Credit premier, speaking on a CBC free-time radio broadcast on television said he is in complete agreement with the plan's objective —comprehensive medical services.

"The present plan in its present form would place a totally unnecessary burden on the taxpayers because there were many people who were willing and able to pay their own medical bills.

SEES TAX RISE

Costs of the program would mount in $1,000,000,000 a year and would result in substantial increases in taxes federally and provincially.

Mr. Manning also said medical standards would be impaired because doctors, already in short supply, would have to take on more work.

The premier said the plan should be voluntary, the government paying for those who earned less than a certain income.

He said that only Social credit candidates in the federal election are opposing, on principle, the compulsory feature of the plan.

Mr. Manning was introduced by Robert Thompson, National Social Credit Leader.

SPRINGFIELD, Man. (CP) Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said Thursday night that 30 to 85 per cent of Canadians "do not need and do not want" a compulsory medical care insurance plan.

But it appears they will be forced into one because the Liberal government, without allowing the proposal to be discussed in legislatures or in Parliament, has announced such a scheme will be implemented.

Mr. Thompson concentrated on medical care in a speech that was interrupted by 15-minute CBC television programs —via two portable TV sets— during which he and Alberta Premier Manning criticized the compulsory aspect of the federal program.

The Social Credit leader spoke to an audience which fell short of filling a small school auditorium.

GOOD-HUMORED TRADE MINISTER Mitchell Sharpe jokes with audience during keynote address at Hastings South Liberal convention.

By HARRY MULHALL

Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp here last night pounded political critics of the Canada United States automobile trade agreement and accused them of distorting the facts.

"There is no need for any apology for the auto agreement," he told a Liberal nomination Liberal nominating convention at Belleville Collegiate which chose parliamentary incumbent Robert Temple as its federal election candidate.

"I've been really very surprised that the opposition parties should have been so foolish to attack this auto agreement," he said.

"I think they are going to drop that issue like a hot potato because the advantages of that auto agreement have become very evident."

The pact was now in its third year of operation and he observed between this country and the United States and claimed it is going to be of great advantage to Canada."

CANADA EXPANDING

Mr. Sharp, the cabinet minister most closely identified by the party as spearhead of a boom times claimed by the Liberals under their leadership contrasted to a "no-hoper" those claims in person.

"You don't need to read our prospectus to see what is happening," he said.

To greet him the audience rose to its feet as a dixie band crashed out a topical keynote with a well-known sports theme. It was the familiar tune "To look sharp . . ."

Waiting until the convention hoopla died down, the trade minister then launched his election appeal, citing unprecedented employment levels and a dynamic national economy as prime qualifications for re-election of a liberal majority government.

The Liberals since 1963 had restored a general feeling of confidence in Canada, shattered by unnecessary financial crises, high unemployment and international quarrels during the Diefenbaker government.

"Today Canada is expanding and prospering as never before. The economy has been transformed before your very eyes in the past few years."

The process of expansion is still continuing, added Mr. Sharp.

"A majority government is necessary to avoid attempt and confusion which hampers the parliamentary process," he said.

"In this last House of Commons, and in any House of minorities which we have had where the government was in a minority, the system breaks down because the opposition is in the majority."

NOT TRUE REFLECTION

"Debate never ends" and the smaller parties possess power far beyond their representation. Such an assembly is not a true reflection of the desires of the people, said Mr. Sharp.

The oft-repeated question so far in the campaign is "Do you want an election?" Mr. Sharp pointed out.

The only time when anyone wants an election is when they want to throw a government out of office. So, I assume from that, we did reasonably well."

Yet, in the circumstances of minority government a responsibility to submit its record to the electorate when it is confident it can gain a majority.

Surely, he asked, a country does not want to live in the shadow of an election for month after month — for year after year."

This election was to allow Canadians to make up their minds whom they wish to represent them in government.

Mr. Sharp cast a critical eye at Conservative claims of new party unity under John Diefenbaker.

Mr. Diefenbaker, he charged, has made it "abundantly clear" that he wants to be P. M. Minister and every PC candidate "is committed to serving Mr. Diefenbaker's ambition."

He said there was talk Mr. Diefenbaker would step down in 1967.

"Well," added Mr. Sharp, "that's the business of the Conservative party and I've no comments to make on that one way or the other."

But, he claimed, the "Diefenbaker years" will go down as "years of frustrating" in Canada's history.

He admitted Mr. Diefenbaker's talents as chief opposition critic were "formidable" but the Conservative leader had shown himself unfit to govern ment and unable to govern.

"And there's no reason whatsoever to believe that situation has changed in any way whatsoever."

He viewing the new unity on the Conservative benches. He concluded "that if the Conservatives are united in their determination that Mr. Diefenbaker will not be permitted to destroy their party."

He added Canadians had a "marvelous opportunity" about the effect Mr. Diefenbaker would have on national unity and good government.

In its bid for a majority "the Liberal party can go to the people with a clear conscience and it can go forward knowing it has a record to be proud of."

Mr. Diefenbaker, he charged, has still failed to comprehend the province of Quebec. Despite the fact it gave him an historically overwhelming majority in 1958, that province became disillusioned with the Conservative leader.

It then turned away from Ottawa to its own provincial capital at Quebec City for representation.

"Now" said Mr. Sharp, "the situation has fundamental changed and the province is in large measure by Prime Minister Pearson's statesmanship."

Among the tasks now facing federal government was the rooting out of underprivilege and poverty and as much assistance as possible to education "without infringing on the rights of the provinces."

"Boss," smoke-signals Mushmouth, our man on Ewick's Island, from his seaweed wall-to-wall cavern, "I guess I flipped my flotsam the other day when I prognosticated the Dodgers to win this serious hassle in four straight."

"It musta been one of those typolographical errors as you newspaper guys say whenya wanta put the blame of mistakes on somebody else."

"I'll bet my last puncheon of eel juice that I read where the Dodgers would take the serious in four straight games. I'ts time I swore off clam cocktails when I can't tell the difference between the Dodgers and Twins in print."

"Regardless of what Kiddin' Thomas Griffin Hoskins says aboutya in his dawn patrol airings, I'm inclined to go along withya now in your crystal-ball prophesetic that the gang from the Minnesota buties will bring home the loot in six games."

Note: The Minnesota minions put their Kaat before the Dodgers' Koufax horse and what happened? The guy backrolled the Chaves charabane into the back alley of defeat for their second straight win that sent the boys in the backrooms wildly wallowing for their wallets and IBM computers to figure out the odds.

The Minnesota brass employed four high-priced scouts who spent many week and thousands of dollars to gather information on the Dodger hitters to aid the Twins mound staff.

After Mudcat Grant had one of his worse days sending the Dodgers and Drysdale to the cleaners in the opener, the scouts dumped what looked like the Dorion report in front of Kaat, scheduled to pitch the second fandango. They contacted him in a Minnesota restaurant with the terse order, "Read 'em but don't necessarily weep."

Kaat pushed the scout scripts aside, picked up the menu and ordered saurbrauten and hock. He didn't even glance at the figures that wrote history in the record archives.

He didn't even read 'em—and as events proved he didn't have to weep. "I didn't bother going over the report" he said. "I just pitched according to my strength."

"I figured I knew all I had to know about them so why become confused with a lot of detail. For example, I know their sluggers are a dangerous hitting team. I'm a low-ball pitcher. That's my strength. If I pitched high, I'd be going with my weakness."

"This way it was strength against strength, and I figured I had the edge because on a first time basis, it's the pitcher who has the advantage. Not the hitters.

"While I stuck mostly to my fast ball, I also threw sliders and a hard curve."

Kaat said the prospect of pitching against Koufax stimulated him and spurred him to greater effort.

"I tried not to think of Koufax," he said., "I tried to train all my concentration on the hitters. But watching him pitch I realized why he is the greatest pitcher in baseball. He impressed me a lot."

Kaat Klunks Koufax ★★★★★ ★★★★★ Osteen Next Victim?

Four Straight For Twins?

By JOE REICHLER

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Brimming with confidence after beating Los Angeles Dodgers fearsome pitching pair of Don Drysdale and Sandy Koufax, the victorious Minnesota Twins expressed confidence today they can add nemesis Claude Osteen to their list of victims when the World Series resumes here Saturday.

Halfway to the world championship after beating Koufax 5-1 at Minneapolis Thursday on top of their opening 8-2 defeat of Drysdale, the Twins were even dreaming of a four-game sweep.

"I'd love to sweep," said Twins' manager Sam Mele, "but they're a tough outfit, and your've got to play heads up all the time. I've been telling you guys we're pretty tough, too."

The Dodgers, who had gone into the series as 7½ to 5 favorites, now face an uphill struggle. Only the 1922 New York Giants, the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers, and the 1956 and 1958 New York Yankees had overcome a two-game deficit.

Perhaps the toughest assignment of the series goes to Camilo Pascual, the Twins' righthander who is slated to open in Los Angeles following today's off day for travel.

Not only will the American League champions be playing in the Dodgers' home park, but the Twins' control specialist, Angels there has been nothing to write home about.

DIDN'T HIT

Billy Martin, the Twins' third base coach, reminded that the Twins are a different team from the one Osteen beat so consistently.

"We used to rely almost solely on the home run," said Martin. "Now we depend upon speed and defence in addition to power."

The Twins beat Koufax without hitting a home run. The big blows were Tony Oliva's sixth inning double, which drove in the Twins' first run, a drove in run-scoring single by Harmon Killebrew and Zoilo Versalles' triple that led to a run in the seventh. Minnesota left-hander Jim Kaat helped his cause with a two-run, bases-loaded single in the eighth.

The 25-year-old Kaat turned in a superb job with a seven-hitter while the Dodgers defence collapsed with three errors. Jim Gilliam, the 36-year-old coach who returned to action at third base in May, opened the gates in the Twins' two-run sixth inning with a two base error.

OUTSHINES WILLS

For the second straight day Versalles outshone Maury Wills, his shortstop rival, both at bat and on the bases. Zoilo, the 155-pound Cuban, scored two runs and contributed a triple to the Twins' attack. He also danced down the third base line and speed home as he forced Ron Perranoski into a wild pitch in the seventh.

Oliva, the American League batting champ who had gone hitless in six trips, knocked in the first run of Koufax. He doubled to left in the sixth after Gilliam had let Versalles' shot bounce off his glove and go down the left field line for a costly error.

Until Gilliam opened the door with his misplay, Koufax and Kaat were locked in a shutout duel. Each had allowed only three hits and Sandy, who set a modern major league strikeout record of 382 in his regular season, had struck out eight in five innings.

Gilliam's error, Joe Nossek's sacrifice, the double by Oliva and Killebrew's single, the Twins were never headed. They had a chance to open the lead wider but Koufax struck out Bob Allison and made Don Mincher ground out to end the sixth.

With the score 2-1 and men on second and third, Dodger manager Walter Alston called on Drysdale, his top hitter with a .300 average, as a pinch hitter. Big Don went down swinging, missing three straight pitches by Kaat. Wills filed out, ending the threat.

HITS TRIPLE

Versalles hit his triple after two were out in the seventh. While Perranoski was pitching to Nossek, Zoilo broke down the baseline.

Ron barreled his pitch and bounced one into the dirt that Roseboro fielded but couldn't hold. Roseboro tried a desperate backhand toss to the plate but there was no play as Versalles scored. Perranoski was charged with a wild pitch.

The Twins broke it wide open in the eight. A walk to Killebrew, a double by Allison and an intentional walk to Earl. Quilici following a balk loaded the bases with two out. Kaat, a dangerous hitter all season, singled to centre, scoring two more runs that put the game beyond recall.

Kaat wavered momentarily in the ninth. After striking out Fairly, he allowed a single by Lefebvre and then hit Parker with a pitch. But he bore down and disposed of Roseboro for the second out.

It was a great climax for Kaat in his first series appearance. The final line: was his fifth pulout, a series record for a pitcher in a nine . inning game.

The big fielding play of the day was a diving catch by Alston on a balk hit by Lefebvre near the left field line in the fifth. Fairly, who had opened the fifth with a single, was on base and would have scored easily if Allison had not made his sensational sliding stab.

In addition to Gilliam's two errors, left fielder Lou Johnson handled Parker's single in the fourth for the third error. Gilliam threw wildly to first after taking Nossek's grounder in the seventh.

Commissioner Ford Frick ordered in two helicopters to blow the water off the outfield. Weed burners were used to dry out the soggy area in front of the dugouts. There was no batting practice.

It was raining when the game started under lights and it rained on and off through the day. The sun finally broke through at the final out.

Asked about Allison's catch, Mele said, "it had a great deal to do with our winning. It was a key play. I didn't think he had a chance to get it."

Alston said Koufax was not losing his stuff and he would not have taken him out for a pinch hitter in the seventh if Roseboro had not come through with a single. With a chance to tie or go ahead on a base hit, Alston sent up Drysdale to bat for Sandy.

Asked what he considered the turning point of the game, Alston smiled and said:

"When it stopped raining."

Pascual, who missed two weeks because of back trouble was an interested dugout spectator during the Twins' first two triumphs. Did he think he learned something while watching Jim Grant and Kaat tame the Dodgers hitters?

"The only way to learn is to go to the mound and do your own job," said the 31-year-old Cuban. "No two pitchers are alike. Grant pitches one way, Kaat another and neither pitches the way I do."

Koufax, a 26 - game winner during the regular season, didn't pitch badly. He permitted six hits in six innings, striking out nine.

"I didn't feel I had it," said the stylish southpaw. "If my control would have been good, I might have gotten away with it, but it wasn't."

Alston agreed with his ace.

"I've seen Sandy better," he said.

Alston added: "I'll be glad when we change ball parks. I know we'll have better weather and I hope we can score more runs."

HE'S OUT — Umpire Ed Sudol calls the out as Dodgers' Maury Wills puts tag on sliding Frank Quilici (11) of the Twins in third inning of second World Series game , Quilici had walked and was cut down in attempted steal on throw from Dodgers' catcher John Roseboro to Wills. (AP Wirephoto)

Defence Stands Out In Leafs' Win

Whip Hawks 6-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The unhappiest member of Chicago Black Hawks has to be Al MacNeil.

The black-haired defenceman from Sydney, N.S., was in hospital Thursday night recuperating from a back injury while his team-mates took a 6-1 shellacking from Toronto Maple Leafs in the first pre-season meeting between the two National Hockey League clubs.

And what made it worse was that five of the seven goals were scored by defencemen.

JOHNNY BOWER

MacNeil, with 15 goals in 341 games, doesn't normally stack up as a big scoring threat. But neither does Doug Jarrett, the man who replaced him in the game at Toronto. Jarrett, who has scored twice in his NHL career, was the only Hawk marksman of the night.

For the Leafs, Kent Douglas struggled on his chins to a spot on the strong Toronto rearguard with a three-goal performance and Carl Brewer, MacNeil's defence partner in their junior days, fired a fourth. The only Toronto forwards to hit the score sheet were captain George Armstrong and Larry Jeffrey.

The Leafs got sharp goaltending from Johnny Bower, who made 21 saves in blanking the Hawks over the first two periods, and rookie Gary Smith, who made 13 stops in the third.

The Leafs had fewer shots but made them count, beating Glenn Hall three times in nine tr'es in the opening period and getting three of 13 past Denis DeJordy for the rest of the way.

Montreal Canadiens, still barnstorming with their farm clubs through rural Quebec, whipped Houston Apollos of the Central Professional League 6-3 for their sixth consecutive exhibition victory at Matane.

FARM OUT FOUR

Four players, including rightwinger Wayne Rivers of last year's club, were farmed out by Boston Bruins. Rivers and defenceman Barry Ashbee went to Hershey Bears of the American League while goaltender Bernie Parent and defenceman Joe Watson were sent to Oklahoma City Blazers of the CPHL.

On hand for Boston's exhibition game against Detroit Red Wings tonight at London, Ont., will be George Swarbrick, a former star of the 1964 Canadian Olympic team and Western League Rookie-of-the-Year with San Francisco Seals last season.

The Bruins sent defenceman Bob Dupuis to the Seals in exchange for Swarbrick but general manager Hap Emms said the 26-year-old right winger was acquired on a loan basis and will be returned if he fails to make the club.

The Red Wings will face Boston without captain Alex Delvecchio, who is undergoing hospital tests of a troublesome allergy.

First Nine In 30

Palmer Shoots Dazzling Score

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Arnold Palmer faced Britain's most powerful Ryder Cup foursome pair today—and Arnie's Army was on the march again.

The 36-year-old star from Latrobe, Pa., set the cup matches ablaze with dazzling golf Thursday, when Britain and the United States battled to a 4 - 4 score in the two - ball foursomes.

Thousands stood on the hillocks that line the fairways of Royal Birkdale to watch Palmer and his partner, Dave Marr, play the first nine holes in an incredible five-under-par 30.

They finally defeated Dave Thomas and George Will 6 and 5 and were seven under par for the 18 holes.

Today Palmer and Marr were playing Christy O'Connor and Peter Alliss in the better-ball foursomes.

Thursday's victory was sweet revenge for Palmer and his partner. In the morning, with Marr nervous as a kitten, all Palmer's shot - making skill couldn't stop Thomas and Will, who won 6 and 5.

ARE PAIRED AGAIN

In the lunch interval the draw paired them against each other for the second series.

O'Connor and Allis had a lot to do with keeping Britain on even terms on the first day.

They racked up a 3 and 2 victory over Ken Venturi and Don Jansany in the morning. Then they edged Billy Casper and Gene Littler 2 and 1 in a seesawing thriller in the afternoon.

The fourth American victory was scored by Casper and Littler, who defeated Neil Coles and Bernard Hunt 5 and 4.

Hunt and Coles downed Venturi an January 3 and 2 in the afternoon match.

The tournament will reach its climax with singles duels Saturday.

Choked Off Rally

Allison Catch Win Factor

By LEW FERGUSON

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Bob Allison's diving, roll-over catch of a slicing fly ball in the fifth inning choked off a potential Los Angeles explosion and sent Minnesota Twins on their way to their second World Series victory Thursday, as Twins manager Sam Mele viewed it.

"I don't know when I've seen a catch like that," Mele said. "It was a tremendous catch. It could have meant something big for the Dodgers if the ball had dropped in there.

"It had a heck of a lot to do with our winning. They could have had a big rally going."

Allison said it had to be the greatest catch he ever made, "because it came in a World Series."

KILLEBREW COMMENTS

Harmond Killebrew, who had as good a view of the drive off Jim Ledebrew's bat as anybody in the third-base position, said, "I didn't think Bob had a chance in the world to catch it."

The catch came after Ron Fairly had led off the Dodger fifth with a single. Jim Parker beat out an infield hit after the catch, but Jim Kaat got out of the jam when Willie Davis struck two batters to foul out.

"I'd love to sweep," he said, "but they're a tough outfit, and you've got to play heads up all the time. I've been telling you guys we're pretty tough, too."

FELT NO PRESSURE

Winning pitcher Jim Kaat, who said he didn't look at the Twins' scouting reports on the Dodgers, considered he felt no pressure on him it opposing Sandy Koufax.

"Nobody expected me to beat Koufax, anyway," Kaat said. "I told myself he had to beat me between the foul lines. But when I saw him throw after an inning, I thought I'd better not give up a run."

Killebrew called Koufax "just as tough as I expected. It's definitely a big lift to beat h'm."

Zoilo Versalles was disappointed that he was not credited with a hit on his grounder to Jim Gilliam which triggered Minnesota's two - run sixth inning.

"I hit the ball hard," Zoilo said. "It had to be that the ball took a bad hop. I was surprised when I looked up at the scoreboard."

Wings Whip Hawks

Petes Dump Marlies 7-4

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Red Wings finished last in the Junior A Ontario Hockey Association last season but they served notice Thursday night that they don't intend to repeat.

The Wings defeated St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-4 in one of two games that got the regular schedule started. In the other, Peterborough Petes dumped Toronto Marlboros 7-4.

A hometown crowd saw the Red Wings jump into a 2-1 lead in the first period, but the Black Hawks tied the game with a goal early in the second before Hamilton clinched the verdict with four successive goals and a 6-2 lead going into the third.

TOP HAWKS

Tops for the Black Hawks were Bob Sicinski and Doug Skelton with a goal and assist each. Steve Latinovich and Jon Poplel also scored.

The Petes held a wide edge in play before a home crowd of 2,712 with holdovers Danny Grant and Mickey Redmond sparking the attack with two goals each.

Andre Lacroix, top scorer for the Petes last season, added a goal and three assists while John Vanderburg and Garry Monahan, also both back from last season, scored a goal apiece.

The Marlboros fell behind 2-1 after the first period and trailed 4 - 3 after the second. Toronto scorers were Doug Dunville, Terry Caffery, Cam Crosby and Tom Martin.

The Marlies picked up nine of 11 penalties. Among them was a 10-minute misconduct to Billy Plager of the Petes for swearing.

Mustangs Tangle With Blues

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

University of Western Ontario Mustangs and University of Toronto Blues, co-leaders in the Ontario - Quebec Intercollegiate Athletic Association football conference after one week of play, meet Saturday in the season's first crucial game at London, Ont.

Mustangs surprised defending champion Queen's Golden Gaels 33-30 at Kingston and Toronto was a decisive 29-8 winner over McGill University Redmen at home in last week-end's schedule openers.

In throttling Queen's, Westerns also snapped a five-year winless streak at Kingston and also stopped the Gaels' string of victories over league opponents at 12.

The Blues haven't beaten a UWO team in London since 1961 when they edged the Mustangs 6-3. The latest Western conquest was a 20-14 pre-season victory at home three weeks ago.

Queen's meanwhile, will have veteran quarterback Carl Cotnam back when they meet McGill in Montreal in the other game Saturday.

BOTH WORK OUT

Conner, a three-time all-star, and defensive captain Merv Green, an all-star at middle guard, missed the opener against Western with shoulder injuries. Both have been working out this week.

Tom Mooney, McGill's freshman head coach who has been plagued with a shortage of players, was disgusted with his team's offence in the Blues' game. After viewing game films he decided it was time to change quarterbacks.

Bookies Favor Twins

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The strong showing of Minnesota Twins, good enough for two World Series victories, is also good enough to make the team a World Series favorite.

Two bookmakers here make the Twins 5-to-13 and 5-to-4 favorites to defeat Los Angeles Dodgers.

But the same bookmakers are giving 5-to-7 for the Dodgers to win the third game Saturday, the first at Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles.

Sticks By Players

Bobby Hull Speaks His Mind

TORONTO (CP)—Bobby Hull, star forward with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, thinks NHL players should know what each other make.

But Hull, who is bickering with Chicago owner James Norris, doesn't like to let the public know what he makes.

Hull is reported seeking $100,000 this season, but so far hasn't come to terms.

He said he has talked to Norris and general manager Tommy Ivan just once and doesn't anticipate serious problems at getting together.

He added that money isn't the only consideration. He is going after fringe benefits which he won't discuss publicly but is willing to tell other players if they ask.

SOME ARE BETTER

"Some players are better at negotiating than others. If knowing what other players are being paid helps him, a player has the right to know," Hull said Thursday night before the Hawks dropped a 6-1 exhibition decision to Toronto Maple Leafs.

Bob Pulford, Toronto's player-representative, said Wednesday that club owners know all players' salaries and the players should be given the same information to make things equal. Hull agrees.

"The players all grumble about their salaries, but they won't stick together to do something about it," Hull said. "Some of them are afraid to be holdouts in case they're sent to the minors. They tell me I don't have to worry about this and maybe I don't understand. But they won't be sent to the minors — not if they stick together."

Shuffled Argos Meet Stamps Tonight

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Argonauts, all but out of the running for an Eastern Football Conference playoff berth, weren't certain just who they'll have in the lineup when they meet Calgary Stampeders in an interlocking game in Toronto tonight.

The game is the only one in the East until Monday afternoon when the Stampeders move to Montreal to battle the Alouettes while Ottawa Rough Riders are at Hamilton against the Tiger-Cats in a battle for first place in the East.

The Argos have only one win in 10 outings and are six points behind third-place Montreal.

"We haven't beaten them down east yet," he said Wednesday as his team prepared for its two-game jaunt.

Stamps Favored

The odds are overwhelmingly in favor of a Stampeder victory tonight, however.

The Stamps are first in the Western Football Conference with an 8-3 mark and share honors as the Canadian Football League's most prolific scoring team with British Columbia Lions at 302 points a game.

Toronto coach Bob Shaw must first determine what players he'll use against the Stamps. He hopes to have defensive back Grant McKee for the game after claiming him on waivers from Edmonton Eskimos of the WFC. But the Eaks have the option to call him and Shaw won't know until today if McKee will be available.

Shaw knows he won't have defensive backs Marv Luster and John Nydarzsny, sidelined by injuries for the season, but Dick Shatto is reported to have made a fast recovery from a shoulder injury and is favored against Montreal last Sunday and may be in Toronto's offensive backfield.

The game, which begins at 8 p.m. EDT, will be carried on the CTV network.

ARE INJURY-FREE

The Alouettes are free of injuries for their encounter against the Stamps Monday and coach Jim Trimble has an explanation.

The Als have ditched calisthenics, except for brief limbering up drills, in favor of isometrics, a type of exercise based on muscle tension and designed to increase strength.

Trimble has still been carrying on a wholesale buzzing in preparation for Monday's game, beginning at 2 p.m. EDT. Don Jonas was recently released by the Stamps, will start at defensive end and Joe Williams is being shifted from that position to offensive end to provide more blocking strength. Don Davis is moving from end to fullback.

The Ticats must overcome a batch of injuries if they expect to win over Ottawa and move into undisputed possession of first place. Each team has won four in their two meetings to date.

BAKER IS OUT

Fullback Art-Baker is out of the game, beginning at 2 p.m. EDT, with a broken bone in his left leg. Linebacker Herb Paterra is also on the sidelines and general manager Jake Gaudaur has been busy all week enlisting former Ticats out of retirement. Back to help the team will be linebacker Bobby Kuntz.

Hal Patterson, who also retired after last season is scheduled to rejoin the Ticats. It is not known if he will play Monday.

Mel Anthony, who was rejected after a brief trial last week and was called back to fill in, has signed and is expected to handle Baker's job at fullback.

Russian Jump Star Injured

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet doctors said Thursday they will not know for three days if Valery Brumel, world record holder in the high jump, will be able to compete again following a double fracture of his right knee in a motorcycle accident Wednesday.

The 28-year-old student, winner of the Gold Medal in his event at the Tokyo Olympics, suffered the injury when the motorcycle on which he was riding borne with a friend skidded. Brumel fell to the street and the machine fell on him.

He set the world mark of 7 feet, 5¾ inches in Moscow in July, 1963.

FORECASTS DEATH TOLL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Highway Safety Council said Thursday the number of traffic deaths over the Thanksgiving Day weekend might well swell to 57. The council said in a statement relatively warm weather will draw more drivers to the highways. However, it warned that rain forecast for most parts of the country could cause skidding.

The Trots

The diminutive Collingwood horseman, suspended for a year by the Ontario Racing commission for an alleged racing infraction, guided Sugar Hill Hanover to victory in the fifth for a payoff of $3.30.

BATAVIA, N.Y. (CP)—Jerry Direct C., owned by the Mac West Stable of Orono, Ont. rallied in the stretch to win the featured pace at Batavia Downs Thursday night.

They head a field of eight for the $65,000 Futurity.

Noble Victory, winner of more than $600,000 in richest of the three. His victories include the Yonkers Futurity, first leg in the triple.

Egyptian Candor has banked $162,000 as the trio's poorest, but part of the lot came in an upset victory in the Hambletonian, the second event.

Armbro Flight, with earnings of more than $241,000 won one heat of the Hambletonian and was beaten by Egyptian Candor by a head in a fourth heat race off after a dirt down the stretch.

SHIP TRIALS START

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) — Builders of the Australian guided-missile destroyer Hobart began the ship's sea trials Thursday on Lake Huron. The Hobart, second of three sister ships the Defoe Shipbuilding Co. is building for the Royal Australian Navy, is to be commissioned in December. The Perth was completed earlier and the Brisbane is to be ready early next year.

Dodgers Down But Not Out

Didn't Have Control-Koufax

By BOB MYERS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — All was not catastrophic in the Los Angeles Dodger dressing room Thursday despite their second straight loss to Minnesota Twins in the World Series.

Relief pitcher Ron Perranoski was asked by a friend in jest: :

"What was the turning point in the game?"

"When it stopped raining," he answered. Manager Walter Alston, retaining his good humor following Dodgers' 5 - 1 loss, echoed the comment.

"I'll be glad when we change ball parks," said Maury Wills. He emphasized he had no complaints about the Twins' Metropolitan Stadium.

"No, the weather, the mound, the park had nothing to do with it," said the Dodgers' star lefthander, Sandy Koufax. "I just didn't have the control I needed against this team."

Alston said he'd be glad to get back to Los Angeles, too, when the series resumes Saturday.

WANTS MORE RUNS

"I know we'll have better weather, and I hope we can score more runs," he said.

He recalled that in 1955 the then Brooklyn Dodgers fell two games behind and came back to win the series, and in 1956 they were two games in front and lost.

Koufax was wild with his high breaking stuff, Alston said. Koufax agreed.

Alston explained why he had Wes Parker sacrifice in the seventh with two runners on base and none out.

"With our kind of power we try at a point like that for a tie and hope to get the winning run later," Alston said.

Wills was on his own after he led off the sixth with a single and was on his way to steal second when Jim Gilliam grounded out, Alston went on.

It was the only chance to give the fans what they were yelling for a display of his base-running talent.

The million-dollar grapes

In 1934 Brights began to import young vines of the finest wine grapes grown in the world. You see six of the results here. These are admirably, among the finest wines ever produced in Canada. If you insist on an imported label, you've wasted your time reading this far. If you ignore the label and judge the wine, waste no more time reading. Try these wines, soon. We envy you your first thrill of discovery.

President Champagne Canada's prize champagne. For any dinner, all gala occasions, especially weddings and anniversaries.

President Extra Dry A dry delicate wine that inspires encomiums from all who try it. With fish, white meat, salads.

Brights FINE CANADIAN Wines SINCE 1874

Robert Brights

What could be more delightful, more acceptable than two or three of these famous wines, or a complete President Wine Cellar?

One thing about your daily newspaper:

you can learn so much from it

Like how to bake a Chocolate Dream cake. What they're wearing in Paris this year. And who little Betsy Fricher married. That's what your daily newspaper is for. News. News of national and international affairs. Local news. Financial news. Fashion news. News about sports. Plus helpful hints on sewing, cooking, gardening, woodworking, and a host of other things. Yes, there's something in every paper for everyone.

Including ads. Yes, advertising is news. Good news. Browsing through your daily paper, you get the news you want about the products and services you're interested in. From ads. You can compare quality, consider features and prices; and often make decisions that save hours of shopping time.

In fact, that's how most people use their daily newspaper: as a shopping guide (83% of all Canadians according to a survey validated by the Canadian Advertising Research Foundation). They find newspaper ads more reliable (41%) and less irritating (92%) than other advertising.

When so many people depend so heavily on daily newspaper advertising, the advertisers are apt to notice results. In sales. They do. Which is why they run ads. And why you can keep so well informed about their products and services.

Pine Point Mining Settlement Arctic Frontier Shangri-La

By BOB TRIMBEE

PINE POINT, N.W.T. (CP)—Compared with most northern communities this tiny mining settlement is a frontier Shangri-La.

From the air it appears as if a suburb has been plucked from a southern Canadian city and dropped on a clearing.

It has all the amenities of southern life save shopping centres, liquor outlets and television. It not only bubbles with frontier exhilaration and pioneer neighborliness, but also the giddiness of being part of a success-ful venture.

Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. of Canada Ltd. has poured more than $22,000,000 into developing a modern town site, a lead-zinc concentrator and attendant service buildings, and several ore bodies which hold fantastically high - grade lead-zinc ore.

The advance guard of key personnel and workers who will run the operation has already arrived. The remainder will take over accommodation vacated by construction workers in time for the planned start of concentrator operations in November.

A permanent population of about 600 is expected and some territorial officials, who are keeping close tabs on Pine Point's development to ensure standards are maintained, even talk about an eventual population of more than 1,500.

STARTED NEWSPAPER

"We've really enjoyed it here, all of us, including my wife and children," says Ed Mark, safety officer for Kootenay Engineering Ltd., a Cominco subsidiary which supervised construction.

"But when the dogs get to know you it's time to go," he adds in mock humor while preparing to move out his family.

Tom Laing, another Kootenay employee and a former newspaper man who has helped to develop a twice-monthly publication called The Pine Pointer, says life at Pine Point has just about everything anyone could want.

"You get to know everyone and it's surprising how many old friends meet again. A couple of buddies who served in the Royal Navy in the last war and hadn't seen each other since the hectic attack on Malta ran into each other here.

"It was a heck of a scene because both believed the other had been killed in later action."

Cominco has built 53 modern homes, all with three bedrooms and a full basement. These are rented to permanent staff and key personnel. The company also provides top soil for any family wishing to plant a lawn or a vegetable garden, both of whichdo well in the long, warm summer days.

CURLING RINK BUILT

Frank Morrison, 45, chief clerk for Pine Point Mines Ltd., which will operate the mine and concentrator for Cominco, says:

"The one thing about life here is that families have a real chance to get closer to each other. There are few distractions such as TV."

Four times a week a large dining hall in the cookhouse is used as a theatre. A curling rink was built a year ago and recreation rooms are located above the kitchen.

Behind the cookhouse a softball diamond has been built, the surface made of packed gravel.

Cpl. Jim Armstrong of the RCMP, a Dauphin, Man., native who has served several years in the north and is a prime softball supporter, says, "Not too many guys go sliding around the bases but you'd be surprised at the number of good players in town."

"Police life here is really not difficult. We don't get too many transients because there is no place for them to live. Just having a policeman here is good enough, though sometimes when men return to camp after a weekend they get a bit boisterous."

FREE EDUCATION

A new four-room school for grades 1 to 8 is ready. The territorial government sends all other students to hostels at either Fort Simpson or Yellowknife and pays the entire cost.

Dr. E. L. Covert of Hay River, one of four private practitioners in the territory, makes a weekly trip to Pine Point to look after medical needs both at the mill site and in town.

If patients must be flown out for additional treatment the territorial government will pay all costs beyond $60, he says. "Between the help the government gives for both education and medicine a lot of the sting is taken out of costs for such service."

Mrs. Bud Beckett, who leaves this fall with her husband, adds that food costs are higher but on several occasions families have pooled grocery money and purchased supplies in large shipments.

The town is connected by road, rail and air with the outside world. Good fishing is available, but hunting is limited.

If there is one common complaint among householders it's the cost of electricity, now generated by a diesel plant. In winter it is not uncommon to pay $30 a month for power. This

Stelco Will Build Huge Blast Furnace

HAMILTON (CP)—The Steel Company of Canada Thursday announced plans to build one of North America's biggest blast furnaces in Hamilton.

A spokesman said the new furnace, to be completed in 1967 at the Hilton works, will boost Stelco's capacity for pig iron production by more than 1,000 per cent.

The furnace is part of a $106,000,000 expansion program approved by the Stelco board of directors last April.

It will be the fifth, "and by far the biggest" blast furnace at the company's basic steel plant.

A contract for the design, engineering and installation of the furnace has been awarded to the Arthur G. McKee Co. of Canada Ltd., Toronto.

Heifer Trapped In Empty Silo For Four Days

But this 750-pound heifer jumped into an empty silo—only to be trapped there for four days.

The animal had climbed to a window three feet above the level of the barn floor at the farm of Donald Durst of nearby Sentinelville, Ont., squeezed through the 20-by 24-inch opening, then dropped to the floor about five feet below the window.

There seemed no way out, short of tearing down the silo. However, the Dursts blew in corn silage, raising the level of the cow and giving her a chin.

A rope was attached to its horns, its front legs shoved through the window, and as several persons pulled, the heifer gradually squeezed through the opening.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate

"What's Your Problem ?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

The impression is common that because the yield on real estate is comparatively high there is a high risk. This viewpoint often is supported by economists and financial experts. This worried reader asks about real estate investments.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I have been buying real estate and getting yields of 7 per cent to 12 percent. I switched because I was unhappy with the 7 per cent to 4½ percent return on my stocks and bonds.

My stock broker tells me that I am making a poor choice because real estate is much more risky. His logic is that high yield correlates with high risk. Now I am worried! As an unbiased expert, would you enlighten me? — "Investor"

ANSWER: Your broker may know general economics and the stock market, but apparently his knowledge stops at this point. Generally, it is true that high yields and risks correlate but the relationship between the two varies in different fields.

A 7 percent yield in real estate represents a gilt-edge property; a stock yielding 7 percent is associated with a highly speculative situation. A property yielding about 20 percent or more would be in the same investment category.

Measuring risk in terms of price fluctuations shows that real estate is much more stable. In the last great depression, the Dow-Jones Industrial averages declined from 381 to 41 — an 89 percent decline — while from 185 to 13 — a 93 percent decline; and even utilities, supposed to be a stable group, declined from 145 to 17 — an 88 percent decline.

Comparatively, real estate was much more stable. According to best available information the comparable decline was about 60 percent. It is true that a large number of people who borrowed to buy real estate (mortgages) lost their property, but people who borrowed to buy stock (margin) were usually completely wiped out.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I don't know if I or some non-existent person owns my house. I need your judgment to set my mind at ease. My deed name is not on the deed.

My name is Tom, as was my father's, when we bought the house my wife told the broker my name was Thomas and that's the name on the deed. She thinks that Thomass is more dignified and less common than Tom or Thomas. — "Just Tom"

ANSWER: The way your wife embellishes names you are fortunate that your given name is not Jack.

A name is on a deed for identification purposes. Your wife's enrichment of your first name should cause you no sleepless nights. Your attorney could easily rectify this bit of social climbing on your wife's part or you can let it go until you sell the property and he will get an affidavit from the broker attesting to the fact that Thomass and Tom are the same person.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Do I have to pay a realtor a commission just because he visited my home?

I placed a large sign on my lawn "House For Sale — Inquire Within." Across the street another house for sale, listed with a local real estate broker.

One day the realtor was conducting a prospect through the house he had for sale. The prospect was dissatisfied but expressed interest in my home. He knocked on the door, introduced himself, and said if I were interested in having his client look through the house.

The prospect liked the property, made an offer and his attorney prepared the agreement of sale. The broker now claims a commission. I was selling the house myself and sold for the signs and advertising. Since we both respect your judgment we have agreed to abide by your opinion. — "Individualist"

ANSWER: The broker did more than visit your house—he produced a buyer ready, willing and able to purchase.

In accordance with real estate practice, the broker has earned his commission at this point although in the actual sale the broker supplies considerable additional services. It is this aspect that is probably confusing you for you are comparing the services of this broker with that supplied at other situations of which you have knowledge.

If you had said you were not interested in having the broker take his prospect through the property, you would not now be obligated to pay a commission — but, in justification, there also would have been no sale.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My floors are lumpy in spots from untold coats of varnish, worn to the bare wood in other places from heavy traffic, and nicked in countless places by three spirited children using their toys as dive bombers.

My husband has agreed to refinish the floors if I'll tell him how. — "Aiming"

ANSWER: I may get in trouble with your husband and with thousands of other procrastinators, but the following method, although somewhat laborious, will give a finish equal or superior to new floors.

When floors are badly worn it is best to prepare the surface by thorough sanding. Machines can be rented on a daily basis. Start with coarse paper and finish with fine paper. Be sure to sand with the grain of the wood.

For best results, two coats of wood stain should then follow. It should be applied with the grain, wiped at once and let dry for at least 24 hours. The next step is to apply filler, followed by varnish or shellac and the final coat should be wax.

AT THE PARK — From the grave, the skull of Marquis de Sade is stolen in Paramount's newest shocker, "The Skull," in Technicolor and Technicope opening Monday at the Park Theatre. Starring Peter Cushing and Jill Bennett, "The Skull" deals with those individuals who buy and sell it, and resultingly become engulfed in evil and violent power. On the same program in color — action and thrills, "Black Spurs" starring Rory Calhoun. Both color hits are first showings. Special Matinee Monday at 2.00 p.m.

Three Established Stars Give Sparkling Program

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The variety show, like the western and the situation comedy, is a standard form of television entertainment. It invariably contains a certain quantity of song, a couple of production numbers by the dancers, two or more sketches and usually a monologue.

The entertainment value built into this readily familiar format which is on network display virtually every night depends entirely upon the quality of the ingredients. Thus, the use in almost equal parts of three engaging, talented fellows ensured the success of Thursday night's CBS program with the forthright title of The Andy Griffith-Don Knotts — Jim Nabors Special.

Griffith sparkled in a number of his easy-going stories that wind up with a little moral lesson. His version of Julius Caesar's unhappy demise was a small classic in his repertoire. O'Brian will be used.

Knotts had a funny monologue about two bickering astronauts bored be being too long in each other's company.

But the bright star of the hour was Jim Nabors, who got away from his usual Gomer Pyle role long enough to sing some popular songs in his rich voice and even to do some thoroughly acceptable dancing.

The trio worked as nicely together that there must be room for more. Nabors particularly should be seen more often out of uniform.

ABC's Shindig, the rock 'n' roll show that was one of last season's successes, does not seem to be doing so well since it was sliced in two and spotted on Thursday and Saturday night. In an obvious effort to repair the show's ratings a new policy of "Guest hosts"—after the manner of NBC's Hullabaloo—has been instituted. Sara Like Mickey Rooney and Hugh

David Cornwall Falls Into Riches With Two Novels

By BOB THOMAS

That is not his name, of course. He uses the pseudonym on his books, which include last year's sensational best - seller The Spy Who Came in from the Cold and the current The Looking-Glass War.

His real name is David Cornwall; he is 34, sandy-haired and well-spoken, a former civil servant in the British foreign service. His literary skills and the convincing detail of his novels of intrigue have convinced some of the more literal-minded that he is a spy.

A television interviewer so accosted him during his visit here. Cornwall's reply: "If I wrote a book about prostitutes, it wouldn't necessarily follow that I ran a brothel."

IS ON TOUR

The author is subjected to such badinage during a three-week U.S. tour to promote his new book and, incidentally, the film of The Spy Who Came in from the Cold. The trip is a part of his few concessions to the immense success that threatened to overwhelm his life and career during the last year.

Two years ago he was a foreign service employee in Hamburg earning about $6,000 a year. Today he is an international celebrity, incorporated and capable of amassing huge sums (paper rights to Looking-Glass drew $400,000).

"As far as the money aspect is concerned, I set up the machinery to take care of it—and now I live in ignorance of what goes on," Cornwell explained.

Needless to say, his financial affairs are better managed than when he was a newcomer to the field of bigtime literary properties. The Spy was sold to Paramount for $35,000.

That seemed like a fortune at the time, since it amounted to 3½ times his annual salary. But the sum proved less appropriate when he learned that Richard Burton was to receive $750,000 plus 10 per cent of the gross for enacting Cornwell's tale.

Cornwell discounts the loss of privacy as a danger to a successful author; he finds he can move with freedom in London, and he maintains the same circle of friends. But he admitted that his standard of living has changed and as a novelist he no longer observes "the minute, mess of human companionship an inconvenience, such as a bus ride."

AT THE PARK — Carroll Baker adds a new kind of role to her list of successes in "Cheyenne Autumn," new John Ford epic opening Wednesday at the Park Theatre. In Technicolor and Ultrascope, also starring Richard Widmark, James Stewart, Arthur Kennedy and Sal Mineo, Delores Del Rio, Gilbert Roland and Dolores Del Rio.

Pastor's Appeal Restored to Hearings List

TORONTO (CP)—The appeal of Russell D. Horsburgh, a former United Church of Canada minister, against his conviction for contributing to juvenile delinquency has been restored to the Ontario Court of Appeal's hearings list.

The appeal was postponed last month at the request of the attorney - general's department.

The department said Thursday its investigation into reports that witnesses at the trial of the former Chatham minister had changed their testimony are complete.

Horsburgh, 54, lodged an appeal against a one-year jail sentence which was to have been heard Sept.21.

Provincial police last month interviewed 30 persons after Horsburgh's lawyer produced affidavits made by two witnesses since the trial.

Attorney - General Arthur Wishart rifled Thursday in dilvulge results of the investigation while the appeal is pending and said he doesn't know whether his department will put them before the appeal court.

Diefenbaker Campaigns In West

By STEWART MacLEOD

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Liberals must be pitchforked out of office Nov. 8 in the interest of preserving Confederation and guaranteeing honesty in government, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker said Thursday night.

Opening his western campaign, and after chewing lustily over the Rivard affair and bankruptcy racketeering revelations in Quebec, Mr. Diefenbaker said:

"We were in office for more than six years and not once did the scourge of dishonesty strike at our vitals."

On the other hand, he said, he wouldn't be surprised if Prime Minister Pearson came along one of these days with a new slogan for the Liberal party:

"Throw the rascals in."

GALLERYITES HECKLE

A college-age corps of hecklers provided the noise of opposition from the upper galleries of the Winnipeg Auditorium.

The 5,000-seat auditorium was filled and its lower bowl was packed with standing listeners. An 800-seat adjoining auditorium was closed off.

The heckling was the heaviest Mr. Diefenbaker has run into so far in the campaign.

One gallery jibe came when Mr. Diefenbaker was praising Manitoba Premier Duff Roblin who has declined, for this campaign at least, to enter the federal field.

Mr. Diefenbaker noted that a "true premier of Liberal" has spoken on various platforms together . . .

"But you couldn't convince him," said someone with a megaphone.

Mr. Diefenbaker, ignoring some of the interruptions, got his own sallies in when he replied to the barbs.

On national unity, the time had come for action that would "preserve and restore" the confederation for the next 100 years. Canada, under the Liberals, was a country where no province had been set against province, race against race.

On the major issue, Mr. Diefenbaker said, there was a mess that could only be cleaned up by a change of government. The "cohorts of the Mafia" would disappear under Conservative administration.

"Can you imagine what it would happen if the Pearson government was returned?" Mr. Diefenbaker asked. "It would simply be the greatest cover-up in history."

Family Farm Discussed by Prime Minister

DAUPHIN, Man. (AP) — Prime Minister Pearson went to the people of rural Manitoba Thursday, bringing a message of "moral . . . enduring values" in public and private life and security of the family farm.

His campaign for the Nov. 8 federal election took him on an automobile tour of small centres south of Winnipeg where he met children in droves and addressed a luncheon meeting in Winkler.

Later he flew to this northwestern Manitoba town for an evening rally.

The Liberal party's farm-policy goal, he told them, "is that the family farm should produce a living as good as the average industrial wage, which is at present $4,200 a year."

He said steps have had increased by 174,000,000 bushels a year since his government's election in 1963 and the support price was $2 a bushel compared with $1.75. He accused the Conservative leader of making a "false statement" that the Liberals had opposed what sales to Communist countries.

Canadian unity, he said, remained the No. 1 problem and Canadians "must build one country as Canadians, united as Canadians."

At the luncheon gathering in the Winkler school hall, he spoke about honesty in government.

"We ought to be just as concerned with things that are enduring—the moral basis of our society. Stand for values that mean something, stand for integrity and honesty in everything we do in public and private life.

"And believe me, I feel just as strongly about that in political life as I would if were in private life. . . .

"I know you appreciate the importance of moral values, and enduring values as the basis of our society. And we stand for that too."

Mr. Pearson spent most of the morning among children, first at St. Norbert south of Winnipeg where he spoke briefly at Riviera-Seine school and later in roadside gatherings at Ste. Agathe and St. Jean.

Hospital, Two Doctors Named In Damage Suit

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A Windsor hospital and two doctors have been named in a suit issued here alleging negligence in the death of a woman May 13, 1965.

Hotel Dieu Hospital and Drs. Morris Asa and Vernon R. Mercer were named "for damages" in the death of Jane Eileen Daniels, 22, wife of Norbert Daniels. The writ has been filed at Essex County courthouse here on behalf of the dead woman's husband, Loki Leo Daneliuk.

Mrs. Daneluik died about 12 hours after a kidney operation. Pathologist Dr. Ian Horne told an inquest in June that the woman died of a perforated ulcer possibly caused by an overdose of heroin, used to prevent blood clotting.

At the inquest, it was stated that Mrs. Daneluik might have been given a dosage of heparin greater than was actually required by her condition.

Sunday School Lesson

Budget Time and Talent

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

A modern writer makes the interesting comment that a Christian pastor should be more of a Casey Stengel than a Mickey Mantle. That is, he should know how to build and manage a team of workers rather than try to be a great star himself.

Moses was a great star. Perhaps no one greater walks through the pages of the Old Testament. He was a great champion of freedom. He was a man of unshakable faith and unbelievable courage. He had no equal as a law-giver. Without him, the descendents of Israel may never have been led to freedom from their bondage in Egypt.

But even Moses had to learn some things about governing people. He tended to do too much himself. He had to learn to delegate responsibility so he would not fritter away his own valuable time in dealing with matters that could just as well be handled by other people. He had to be needed. He learn about practical administration. he learned from his own father-in-law, Jethro, a Midianite priest.

The Uniform Sunday
School lesson for October 10: "Jethro", Exodus 2:16; 22; 4:18-20; 18.

Jethro was a man of large spirit. He viewed Moses as a man of another nationality and religion, into his own family. There seems to have been a genuine affection between the two men. (Exodus 18:7) When Jethro first called upon Moses he gave a blow for his people's freedom, Jethro sent him off with his blessing. (Exodus 4:18) During those critical days when Moses was confronting Pharaoh with the demand for the liberation of his people, Jethro gave shelter to his family. When the battle for freedom was won, Jethro himself brought Moses' family back to him.

Impressed by the providential nature of their escape from Egypt, Jethro accepted faith in Israel's God, and offered a sacrifice to him. (Exodus 18:11-12). Noticing that Moses had no time for himself and his family, Jethro counselled with him, and suggested a plan that would free Moses to deal with matters that only he, as the spiritual leader of the people, could handle, and would set up a system whereby others could be developed as leaders, and as helpers to carry the burden of responsibility with him.

BUDGET TIME, TALENT

People need to learn to be good stewards of their time and talents as well as their treasure. The church has a right to say about the stewardship of money. It needs to say more about the stewardship of time and talents. For it is just as important that these be budgeted and spent wisely as it is that people should learn how to handle money.

Many a person gives so much of his time to his work, he has no time left to read, or think, or pray, or be with his family. He needs a Jethro around to help him budget his time so he will get what ought to have prior claim on his time and talents, and what he needs to delegate to others, and one can do every thing. If he tries it, he will wear himself out. If he is a leader, he must challenge others to share the load with him, so he may give attention to those things that merit top priority on his schedule.

NOT ONE-MAN SHOW

But Jethro's insight went deeper than that. He not only saw that Moses' attempt to do everything would wear him out,

Bladen Report Is Criticized By MacDonald

CLINTON, Ont. (CP)—Donald C. MacDonald, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party Thursday night criticized the Bladen report, which he said proposed less than half as much federal government assistance to build universities as it does to build technical schools.

"It is not enough," said MacDonald, a former school teacher.

But, he added: "Finally we have a statement on university needs which, it is hoped, will shock the government and Ottawa into action that should have been taken years ago."

MacDonald was addressing an NDP nominating convention which selected J. Carl Hemingway, 35-year-old Brussels area farmer, to contest the Huron riding in the Nov. 8 general election. The seat was held in the last Parliament by Conservative L. F. Cardiff who recently resigned.

The Bladen report released Wednesday was prepared by a four-man commission, headed by Dean Vincent Bladen of the University of Toronto, and studied the financing of higher education in Canada for the next 10 years.

Robarts Negotiations Fall Apart

Robarts Demands Voice In Federal Govt. Moves If Provinces Affected

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario no longer will accept federal policy decisions affecting the provinces without prior consultation Premier Robarts said Friday.

In a major speech to Ontario Quebec newspaper editors, he delivered what was perhaps his strongest statement on Ontario's place in Confederation since he became head of the provincial govern ment four years ago.

His 3,500-word address fulfilled a promise he made in the presence of Premier Lesage of Quebec Thursday to delineate more clearly Ontario's position in Confederation.

VIEWS OUTLINED

Mr. Robarts made these points:

—Ontarioans are Canadians first, who recognize that Canadians in provinces other than their own;

—The Ontario govern ment believes the future of Confederation rests in the reconciliation of the various points of view;

—Ontario, like Quebec, desires constitutional changes;

—Ontario, with one-third of Canada's population contributing to Ottawa almost 50 per cent of its direct taxes, cannot take position that would endanger Confederation;

—Ontario recognizes the federal government must maintain control over the national economy, but seeks a greater share of national revenue;

—The Ontario government no longer will accept federal policy decisions affecting the provinces without prior consultation;

—Ontario does not believe the government of Quebec in any way represents the interests of French-speaking residents of other provinces.

The main challenges to confederation, Mr. Robarts said, are:

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec Premier Lesage said Friday he is "happy" that Ontario Premier Robarts recognizes the existence of Canada's two main cultural groups.

Mr. Lesage was commenting on Mr. Robarts 3,500-word address to an Ontario - Quebec newspaper seminar in Toronto Friday in which the Ontario premier undertook to define his province's position in confederation.

The Quebec premier took no issue with Mr. Robarts' statements, not even with the assertion that Ontario does not believe the government of Quebec in any way represents the interests of French-speaking residents of other provinces.

"It shouldn't be thought that Quebec wants to consider the French minorities of the other provinces as colonies," Mr. Lesage said.

TO CONVENE CONFERENCE ON CRIME — Justice Minister Cardin announces that provincial attorneys-general will meet in Ottawa Dec. 2-3 to discuss all aspects of crime in Canada. Mr. Cardin, speaking at a press conference in Ottawa, estimated some 25-30 officials will attend the crime conference and said that heads of police associations will likely be invited.

Violence, Economic Ruin Seen

LONDON (CP)—Fears of racial violence and economic ruin in Rhodesia mounted today after negotiations on the future of the white-ruled British colony collapsed.

The conference between Prime Minister Ian Smith, of Rhodesia and Prime Minister Wilson broke down Friday as Smith insisted that Rhodesia become independent without further delay.

Wilson demanded that independence be held off until the white minority takes steps to ensure eventual rule by the colony's 3,000,000 black African majority.

"There is no alternative," he said in a broadcast beamed to Rhodesia.

But some observers said he might avoid any immediate unilateral declaration of independence until he returns to Rhodesia and consults his cabinet.

An authoritative source said Wilson told Smith bluntly that if he declared unilateral independence, he would be responsible for ending Africa aid.

FEEL LOST

If Rhodesia breaks away, its Prime Ministers are expected to react violently, feeling they have lost their last hope of ever attaining majority rule. Observers also fear a violent reaction against whites elsewhere in Africa.

There has been talk in the UN of organizing a Coup-type international force aimed at installing a new regime in Rhodesia and British sources said the government has made it clear to Smith it will not oppose UN action connected with Rhodesia.

Wilson also warned Smith that Britain and other Commonwealth nations plan diplomatic and economic sanctions to isolate Rhodesia if it breaks away.

In Salisbury, the capital of Rhodesia, whites expressed disappointment but little surprise when they learned of the breakdown of talks in London.

Many felt Rhodesia will seize independence in a month, while others said the move might not come for three or four months.

The immediate reaction of the negro majority was not known, but it's an open secret that most informed Africans expect trouble.

Observers said Africans ap-

France Will Stay In NATO

By BORIS MISKEW

NEW YORK (CP) — The United States and French delegations to the NATO parliamentarians' conference remained divided today on the question of the sharing of NATO authority but the French delegates expressed confidence that France has no intention of pulling out of the Atlantic Alliance.

The week-long conference of NATO parliamentarians from the 15-member nations wound up Friday after a major debate on the French attempt to have the alliance set-up reformed so that responsibilities could be shared more equally.

The debate on a French-prepared political committee report—which the committee itself rejected but allowed it to come up before the plenary session—took up most of Friday's sitting.

The main question was whether the alliance should be set up as a two-pillar organization, one made up of Western Europe and the other of Canada and the United States, with the two bodies working together in the defence of the Atlantic community.

Wayne L. Hays (Dem. Ohio), head of the U.S. House of Representatives delegation to the conference, said a two-pillar NATO structure would be no better than the situation which existed in the first second world wars when lack of communication was a big problem among the British, French and American commands.

Wagner Says Police Close In On Bankruptcy Fraud Chiefs

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Claude Wagner says authorities are hot on the trail of the ringleaders of a huge fraudulent bankruptcy and assignation that has cost the province $1,500,000 a year in taxes since 1959 and is blamed for the violent deaths of at least seven persons.

At a press conference Friday, the justice minister said steps have been taken to prevent several panicky leaders of the Montreal underworld from skipping the country.

Police were on their trail and "it is only a question of time before we reach the leaders."

Mr. Wagner said more than four persons — he declined to give an exact number—are being held as important witnesses, and a number of persons have asked for and received police protection for connection with the investigation.

Of the seven persons known to have been murdered to prevent them testifying about the operations of the ring, four have been recovered and three were being sought. The bodies of the victims had been covered in quicklime, in an attempt to make identification more difficult.

Just how much the hundreds of fraudulent bankruptcies in Quebec have cost investors over the last five years has not been estimated officially.

The most recent indication was a report released by Revenue Minister Eric Kierans in August which said the province was losing as much as $1,500,000 a year in tax revenue

Cardin Doubts Another Probe Would Help

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Cardin said Friday he doubtsd a judicial inquiry into the whole bankruptcy-and-bodies affair in Quebec would do any good.

"Any further inquiry would simply confuse the issues considerably," he told reporters at a press conference in his Parliament Hill office.

He said he did not know whether a demand by NDP leader T.C. Douglas for such an inquiry "had any merit, at all." Mr. Douglas said a Quebec judge should be appointed to inquire into the matter because of report that members of Parliament are involved.

Mr. Cardin said the Quebec provincial authorities have been successful in ferreting out the criminal aspects of the bankruptcy affair.

Election Gloves Are Off

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The federal election campaign has passed the half-way mark and the gloves are off.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker charged in Manitoba Friday that the Liberals are creating information about organized crime, downgrading ethnic minorities and neglecting farmers.

Trade Minister Sharp accused Mr. Diefenbaker of stooping to the "vicious and unprincipled kind of electioneering" in a desperate search for an issue.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said in Calgary that both the Liberals and Conservatives are passing out expensive promises like Santa Claus and turning Canada into one of the greatest welfare states in the world.

Creditiste Leader Caouette said the Liberals spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in the 1963 election to spread "lying and dishonest propaganda" about his party.

CHARGES HYSTERIA

Finance Minister Gordon said in London, Ont., that opposition parties are waging exaggerated and occasionally hysterical campaigns.

Erik Nielsen, the man who broke the Lucien Rivard scandal in the Commons, called for an RCMP investigation into the Sefkind bankruptcy case. He said in Vancouver that justice department reports contain information that, if substantiated, would warrant criminal charges.

With one month to go before the Nov. 8 balloting, Mr. Diefenbaker opened a whistle-stopping, main - steering western trip in a 21 - car campaign around Winnipeg.

He charged in Beausejour

United Appeal Doing Well

United Appeal headquarters reports that signs are very encouraging to date. Several industries are reporting excellent results with their in - plant campaigns, with many being well ahead of last year's returns and still only partially completed their canvass. About a fifth of the total objective has been attained.

Canvassers should do everything possible to get their returns in to the United Appeal office as soon as they can. Time is growing short.

Also, any person who has not reached by canvassers, and who wants to donate to this community effort, can mail or bring their donations to the United Appeal Office, 160 Front Street, across from the City Hall in the old Ontario Intelligencer Building. Many persons have already done so.

2 Young Men Killed While Pushing Car

Two young men — one of them from Bloomfield — died today when the stalled car they were pushing on a curve near Kaladar was hit by a passing automobile.

Both men were believed in their early 20s.

Lobb's death was witnessed by his wife and sister-in-law, Rose Way, R.R. 1 Bloomfield, both of them passengers in the stalled car.

Lobb was the father of two young children.

The four people were returning from a dance at Northbrook when the car broke down on a curve on Highway 41 about a mile north of Kaladar.

Both men got out to push the car around the curve.

Police said a car driven by Roger Stephen Hynne, 24, Kaladar, Lake southbound came round the curve as the men were pushing Lobb's vehicle.

Police said the stalled automobile had no lights on and Hynne was unable to stop in time to prevent the mishap.

Lobb was moved to Bloomfield from Picton about a month ago and lived on the village's Main Street.

Says U.S. Viet Nam Policy Contributes to Stability

TORONTO (CP) — An American university professor said Friday night U.S. intervention in Viet Nam contributed to international stability. It disproved China's belief that small revolutionary wars could be waged without involving great powers.

Prof. Zbigniew Brzezinski told an international teach-in at the University of Toronto that U.S. action in Viet Nam had lessened Chinese ambitions.

He said Communist revolutions in underdeveloped countries could turn out to be a blessing in disguise for the U.S. A Communist take-over in a country that lacked the resources and will to make progress "might be preferable to an indiscriminate U.S. effort to fight so-called Communist aggression at all points and all times."

But he warned that failure of the U.S. to stand up to revolutions sponsored by radical minorities using the strategy of the national liberation war would lessen the chances of ending the cold war.

Prof. Brzezinski is director of research at the Institute of Communist affairs at Columbia University, New York. He was speaking in support of American policies in the first of five sessions in the three - day teach-in.

More than 6,000 persons attended the Friday night session, where Vadim N. Nekrasov, a member of the editorial board of the Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda, preached the Soviet view.

An estimated 100,000 students listened in by a telephone hookup with more than 80 other universities in Canada and the U.S.

Violence and Vandalism Mark Truckers' Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Violence and vandalism broke out Friday in the six-day-old wildcat strike that has paralyzed Ontario's truck industry.

Renewed negotiations between the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (Ind.) and representatives of 88 provincial trucking firms were scheduled for Tuesday.

A non-striking trucker was seriously injured and property was damaged in three centres in the outbreaks of violence.

A union spokesman said the agreement to re-open talks was reached Friday at a meeting of representatives of the union and the companies.

A spokesman for the trucking firms said the talks will resume only if striking truckers are ordered back to work no later than Tuesday.

Negotiations broke down Thursday when company representatives walked out of a meeting.

The injured trucker is Patrick Hennessey of London, a driver for Inter - City Truck-lines. He was admitted to hospital in serious condition after a cement block, dropped from an overpass on the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway, crashed through his windshield and struck him in the face.

In London police said tires on five cars owned by employees of Hunkard Transport were slashed soon after the announcement that unilib - management agreement had been reached.

In Kitchener police said 40 men damaged property belonging to Kingsway Transport and Mid-Canada Transport Ltd. Police chiefs have attributed the damage to a "roving goon squad" of strikers.

In the Toronto suburb of Etobicoke trucks in the yard of the Maislin Transport Co. yard were damaged. Police said vandals scaled fences around the yard and left five tractors and 31 immobile with cut brake air lines.

Lester, Ken McDougall, president of Teamsters local 938 in Toronto, offered a $500 reward for the arrest and conviction of the men who dropped the block on Hennessey.

Hennessey said it disassociates itself from such "criminal violence."

Union also said Friday that 500 employees of five Toronto trucking firms returned to work after they "are not under the influence of any political party, including the Communist party."

J. A. Donaldson, chief management negotiator; had said the wildcat walkouts are linked with the Communist party "to create chaos" in the city among the striking truckers.

Union spokesman Ron Roach said the union had presented a proposal asking for a 40-hour work week—down from 48—and the cut in the current $3-an-hour wage level.

The strike has paralyzed truck yards in Windsor, Hamilton, Oshawa, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Kitchener, Waterloo, Guelph, Preston, Toronto, Hespeller, Oakville and Brant-

U.S. Bishops Facing Defeat On Motions on Jews, A-Arms

VATICAN CITY (AP)—There were signs that U.S. Roman Catholic bishops at the Vatican ecumenical council might not get their views incorporated into the controversial declarations on the Jews and on modern world problems.

As the council ended the fourth week of its final session today, there were deep differences on both issues among the 2,200 prelates taking part.

Most American bishops want a statement saying the church recognizes that, lacking any foolproof international control, a nation has the moral right and duty to retain nuclear arms to deter potential aggressors.

But in the last week, bishops from many other lands have demanded a blanket condemnation of all warfare and all modern weapons, defensive or not.

Final voting will come next Thursday and Friday on the latest amended version of the council's declaration on the church attitude toward non-Christian religions. It contains the much-debated reference to Jews.

The declaration has aroused more emotion and manoeuvring than any other single item treated by the council in its three years of sessions.

The latest version, distributed a week ago, says that Jews cannot be blamed for the crucifixion of Christ. The old version said Jews should never be presented as a people cursed by God or guilty of "deicide." The new version has the same argument but omits the word "deicide." The new version deplores anti - semitism while the old version said the church actually "condemns" anything that smacks of such bigotry.

The changes were made by the drafting commission to produce a version more acceptable to the council.

Sources in the commission said several U.S. bishops started a lobbying campaign last week to have the deleted words "deicide" and "condemns" restored.

If just over one third of the 2,200 council fathers vote against the new version next week, the previous one will be restored automatically.

No Paper Monday

Monday, October 11, being Thanksgiving Day there will be no publication of The Intelligencer.

Jail Teenager

Magistrate T. Y. Wills yesterday jailed a teenager for one month for driving while his licence was under suspension.

Frederick Bruce McDonald pleaded guilty to the charge, which police said was his second such offence.

He was charged after a conviction for the same offence in August.

Extra Durable Homes Planned For Needy

TORONTO (CP) — The construction of extra durable houses for moist-problem welfare families is being planned as an experiment by the Ontario Housing Corporation.

H. W. Suters, the corporation's managing director, said in an interview that about a few of the special housing units will be built as part of a new campaign to increase housing facilities for welfare families in Toronto. The campaign was announced earlier by Stirling Randall, Ontario minister of economics and development.

"The special housing is different in the respect that they will be of extremely durable construction, will have less than the usual frills, and will be completely functional," said Mr. Suters.

The houses will be similar externally to other developments.

They will be offered to low-income families with destructive tendencies brought about by problems of alcoholism, poor housekeeping, and others.

OPEN MINE

The $8,000,000 Whalesback copper mine was officially opened Friday by Premier Smallwood. The mine, Springdale, Nfld., first to be put into production by the British Newfoundland Corp., started operations Sept. 1 and now is producing 1,500 tons of copper ore daily.

CONTRACT TO KINGSTON

A $275,000 contract for construction of two 50-foot barges for landing supplies in the Arctic has been awarded to Kingston Shipyards of Kingston. The transport department said Friday the self - propelled barges will be carried on board a patrol icebreaker now under construction.

RESPONSIBLE SERVICE FOR OVER 80 YEARS

To serve the public helpfully, dependably and economically is THOMPSON'S policy and practice. This policy was instituted by our founder, WM. THOMPSON, over 80 years ago, and is carried on today under the direction of his son and grandson, THOMAS and DAVID THOMPSON in responsible management, dedicated to serving you.

The confidence of the public in our service has been demonstrated over the years by the number of families we have previously served, who call us again when the need occurs.

U.S. President Pronounces Self In Good Shape

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Lyndon Johnson was ready for a bit of official business today—staff conferences and bill signings—within 24 hours of a major, two-is-one abdominal operation.

The 57-year-old pronounced himself in good shape. His doctors were willing to go along with that assessment.

They were enthusiastic at the way their prominent patient was getting along—minus a gall bladder and a stone that started in a kidney and lodged in a ureter.

These were removed one at a time by different doctors, through the same incision, in a 2¼-hour operation Friday. The physicians said the operation was entirely routine, a pretty much routine. They said there was no malignancy.

Less than five hours after the operation Johnson was on his feet and taking several steps, helped by three big, strong surgeon, Dr. George A. Hallenbeck, and a duty nurse.

The president's stay is estimated at 10 to 14 days.

Pool Resources, Retain Identity Hamilton Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian equality with the United States can come faster by adopting a theme of expansionism at home and abroad, Alvin Hamilton, former Conservative minister of agriculture, said Friday.

"The day of tariffs and quotas is finished," he said. "It is now the new concepts.

"We believe we should pool North American resources but with the same time maintain Canadian identity. We are tied together economically like two Siamese twins. There is no getting away from this fact.

"But I believe we should not be carried around on the back of the other twin. Rather, we should stand on our feet and have a share in deciding the direction to be taken."

Youths Held For Vandalism

KINGSTON (CP)—Police arrested three youths—one a juvenile—in connection with vandalism Thursday night at Inverary public school, 15 miles north of here.

Police did not disclose the names of the youths. No charges were laid immediately.

More than 100 pupils sent home Friday morning while police and school board officials examined the damage.

A glass door and an interior door leading to the principal's and teachers' dressing room torn apart, a duplicator machine was overturned and ink splashed across the floor.

County Centre Commission Re-organized

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County Centre Commission has re-organized in preparation for another season of winter activity.

The annual meeting was held Tuesday night with 20 representatives of various organizations in attendance.

When the board had been selected, officers were elected with Don Stanton succeeding Donald Walker as chairman, and Gary Harris as vice-chairman.

The office of secretary, filled by Mrs. Avis Head for three years, and that of treasurer, filled by Arthur Hamilin ever since the commission was formed, are vacant and left in the hands of the executive to fill.

Each group sent a representative and from 10 nominees, four were elected, by ballot, to the commission. Those chosen were Dr. Earl Taylor for Town Council; Mary Guernsey, R.N., for Prince Edward Junior Farmers; Al. Rally for Secondary School Teachers and Prince Edward Collegiate; Donald Walker for Masonic Lodge. (Miss Gurnsey is the only new member).

Other representatives have been invited to also attend meetings and participate in administration of the Centre. These are, Thera Falconer, B & P Women; Gerald Wheeler, I.O.O.F.; Wilson Terwilligar, Legion; Vernon Armstrong, Rotary; Lt. Gordon Henry, Camp Picton; Loris Minaker, Chamber of Commerce.

The commission also has six representatives who are appointed annually by organizations. These are, Thos. Walker for County Council; Don Stanton, Collegiate; Arthur Hamilin and Herbert J. Collyer.

Thus all sections of the community have representatives who can report to their groups and enlist the co-operation of members.

Election of members was conducted by H. J. Collyer.

Thanks was extended to A. Hamblin and Mrs. Head for their services as treasurer and secretary.

Appreciation for support given him as chairman during the past two years was given by Don Walker and he felt there is need for continued cooperation by all to successfully operate the Centre for the good of all.

The new manager, Jim Burt, was introduced and discussion indicated that there would be increased activity this winter.

At the next meeting, various committees will be set up.

INVESTIGATE ARSON

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia police and fire authorities are conducting two arson investigations, one involving $1,000,000. Attorney-General Robert Bonner said Friday night that of 19 fires under investigation, three are in another province. He would not identify the properties but said: It was not Quebec.

Police Given Salary Hike

PICTON (Staff) — A report has just been released on arbitration proceedings between the police association of the Town of Picton.

Arbitrator was Judge Alex C. Hall. Council for Association (Police) was Douglas Walmsley, with Lance Nethery, Q.C., for the Commission.

The awards see $500 per year increases to first, second, third and fourth constables; $100 increase to probationary constable; $852 increase to sergeant and percentage increase. Salary of Chief was not involved.

Extra duty pay was raised from $3.50 to $3.75 per hour for constables and $3.00 per hour for sergeant.

Request by police for a 40 hour week, instead of present 44, was denied in view of the wage increase.

Six Schools, Contents Up for Sale

PICTON (Staff)—Six schools and their contents, in Hopkins bury township, go under the auctioneer's hammer on Saturday and Monday. They have been abandoned as pupils attend the new central school.

Contents include oil stoves, oil tanks, office and school desks, electric clocks, large school bells, book shelves, water fountains and various other items.

Each school and contents will be sold on its premises, at the following days and times.

On Saturday, 9th, Woodville school, lot 30, con. 1 at Consumel, at one p.m., Solmesville at 3 p.m.

On Monday, Northport school at 10 a.m., Big Island North at 1 p.m., Big Island South at 3 p.m.

Thus pass "the little red" school houses. Some will likely become homes or cottages — but for years to come children and adults will remember "that's where I attended school."

Thompson Cancels Engagements

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Andrew Thompson has cancelled all public engagements for next week to give him time to recover from exhaustion caused by a highway accident Wednesday.

An aide said Friday the cancellations were made after it was learned that a concussion Mr. Thompson suffered in the accident is more serious than originally believed.

Mr. Thompson, who also injured his left leg, was ordered to stay in bed for "several days."

The Liberal leader was released on four charges after the collision near Peterborough. Four other persons were also injured.

Management Accounting Class Opens

A management accounting course "Planning for Profits," sponsored by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, commenced Wednesday at the Belleville Collegiate Institute with an enrollment of 25 Belleville businessmen. This course, prepared by the Ontario Department of Education, is being presented by Mr. Grant Harrison, resident manager of McColl Turner and Co.

Mr. Ross Dean, representing the Ontario Department of Education, accompanied by C. F. Bradley, secretary-manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, addressed the class prior to the commencement of the course. Mr. Bradley stated that the Chamber of Commerce was most pleased to sponsor this course and expressed the hope that all those participating would benefit from the seminars which will be conducted over the next eight weeks.

Mr. Dean stated that both the Federal Government and the Ontario Government supported this course and other courses designed for operators of small businesses with a view to upgrading the executive talent in Canada. He added that there were 450,000 small business organizations in Ontario but that the owners, agents and executives of these businesses in most cases could not afford the time to attend courses provided by universities. The Ontario Government feels that the best approach to the greatest number is through evening courses, such as the one being provided in Belleville.

The aim of the course is to provide a study of fundamental principles which are available in a firm's financial records. A study of these records and a clear understanding of the information portrayed in them enables the small businessman to effect better control of his finances and operate more efficiently.

Four Montreal Men Held for Bank Robbery

ROCKLAND, Ont. (CP) Four Montreal men were arrested Friday in connection with a $6,000 bank robbery Thursday at nearby Casselman.

He said Lacasse, Ouimet and Pricourt were arrested about 9 a.m. at the Hammond, Ont., farm of Gerard Gareau. Mr. Gareau was found tied to a log in the barn when he started his morning chores, and was told police had found him in a log jam a fall down a 35-foot hay chute.

He was asked to get the man out in hospital, but became suspicious and with the help of his sons managed to distract the trio while his wife phoned police.

Giroux was picked up later in a car near the farm.

Broadcasters Asked to Be Accurate

SILVER SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Paul Miller, president of The Associated Press, urged broadcasters Friday night to place more emphasis on accuracy and balance even if it sometimes means they won't be first with the news.

"Competitiveness to me means doing the thing better than the other fellow, not necessarily getting on the air or in print one minute quickly," Miller, also president of the Gannett Co., told a dinner meeting of the Florida Association of Broadcasters.

"I am suggesting that few newscasts are worth doing at the expense of accuracy, completeness and balance," he said.

Miller, whose company owns 27 newspapers, as well as a number of broadcasting stations, said that to him "nothing is more important to the maintenance and uplifting of our civilization that the collection and distribution of the facts we live by and the facts we must face."

American Truck Convoy Is Ambushed

SAIGON (CP)— A 20-truck convoy was ambushed by the Viet Cong guerrillas 30 miles south of Saigon Friday night and the Americans suffered moderate casualties, a military spokesman said today.

The attack was described as the biggest in which U.S. forces have been caught in the Viet Nam war.

A big U.S. and Australian operation on the edge of the Viet Cong's war zone, D, about 70 miles north of Saigon, continued today but only sporadic contact with the enemy was reported.

A U.S. military spokesman said 2,000 paratroopers used a small amount of non-lethal tear gas Friday in an effort to flush Viet Cong guerrillas from their beds and bunkers with unsatisfactory results.

Moderate casualties were inflicted on the paratroopers Friday when the Viet Cong mined and ambushed armored cars moving into Ben Cat along Highway 13.

Two American marines began unloading today at the South China Sea port of Cam Ranh Bay to provide security for a logistics buildup at the port, 180 miles northeast of Saigon.

The marines are the first Korean troops to arrive in Viet Nam, except for the security forces which accompanied a medical engineer detachment last spring.

On other developments:

North Viet Nam has protested to the International Control Commission of which Canada is a member, against the bombing of Hawk missile sites at Saigon, Bien hoa and Qui Nhon air bases in South Viet Nam, the New China news agency reported today.

The Viet Cong reported today they "completely wiped out" a South Vietnamese Commando Battalion in a battle Oct. 4.

IN MEMORIAM

STORMS — In loving memory of our dear father, Joseph, who passed away Oct. 10, 1964.

Two tired eyes are closing,
Two willing hands are still,
We gave our father all we could,
And now his rest is will.

He's resting in God's will.

We never said goodbye to us,
But perhaps it's just as well,
For we'd rather not have said goodbye,
To a Dad we loved so well.

Sadly missed by daughters, Pauline, Elizabeth, Joan, Bill, Carol, son-in-law David.

CROOK — In loving memory of our mother, Mrs. Mary Ellen Crook, who passed away Oct. 10, 1941.

Sadly missed by her daughters, Mrs. Carl (Florence) Sine, Mrs. Frank (Margaret) Hagerman and Mrs. Cecil (Florence) Sine, both of Belleville. Also surviving is her son, Richard (Margaret) Clements of Stirling.

STORMS — In loving memory of our dear father, Joseph, who passed away Oct. 10, 1964.

Oft and often do we think of you dear,
To a grave not far away,
Where we laid by dear brother Joseph to stay.

Lovingly remembered by sister Maude, brother-in-law Frank, and nephews Thomas, Franklin, Ronald.

DOUGLAS — In loving memory of my father, and our father Clarence Douglas, who passed away Oct. 10, 1964.

We treasure still with love sincere,
The memory of a dear father's care,

FOLLWELL — In loving memory of our dear father, Frederick Follwell, who passed away October 10th, 1964.

In tears we watched you fade away,
We watched you fade away,
Your suffering was more than human,
You fought so hard to stay,
Your heart was breaking,
We could not wish you back,
To suffer like that.

Lovingly remembered by Bill and daughters-in-law Ruth and Michael.

In loving memory of our dear father William Cooke, who passed away October 10, 1963.

So many things have happened,
So many changes,
So many things to share with you,
If you were only here.

Every day in some small way,
Memories bring you near to us,
Though absent, you are ever near.
Sadly missed by Ethel and Ken.

ROYAY — In loving memory of a dear husband and father Cecil Royay, who passed away October 9th, 1964.

Till well he will suffer no more,
In the loved land of the blest,
Pain died as he trod heaven's street,
He left him at peace and at rest.

IN MEMORIAM

STORMS — In loving memory of my dear husband Joseph, who passed away October 10, 1964.

Marmora, Ontario.

A life linked with my own,
Which God in love has torn,
As I walk through life alone,
He's in my thoughts always, with me.

Sadly missed.

MCKAY — In loving memory of my dear wife Kate who went home Oct. 10, 1964.

There's an open gate,
And a road that's paved,
Through which each must go,
Sometime.

And there is a light that streams,
Our Father claims His own,
Beyond the sky over land and sea,
Finds happiness and rest,
Where we shall be reunited in the morning.

That blessed hope, that blessed rest,
Is our night, dear until the morning. Met.

BURN — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Alfred Burn of Indian Road, who passed away October 10th, 1964.

Upon the path you tread,
Upon the path you tread,
There is the days that used to be,
But dearest of all is memory.

Beyond the toil and strife,
And clasp each others hands again,
Beyond the parting sigh,
Where sorrow never comes,
Beyond the reach of time.

The birthday song was sung to the birthday girl and two new members were welcomed to the club.

Chairman Carter, assistant director of the Recreation Centre, introduced Alderman Ken Reid who in a brief address on behalf of the Senior Citizens, presented Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edgar, who celebrated their golden 50th wedding anniversary with a silver tray, Mr. Edgar thanked all for the gift and Mrs. Edgar cut the anniversary cake.

The lucky draw was won by Mrs. M. Day.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. G. Nicolson and committee.

Belleville Family Y

Twelfth of a series of articles on the 14 participating agencies of this United Appeal, explaining the functions of the agencies and their reasons for being included in the United Appeal Campaign.

The Young Men's Christian Association is a world-wide fellowship united by a common loyalty to God for the purpose of building Christian personality and a Christian society.

In Belleville and 12,000 associations in 85 countries, influencing over five million persons, the Y.M.C.A. fulfills its purposes admirably, and helps make a better future through the building of better citizens now.

A Y.M.C.A. spokesman said: "We feel people should pay a fair share for the services we provide. However, we want to keep our fees at a level that will not put the price of our valuable services out of the range of the average family.

"While it cost us $315 a year to join the Y, it costs somewhere between $36 and $56 a year to provide the services for him.

"Obviously, if we charged boys what it costs us, say $50, many boys could not afford to join. So we go to the United Appeal and ask them to help us out so that we can in turn help the children of our community learn the fundamentals of citizenship and the value of physical fitness.

"The Y also has a provision that states that anyone who genuinely can not afford to pay a membership can participate. The president of the board, setting up a committee to increase our work in this area.

"Often other community agencies refer underprivileged children, or children who have run into difficulties, and we are only too glad to help them straighten themselves out before it is too late."

MEETS MANY NEEDS

There are many other things the Y.M.C.A. does for the community. The needs of young people are met, regardless of their means. There are many needs, such as the need for friendship and companionship, the need to get along with other people and the opportunity to have leadership potential developed. The Y meets these needs in the children and makes them better citizens as a result.

A spokesman said, "You know, it is cheaper to pay a few dollars to the United Appeal and help boys become men, rather than to pick up the tab in taxes paying the costs of juvenile delinquents.

"There is no way you can measure the dollar value of a character building program. Perhaps the kind of community we live in is one of the best measures."

No other organization does anything about the physical fitness of adults than the Y.M.C.A. By the way, adult members of the Y pay their own way for everything they receive.

The family programming of the Y is a rare opportunity for a family to participate together. There are not too many such opportunities for families.

In any one week, there are at least 500 members going in the Y.M.C.A. The total membership in 1964 was 1,762 — 487 boys, 607 girls, 473 men and 411 women.

WIDELY USED

The aggregate attendance registered, or in other words, the number of times Y services were used in 1964 was 98,105. Of this total, 39,823 participated in groups with or without registration. 1,665 were in special events, 1,663 were in groups under other auspices and 15,732 participated in individual services.

There are few organizations that can match that record of participation.

The Y.M.C.A. in 1964 received 21 per cent of its revenue from the United Appeal. The rest was broken up into membership, 29 per cent; program, 13 per cent; membership and camp fees, one per cent; contributions, five per cent; day camp, four per cent; showers and towels, one per cent; other services, three per cent.

The expenditures were broken into six categories, wages, pension, 32 per cent; operating program, 23 per cent; building maintenance, 22 per cent; services, 15 per cent; day camp, five per cent; and residence, three per cent.

WEST HILL EXTENSION

Since the Y.M.C.A. has moved to West Hill, the number of members come from the West Hill as came when they were situated downtown. However, even with this in mind, Y officials have felt the need for a second Y for the West Hill children and they operated an extension program last year in the Central Public School from October through May. Plans for the same type of program are being finalized now.

The extension program offered gym classes to boys every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. The classes attended the Y.M.C.A. proper for swimming. Gym classes at the Y room ducts trampoline classes at the Harry J. Clarke Public School and gymnastics at the school at Moira Secondary School.

Arrangements are almost completed now for a swimming program at the Y for retarded children, and as a community service, a program of learn-to-swim classes for students of grades, six, seven and eight.

The Girl Guides, Brownies, Cubs and Scouts all make use of the Y pool at a reduced rate. The Y is also providing men with the Recreation Commission and Tops Motel in offering speed swimming classes to Belleville youths.

Over 100 volunteer workers serve on the various committees, boards, clubs, classes and teams and, along with trained staff members, carry out the many programs planned to meet special needs of all individuals in almost every age group.

EXAMPLE OF SERVICES

There was recently the case of Paul, a boy who appeared to be a mischief - maker at one time, but who later was viewed with alarm by police and school authorities. He developed serious behavior patterns — vandalism, theft and truancy. Concern was expressed for his future. His father was deceased, and in spite of sincere efforts, his mother was unable to cope with these problems.

It was at this point, when the situation seemed almost hopeless, that Paul's brother arranged for him to visit the Y twice a week. What a thrill when, a few weeks later, Paul displayed to one and all a card indicating that he had passed his first swimming test.

At present, Paul is an active, valued member of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. He attends regularly, co-operates fully with his instructors and fellow members and has begun to learn that success comes through effort, and that disciplined activities can be fun.

Now that his energies have found another outlet, Paul no longer resorts to improper behavior to gain the attention he craved so much. The Y is in fact, providing many of these conditions within his home he is unable to provide — opportunities for achievement and success and, above all, a feeling of his own worth as an individual.

HOW MONEY SPENT

The Y.M.C.A. spends its United Appeal allocation for leadership training of groups, camping and classes; co-operation equipment and supplies; for professional leadership and for rental of program facilities throughout the community in order to carry out youth, teen and adult programs.

The United Appeal allocation enables the Y to keep its youth program fees within the reach of the average family.

A spokesman added, "We are making a study of our leadership needs and leadership training needs in order to ensure all our activities have the best possible leaders.

"Anyone who wants to become a leader can be trained by us. Industry spends countless thousands training leaders, and here we do it free. Our leadership training program provides another opportunity for civic-minded citizens to voluntarily serve their community.

"If there is a felt need for any type of program and it is possible for us to provide it, no matter what it is, we will do it."

The Y.M.C.A. certainly is a great service to the community, a service that we can not afford to be without. Give it your support through the United Appeal!

Y's Activities

A total of thirty - five Belleville women, eager to keep fit in the 'Y' way, attended the exercise class at the Belleville Family Y.M.C.A. last week. A swim and steam - bath completed their morning.

Although the 'Y's activity brochure for the 1965-66 season states this class begins at 10.00 a.m. every Tuesday and Thursday, the women have decided to change the time to 9.30 a.m. Also the ladies will begin serving themselves coffee in their own coffee mugs from home on Tuesday, October 12th.

For members with small children who are at the walking stage the Y.M.C.A. provides a babysitting service. A nominal fee is charged for the babysitting.

Miss Mildred Gray, girls' and women's program secretary, will be most happy to answer any questions, either by a telephone call o re personal visit to the "Y".

FREE THANKSGIVING TURKEYS were presented to 220 Union Carbide workers yesterday for their achievement of 1,000,000 accident free man hours. Receiving turkeys from assistant plant manager Jim Wright are Stan Armstrong, Fred Smith and Ken Naylor. (Story and another picture on Page 15).

Nicholson Catholic College Graduation Exercises Held

Monsignor Carley, of St. Joseph's Parish here, also presented prizes for religious knowledge, which he had donated.

The valedictory address was delivered by James Black, who carried off a lion's share of the various awards for excellence in various fields. An "at home" followed the presentations, made by Mr. R. E. Bagrett, chairman of the Nicholson Catholic College Board, Mr. Robert Temple, M.P. in the last House, and representatives of the various groups which had donated the awards.

Trenton Gets Safety Award

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Highway Safety Council Friday released statistics on traffic accidents in most Canadian towns and cities for the six-month period from January to June this year.

The council, which based its report on information provided by municipal police chiefs, will use a 12 month survey to award its annual citations to communities completing 1965 with out a road fatality.

Citations are awarded to fatality-free class A communities of 20,000 population or more; class B, 10,000 or more and class C, 5,000 or more.

CLASS A

Eastview, Port William, Oshawa, Stratford, Waterloo.

CLASS B

No statistics were available for several communities in the three classes.

1918 Explosion Is Recalled

TRENTON — On Thanksgiving Day, 1918, the British Chemical plant in east Trenton blew up with a resounding bang that shattered windows in communities as far away as Picton.

Thousands of citizens blocked the highways around the town, as they made good their escape. Many Trenton residents still recall the events of that night, none more realistically than Lt. Gordon Goodfellow of the Trenton Fire Department who remembers that his Thanksgiving dinner was spoiled when the chandelier fell onto the table just as his father was about to carve the turkey.

However, not one life was lost and there were no serious injuries. There might have been if railway engineer Joe Berry hadn't driven a T.N.T. loaded train from the factory yard to a safer place.

Injunction Against Trust Merger Sought

TORONTO (CP)—A petition has been filed to seek an injunction blocking the merger of British Mortgage and Trust Co. of Stratford and Victoria and Grey Trust Co. of Lindsay, Ont.

The petition was filed in the Ontario Supreme Court in the name of Donald Bruce Smith.

The two trust companies officially merged Sept. 30 after separate shareholders meetings approved the proposal Sept. 14.

British Mortgage, an 88-year-old firm, found itself in financial troubles because of its involvement with Atlantic Acceptance Corp., in receivership since June 17 after it failed to meet some short-term debts.

British Mortgage shareholders were told its losses could amount to more than $10,000,000.

Restrictions Placed on Motorcycles

Two new restrictions on the operation of motorcycles were announced today by Transport Minister Irwin Haskett.

A person holding only a temporary instructor's permit may no longer carry a passenger on the pillion seat of a motorcycle, and a person with a temporary permit is now prohibited from driving a routed motorcycle.

Mr. Haskett said the new regulations, which are effective immediately, stem from an intensive and continuing study of accidents involving motorcycles.

"The number of motorcycles registered in Ontario has more than doubled in the past eight months," Mr. Haskett said.

"This development is the basic reason for the increase in motorcycle accidents this year. The number of motorcycles involved in accidents has gone up in proportion to the greater number of motorcycles on the road.

There were 22,042 motorcycles registered in Ontario at the end of August, and a total of 1,588 were involved in accidents in the first eight months of the year.

"My Department is concerned about every factor that contributes to the increase in accidents totals, and this concern certainly includes the effects of the new motorcycles," said Mr. Haskett.

"We are investigating our study of this situation."

He said the previous peak of motorcycle registrations was in 1950, when there were nearly 14,000. At that time motorcycles were used to a much greater proportion of the total of motor vehicles, and were involved in a greater number of fatal accidents, than is the case today.

Since then the number of motorcycles has gradually until their resurgence of popularity in the past two years.

With the increasing number of motorcycles on the road, Mr. Haskett pointed out that drivers of cars and trucks must be more alert for them.

Weather Cuts Market Trade

Threatening weather eased business on the Belleville farmers' market this morning.

Possibly the last corn of the season was on sale — at 50 cents a dozen.

Pumpkins bound to increase in volume in coming weeks — were a light offering, ranging between 25 and 50 cents.

Apples and pears were in fair supply with Macs, Pippins and Melbas and Flemish pears at 75 cents a basket. Melons sold between 35 and 75 cents, according to size.

A dwindling supply of tomatoes, now rapidly moving out of season, brought 75 cents a six-quart basket.

Vegetable prices: turnips 15 cents; parsnips 25 cents a quart, 25 cents; carrots 50 cents a basket; potatoes 50 cents basket, $2. bushel; green onions 10 of motorcycles during 1965. cents a bunch.

Sauerkraut was a feature offering, selling at 40 cents a quart.

Bladen Report

Not surprisingly, the Bladen report on higher education lays emphasis on the continuing upward spiral in education costs. It is time the federal government to boost its aid to universities and colleges to at least $330,000,000 in the next fiscal year from about $80,000,000 budgeted for the current year ending March 31.

This is a massive sum, but it is indicative of the formidable program of construction and of the tuition, salary and staff needs that are part and parcel of modern university development.

Only recently a new place of higher learning, Simon Fraser University, was opened in British Columbia. Another, Trent University, is under development in nearby Peterborough. Others will undoubtedly follow.

"The magnitude of the expenditures required has scarcely yet been understood," the report said, "Even among university heads, few realized how massive this increased support will have to be."

A measure of this need is the report's recommendation of a five-fold boost in the combined aid by federal and provincial governments to an estimated $1,704,000,000 in the next five years, increased gifts to universities by business corporations and contributions by university graduates of at least one per cent of their income on a regular basis.

If Canada is to remain in the forefront of progress these demands will have to be met. That we are slipping back to some extent is indicated by the commission's warning that a shortage of doctors, dentists, scientists and university lecturers is causing concern simply because we will become worse unless there is a substantial increase in government aid.

Apartheid

Attention centred once again on South Africa's policy of apartheid, or separate development of Europeans and Africans, during a recent defence of the republic's policy by the South African representative at the United Nations.

And once again the arguments fell mainly on deaf ears, many of the UN delegations walking out as the ambassador put his country's case. None of South Africa's detractors, of course, is able to advance any satisfactory alternative to apartheid which, despite the anomalies and harshness of many of the regulations governing the movement of Africans and colored people, not to mention the Europeans, seems to be the only possible means of ensuring the advancement of a country which has some 11,000,000 Africans and only 4,000,000 Europeans.

It is often forgotten that the first European settlers entered the country before Africans in any numbers moved there from territories to the north. Sir Pieraldo de Guingand, formerly chief of staff to Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery and a resident of South Africa for 18 years, gave a reminder of this in Vancouver recently when he said: ". . . the black and white races have been living together in Africa for more than 300 years."

Defending the disenfranchisement of the South African natives, Sir Francis said: "If universal franchise were granted, the non-whites would take over the country. A chaos would result, just as happened in the Congo." He pointed out that the South African native was better off economically than in other parts of Africa. With improving economic conditions and the advancement of the natives' well-being, resentment had lessened.

In short, despite government controls and repressive measures directed against individuals and groups who advocate more liberal policies it would appear that the South African natives on the whole are not too badly off.

Women to the Fore

Women are in the news these days—adventurous, intelligent women who like to be up and doing as the saying goes. One is Mrs. Jerri Mock, the Columbus, Ohio, housewife who piloted her own plane around the world a year or two ago. Mrs. Mock has just set up an unofficial record for a light single-engined plane in a flight over a triangular 500-kilometre course.

In Russia women are noted for their mastery of such professions as medicine and engineering. And the bug seems to have caught on in the satellite countries, judging from a London news item about one Maria Atanassova. The staff at London airport got a surprise when a big Ilyushin turbo-prop plane of the Bulgarian airline Taboo made a perfect landing and who should be at the controls but Miss Atanassova. Or rather, Miss Atanassova is described as a handsome woman with 17 years of accident-free flying behind her.

On the home front yet another young woman is making a bid to enter national politics. She is Felicity Cochrane, 36, who has been nominated as Conservative candidate for Toronto Parkdale. Miss Cochrane combines good looks with a taste for politics and her campaign will be watched with interest.

Campaign Cookouts Are 'In', Coffee Klachs Are Out

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — If the candidates had to carry a tremendous gallonage of coffee in the 1963 election — and they did — this time they've got to have an even more immense capacity.

For beer-barbecue beef and roast corn.

Last time, the coffee pot was the campaign symbol.

Now it is the barbecue tongs.

The campaign cookout has replaced the coffee klatch.

And here in the geographical heartland of Ontario and Quebec, there is the added harvest-time spectacle of watching the candidates eating corn as well as spouting it.

Long ago the candidates discovered that, as Alf Hales, the Conservative contender and four-times MP for Wellington South, puts it: "You can't get people to turn out just to hear somebody making a speech."

In fact, the discovery was made long before Alf Hi Ho came down the political pike.

Conservative Leader Defeat February 2, 1965, in reference to the removal of the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks from the south end of Front Street area and the possible use of the land for other purposes.

My suggestion is as follows: Have the CPR construct a spur line running from the north-east side of the air base to connect with the CNR main line at a point convenient between Trenton and Belleville, and a spur just west of Shannonville to lead to the present main line of the CPR in Smith's Falls.

If it were possible for the CPR to do this they could possibly apply for running rights over the CNR between these points. Their passenger trains could discharge any passenger or baggage and express at the CNR north station.

The CNR could remove their main line from the diversion point to a point east of Belleville (General Hospital, allowing a side track to serve the various business places in that area. This would mean the elimination of four main highway crossing and several other crossings at the south-west section of Belleville waterfront. The station, which at one time was the property of the Canadian Northern Railway could be sold for removal.

Another very good thing would be accomplished if, in the event of the CPR right-of-way being closed, the bad screeching of train whistles directly in front of the hospital be eliminated. This is very annoying to so many of our patients in the hospital.

If the connecting spurs were to be built there would be no bridges to build and very little grading to be done, and the land where these spurs would be built would only involve farm land. There would be no homes to buy or remove.

During the depression days a Royal Commission was set up to study the increasing cost of railway operation and their findings at that time pointed along the lines of my present suggestion. They suggested where there was a duplication of services by the railways that either one or both of which would be beneficial to the public, thereby eliminating unnecessary.

I personally feel that it it were possible to do this,in the long run it would be beneficial to solve our present problem at Belleville.

—An Interested Citizen.

Reader Opposes Bridge Proposal

The Editor:
The Intelligencer:

I would like to express through the column of your paper my personal views as a taxpayer in regard to the excessive cost of construction of the proposed bridge from the Bay. It's Elbow, across the Moira River and along the side of the Bay. I feel at the present time this is not a necessity compared with other things which really need being done.

I suggest that College Street be widened from the Bay to a four-lane artery and an underpass built to connect the C.N.R. tracks on Canifton Road in preference to this new bridge.

To elaborate on my disapproval of this project I feel that the Skyway bridge being built at Marysville across the Bay of Quinte will take all the eastbound traffic from Picton and the surrounding countryside leaving only local and westward traffic on Dundas Street East in Belleville. I feel this will greatly relieve congestion across our present bridge at Bridge and Front Street.

In regard to the underpass, it has now become a serious situation when a train of 100 cars or more is being pulled over Canniffon Road at a speed of about ten miles per hour. An ambulance must be held there so long as to mean a life or death and this is now one of our busiest streets in Belleville.

Milk Does Not Cause Calcium Deposits

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have always understood that milk builds strong bones, but now I have heard that too much of it leaves calcium deposits. — D. E. G.

* * *

After all these centuries, it doesn't seem to me that milk should need any defence, but so many letters like this one continue to come in. Perhaps we'd better try to set such half-baked ideas at rest.

It is true that milk provides calcium, and calcium is a vital ingredient of strong bones. If you don't get enough calcium from milk, you have to get it from some other source or the bones will suffer.

Milk, however, is the easiest and surest means of getting it. This is a problem that Nature neatly worked out. Animals from ass to zebra suckle their young on milk. Calcium, naturally, isn't all that milk contains, but all milk is rich in it.

But there is a whopping difference between calcium "deposits" and calcium which normally makes up your bones, teeth, and some other tissues.

If we get too much calcium, or at any rate, more than we need, the body simply discharges the excess, just as it does with most of the minerals which we need in varying amounts. Extra calcium is not accumulate as calcium deposits.

Rather, calcium deposits are created only in response to some damage — injury, or infection. When you cut a finger, scar tissue forms, giving it strength. If you break a leg the break heals, or "knits" by an accumulation of calcium at the break. What it really amounts to is a "scar" which is made of bone instead of soft tissues, a bit like a broken bone will show in an X-ray film long afterward. There's a thickening of the bone.

The same sort of process occurs with lesser injuries. Your heart may be hurt but not broken, and a calcium "spur" develops at the point of injury.

All these calcium deposits are "scars" of one sort or another, and part of the natural healing process. Restricting milk will not alter or prevent them. Too much milk does not cause them.

But let's not malign milk, and let's not be foolish enough to believe that milk "has a heard" without digging into the facts.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a crooked uterus and should undergo surgery. If one has heart trouble, is it wise to have the operation? — Mrs. G. S.

For this, or any number of other operations the answer depends on the seriousness of the heart trouble. And what kind is involved.

Do you have occasional palpitation or is there some cardiac (heart) insufficiency? Is this a problem of a heavy valve, or have you had a serious heart attack?

In short, without knowing all about your heart, as well as your general health, I can't possibly answer your question. I can name any number of people who have had heart attacks, yet have had subsequent operations. I know others who never have had a coronary occlusion (heart attack,) yet their hearts have been weakened in other ways and they should not have an operation unless the urgency of the surgery is such that the risk must be taken.

If your doctor thinks you should have the operation, have it, and let him judge your condition. Correcting a dropped uterus doesn't involve a very serious operation. Reading between the lines, I judge that your doctor knows the surgery will help you and that your heart trouble is not going to be involved.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: If mumps "went down" on a 2-year-old girl, will she be able to have children when she grows up? — Mrs. M.

The answer depends on whether the disease affected both ovaries or only one. If one was not damaged, she could still have babies.

Captives of Geography

Brasford Expositor

Geographic facts of life account for the concentration of Canada's 19,000,000 population along a narrow east-west strip adjoining our border with the United States. And the prospective population centres of Canada is moving a little further south at each decennial census.

According to a study undertaken by the Ontario department of economics and development, Canada's geographic population centre is now located in the Parry Sound district, about 145 miles due north of Toronto. Half of Canada's population lives, therefore, either east or west of this point or north or south of it. Since the east-west dividing line runs right through the heart of metropolitan Toronto, there isn't much economic significance in about the vertical split. Moreover Eastern and Western Canada based on this study are growing evenly in population. The east-west dividing line is almost unchanged since the 1951 census.

However, the north - south economy market indicates the extent to which Canadians have become the captives of their geography. The imaginary meridian, is more than three degrees below the 49th parallel that forms the southern border, of the three Prairie provinces and British Columbia. People living in this part of Canada reside north of Canada's geographic population centre. Also included are all of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, part of Nova Scotia, most of New Brunswick and, of course the greater part of Ontario and Quebec. The line separating north and south population halves skirts the northern suburbs of Montreal.

Nearly 100 years after Confederation, an experiment undertaken partly to satisfy the expansionist aims of central Canada, half of the country's population still lives in an area that borders the upper St. Lawrence and part of the Great Lakes which is only a thin ecumenost point extends just 145 miles north of Toronto. Between 1951 and 1961 the geographic population centre has shifted 11 miles southward.

By contrast the actual geographic centre of Canada is in the Keewatin district of the Northwest Territories where at the last census there were two people per 100 square miles. Northern development still remains a vision. Provincially, Ontario's haven't done much better in populating their northern areas. Ontario's geographic population centre in 10 years has moved north by just a couple of Toronto city blocks, reflecting a general trend towards suburban living in the province's biggest city.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

October 9th, 1945

The approach of Thanksgiving this year should cause all Canadians to reflect on the great debt we owe & benevolent Providence for the security & peace which are now reigning. The past six years have been shadowed by the uncertainties of war which have tempered any thought of celebration.

Our country has completed a good harvest and we can visit the future with equanimity. Our boys are home from the battle fronts, or coming home, and those their families, and loved ones can ask for no greater reward than that. Our thoughts go out to those who have been bereaved by the supreme sacrifice made by those they loved best.

With these thoughts, then, in mind it would be well if I paused for a brief period during this time of thanksgiving and offer up our gratitude, prayer, and thank God that we have been spared the grief & suffering that has been the lot of those in countries devastated by the savagery of war.

October 9th, 1935

Lieut.-Col. J. Vincent Dopson was presented with an engraved silver tray at a happy gathering in the officers' mess of the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment last evening; the occasion was his completion of 25 years service with the Regiment. The commanding officer of the regiment, Lieut.-Col. Fleming, made a few introductory remarks, which praised upon the president of the mess to make the presentation. Former commanding officers of the Regiment, Lieut.-Col. Ponton, Lieut.-Col. David Ragragar, and Col. Roscoe Vaughter, D.S.O., were present. In all made reference to the excellent service of Lieut.-Col. Dopson during the years of his service overseas during the Great War.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland, Ohio, and Charles Poll and George Cline when fishing in Stoco Lake recently landed between them the largest lunge taken from that lake this season; it weighed 30 pounds.

40 YEARS AGO

October 9th, 1925

Mr. and Mrs. George Hess of Stirling were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Munnis, McDonald Street.

According to the report of the city assessor T. Ed. Keeler, the population of the city is 15,803. This being a growth of 1,203 during the past year and 539 during the past five years. Various denominations were also taken by the assessor and enumerated as follows: Anglican 5872; United Church 3435; Presbyterian 1625; Roman Catholic 3702; Baptist 1008; Salvation Army 155; other denominations 436.

From our file copy at the time in 1895: "Twenty car loads of stone from the Point Anne quarries have been shipped so far at Brockville for the International Bridge."

50 YEARS AGO

October 9th, 1915

The members of the Women's Christian Association met last meeting for this year recently in the council chamber in the city hall and all business was satisfactorily completed. The expenditures for the hospital and maintaining soldiers amounted to $2,242.00 and the receipts amounted to $2,242.00. This sixty-four patients were admitted during September and present there are 45 patients in hospital.

Mr. Charles Warren of Toronto spent the weekend here with friends.

Mr. Russell Marshall of Brighton was a visitor in town today.

Dr. Vandervoort of Deseronto has been appointed coroner for the County of Hastings.

Successful Living

Family Ties Always Well Worth Preserving

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS: Ted and I were married when I was 18. We love our two babies and are very close to each other. Over these three years we have discovered our differences, had arguments, made up and seem to be quite happy.

My problem concerns my mother-in-law. She has never shown any liking for me. I know one day we would clash and I have tried to avoid this. The time came three months ago, when my husband had a violent argument with her about his stepfather being drunk. I haven't heard from her since.

All her life she has felt sorry for herself since she was a child illegitimately. She hates her mother. Now she hates her son. She didn't go to her father's funeral. He wasn't her real father but he raised her and gave her a home.

I know we are all human and make mistakes, but is it normal to hate your own mother and son? I never came across such a long drawn out feud. We want to baptize our baby soon. Should we invite them? My husband says no. — DESPAIRING.

* * *

DEAR DESPAIRING: No, it is not normal to hate those who should be most precious; but has anything about this woman's life been normal? She carries a chip on her shoulder for her early wrongs, and anyone handy bears the brunt of her bitterness.

You are the really rich one, with a good marriage and two lovely babies. Without grovelling in the dust, make one more approach to her. If she softened and came to the christening, everyone would feel better.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am interested in organizing a baby sitting agency. Last year I viewed on a TV program a lady from Toronto who was successfully operating such a club. Unfortunately I do not remember her name.

I would be very happy to receive any information and leaflets on how to get started. — BABY SITTER.

* * *

DEAR BABY SITTER: There's help for you, and training courses. Most provinces now require licensing and bonding for those who are trusted to go into homes and care for precious living treasures!

I'm sending you my leaflet on Baby Sitting and the names of some who have been in touch with me for guidance in getting started is the Ontario Safety League, 208 King Street West, Toronto, Ontario.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am interested in opening a fabric shop in a new shopping centre. I know a good deal about sewing.

I don't know how to go about opening a business, nor where to find the names of suppliers. — NEW SHOP.

DEAR NEW: Canada's various trade magazines are a great help to folks like you who want to succeed in business (and are really trying!). Letters about good business practices and sales promotions, and the names of suppliers and others, keep the mails humming between shopkeepers and editors.

I'm sending you the name of the trade periodical which can give you the facts about a fabric shop.

QUESTION:

. . . I am in need of a recipe for barbecue sauce for 700 halves of chicken. If the recipe is not for that many I could double it or more . . . I do some catering . . . Mrs. A. C.

ANSWER:

I am glad to give you this for I am receiving an increasing number of requests for barbecuing large quantities of chicken.

BARBECUE SAUCE (for 50 chicken halves):

4 cups vinegar, 7½ cups catsup, 2 cups brown sugar, 2 tablespoons salt, 2 tablespoons dry mustard, 1 cup celery seed, ½ cup chili powder, 2 tablespoons paprika, 1 tablespoon pepper.

Barbecue chickens (25 whole or 50 halves) on spit in rotisserie or under broiler or in oven. Combine all barbecue ingredients. (If possible let them stand 1 hour before using.) Brush chicken frequently with sauce during barbecuing period.

QUESTION:

The old problem has arisen — what to serve for lunch to my hungry family, three of whom come home every day. A friend told me you gave some hot lunch sandwiches last year . . . Marguerite. H.

ANSWER:

Yes I did. You may want to cut amounts in half.

HOT CHICKEN SANDWICH (serves 8):

2 cups cooked chicken, 2 hard-cooked eggs, ¼ cup sliced ripe olives, 1 small can mushrooms, ½ cup chopped onion, ½ cup mayonnaise, one 10-oz. can mushroom cream soup, ½ cup dairy sour cream.

Chop first 5 ingredients together and add mayonnaise. In large, shallow, buttered baking dish place, touching each other, 8 slices decrusted sandwich bread, buttered on both sides. Spread filling over each, cover with 8 more buttered slices. Mix together soup and sour cream and pour over evenly. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 20 to 25 minutes.

Place 6 slices crustless bread in buttered 9 x 9 x 2 inch dish. Place 6 full slices old Cheddar cheese over bread and cover that with slices of luncheon meat such as Spam, using 1 can. Cover with 6 more slices bread. Pour over evenly this Custard: Beat together 4 eggs,

Maloney — Whalen

MR. AND MRS. FRANCIS XAVIER MALONEY

St. Anne's Church, Point Anne was the setting for a lovely fall wedding on Saturday, October 2, 1965 at 11 a.m., when Patricia Anne Whalen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Whalen was united in marriage to Francis Xavier Maloney, son of Mrs. John (Margaret) Maloney of Bath and the late Mr. John Maloney. Monsignor J. A. Carley officiated at the ceremony with altar boys Vernon Whalen and Jimmie Maloney assisting.

The organist was Miss Gertrude Simmons who accompanied the soloist Mrs. Hazel Brabaugh in two appropriate selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of organza over taffeta, trimmed with re-embroidered Alencon lace across the bodice to a rose centred bow at the waistline and lace appliques down the front of the pencil slim skirt. A chapel train flowed from a large cabbage rose at back of the waistline and a smaller rose held in place a shoulder-length veil of silk illusion. She carried a bouquet of deep pink roses and white stephanotis.

Mrs. Joseph Garrah of Kingston as matron of honor wore a street-length gown of shrimp colored chiffon over taffeta highlighted with a flowing train attached with bows to the shoulders. She wore matching shoes and headdress. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Burton Whalen, sister-in-law of the bride, and Miss Lorraine Whalen, sister of the bride were identically attired to the matron of honor, but in turquoise color. All carried bouquets of deep pink roses and white feathered mums.

Mr. Vincent Brady of Perth, nephew of the bridegroom was groomsman and Mr. Burton Whalen of Point Anne, brother of the bride and Mr. John Maloney of Hull, Quebec, usher ed the guests.

At the reception in St. John's Parish Hall at Point Anne, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a brown printed silk sheath with matching jacket, dark brown accessories and a corsage of amber roses. The bride groom's mother assisted wearing a printed navy sheath with beige accessories and a corsage of red roses.

For the wedding trip to Montreal the bride wore a dress three-piece light brown double knit suit, dark brown shoes and purse, feathered hat in autumn shades and a corsage of amber roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Maloney will reside at 43 Loyalist, Amherview, Ontario.

SOMETHING TO GIVE THOUGH 104

In April, Mrs. Louis Schlessinger of Buffalo, New York, celebrated her 104th birthday. Despite her age, the life of this woman is a great inspiration to many. She makes one wonder if the terms "giving" and "living" are not almost synonomous.

She reads every day, and her mind is exceptionally alert. She knits, sews, and crochets regularly, and often delights her friends with gifts of her own making. She writes an average of 25 letters a week, especially to people who need encouragement. She also has a telephone beside her bed, and frequently calls sick people and inspires them.

Our Heavenly Father's purpose is that our lives should bring strength, and refreshment, and uplift to the lives of others who may be faltering under life's heavy load. Too often . . . being selfish we find various excuses for ourselves . . . others suffer . . . and we lose . . . we lose in terms of "living." There is a connection between "giving" and "living." Let this splendid woman inspire us to greater faith, and generosity.

Ladies of Belleville:

This time last year you were probably thinking of a permanent. Perms are where there are to give your hair body and for hair that already has body a permanent will help you control it.

Hair this time of year requires more attention because of the dryness of summer and the bleaching by the sun.

To give your hair the attention the proper permanent and treatment must be selected.

Remember — the firm foundation of a good permanent is a correct shaping.

"You wouldn't believe how a Cascade 40 changed our lives"

"In our other house I had to start washing clothes early in the morning so that we would have enough hot water for baths at night. Now, with the Cascade 40, we have hot water all the time."

Mrs. D. Black of Clarkson, Ontario, says this about the Cascade 40 superfast electric water heater:

"I usually wash four or five days a week, and I have to do three or four loads on each of these days. That takes a lot of hot water, but I can still do dishes, bathe the children and leave lots of hot water for my husband to have a bath.

"With the Cascade 40, I have never had any sign of running out of hot water."

Cascade 40 is flameless, safe, clean. No flue is needed so it can be located in any convenient place in your home. There is a ten year guarantee on the tank.

Have an approved Cascade 40 electric water heater installed in your home.

The Golden Years

Widow Finds Real Happiness Through Understanding Heart

By THOMAS COLLINS

"My husband passed away with a heart attack six years after he retired. It was pretty hard. I felt like walking the floor and wringing my hands. Instead I decided to paint the inside of my house.

"That surely is a good way to keep from crying — just try to cry with a brush full of paint splattering in your face from the ceiling.

"The ceiling needs doing again now. But I'll save it for some blue day next winter . . ."

Thus does a wonderful lady, Mrs. Walter Leach, keynote an attitude toward life that has brought her happiness in a neighborhood of children, dogs, and noise.

Retired people moving into the suburbs, then complaining about what their neighbors do, she said, have lost one of the greatest gifts a person can have — "an understanding heart."

"They should stop trying to find out what is the matter with everybody else, and ask themselves 'What's the matter with me?' And when they are disturbed by neighborhood noises it's a shame their hearing is so good."

HUSBAND TAUGHT YOUNG

Mrs. Leach's adjustment to a neighborhood of young people started when her husband began holding open house in his garage work shop for the small boys of the neighborhood. He taught them how to use tools, to work with lumber and electricity. "His always had boards that needed sawing, and scrap lumber for the kids to build things with. One boy was quite a problem. He didn't have anybody who was interested in him. My husband got interested. And the boy now is headed for a career in electronics . . ."

While this was going on Mrs. Leach threw her home open to the neighborhood children. And she always had a candy jar waiting.

As a result of all this, young parents of the neighborhood came running to help when the ambulance drove up for Mr. Leach. They watched the house for her. "Two of my neighbors now have keys to my front door, and if I should turn on an outside light one of them would be over to see if I needed help.

"So I am able to stay on in my home, which would have been impossible except for the good neighbors."

WELCOMES ALL PEOPLE

Mrs. Leach tries to call on all new people moving into the neighborhood, both young and old, to welcome them and let them know she will be of any help she can. "I especially try to help people with younger children to repay in some small way the older people who smoothed the path for me when my children were small. I remember I said to one such neighbor at that time that I could never do anything in return for her because she was so efficient. She said, 'Along the way you will see some young neighbor you can help, and then you will be paying me back.'

"I see children doing things that are objectionable to me. I try to think of some of the terrible things neighbors put up with when they lived around my five little girls."

Mrs. Leach has little patience with unhappy retired people. "So many of them waste their time with self-pity that I'm sure when I run across them that they don't need any pity from me."

"We cannot change the world to our liking, but we can enjoy it while we are here. And we can refuse to take time to worry . . ."

By retirement age, she believes, people simply do not have time to worry or to complain.

"They can have good neighbors if they will try being one themselves for a change. They can have happiness if they'll stop chasing around trying to find it and come to understand it's in their own hearts."

BELLEVILLE TRANSIT COMMISSION

Do Not Have to Be Canadian To Vote in Election on Nov. 8

OTTAWA (CP) — You don't have to be a Canadian citizen to vote in the Nov. 8 election.

The Canada Elections Act states only that to qualify for voting a person must have been in Canada on the day the election writ was issued—Sept. 8—be 21 on voting day and a Canadian citizen or British subject with a year's residence in the country before the issue of the writ.

This means that aside from Canadian citizens, citizens of the United Kingdom and all Commonwealth countries, plus the republics of Ireland and South Africa, may vote if they meet the other rules.

No vote is permitted to visitors or to immigrants not yet Canadian citizens. A landed immigrant needs five years' residence in the country to qualify.

United States citizens are usually warned by their governments that they face loss of U.S. citizenship if they vote in a Canadian election.

Some Americans find their names mistakenly placed on the voters' lists. Although this is not proof they have voted, many ask the electoral revising officer to remove their names.

ALL INDIANS ELIGIBLE

In the 1962 election, all Canadian Indians were eligible to vote for the first time, provided they met the usual requirements. Until then, Indians living on reserves were considered wards of the government and, with certain exceptions, were denied the franchise.

Eskimos have had the franchise since 1953.

A person votes in the constituency where he was living when the writ was issued. If he moved after that date, Sept. 8, he must return to his former home to cast his ballot.

Clergymen and school teachers and their wives who take up new postings after the writs are issued are exempted from this provision. They are permitted to vote in their new constituency.

This election there is the problem of the student who was at home Sept. 8 when the writ was issued but who will be in another riding at school on election day. Because of complaints raised by students, the election act may be changed by a future Parliament when other revisions are made.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

QUESTION: We will be making a three-month trip through the United States, driving (loaded car) trails and plans, and would be very happy to know all about tips. Who to tip, when and how much? Could you please give us information as to the right thing to do? — Retired, Belleville.

ANSWER: The average American (contrary to the opinion which exists in some countries) does not tip to any great extent in his ordinary every-day life. However, it is customary to tip from 10 percent to 20 percent for meals served by waiters and waitresses in hotels and restaurants. A good general average would be 15 percent. Ordinarily no tips are required in connection with meals served in cafeterias where a person serves himself. At hotels, moderate tips such as 25 cents or more per bag or suitcase handled are in order for bellboys and others who perform special services. For the doorman, who handles the motorist's car to the garage for overnight storage and who helps load the car for luggage, about 50 cents.

The hotel bills in the United States do not have 10 percent service charge added to cover gratuities as in many European countries. Employees of hotels in the United States are paid somewhat higher wages than hotel employees in other countries, but, as stated above, tips are in order when hotel employees perform any special service for guests.

On railroad trains, no tips are expected from passengers travelling in day coaches (sometimes called second class), except when they eat in the dining car. Passengers travelling in Pullman cars (sleeping or parlor cars) usually tip the porter of their car when they leave the train. Passengers who eat in the dining cars on trains usually tip the waiter from 15 to 25 percent with a minimum of 25 cents. Of course, the porter who carries your bag at the station receives a tip, usually 25 cents per bag.

Stewardess and others on airplanes are not tipped. However, the porter who carries your bag at the airport should be tipped.

In taxicabs, passengers usually tip 10 percent to 20 percent. When purchasing gasoline and oil for the car at service stations or garages some Americans tip when the attendant puts air in their tires or performs some extra service for the motorists.

QUESTION: We are taking a holiday in Miami Beach, Florida. Could you give us the mileage. Your co-operation would be appreciated. — Mrs. R., Belleville.

ANSWER: Mileage to Miami Beach, Florida is approximately 1160 miles from Belleville via Ivy Lea Bridge. You will need two maps — Northeastern and Southeastern.

QUESTION: Kindly detail me the best route to Arizona via Detroit. We will be leaving the end of October. — G. A., Belleville.

ANSWER: The O.M.L. recommended route to Phoenix, Arizona, with entry point Detroit, is to take 25 and 75 through Toledo, Dayton and Cincinnati to Georgetown (near Lexington), 60 in Louisville, 31W to Bowling Green, 68 to Jackson, 40 to Memphis, Rt 79 again to Pine Bluff and Texarkana; 67 to Dallas, 80 through Fort Worth, Abilene, Odessa and El Paso to Tucson and 89 to Phoenix.

QUESTION: My wife and I are spending a few days in the United States shopping. How much can we bring back, and how long do we have to stay over there to do this? How many times a year are we allowed to do this? — T. J., Belleville

ANSWER: Coming back to Canada, a Canadian can bring in $25 worth of goods, provided he has been in the States 48 hours or more and has not exclaimed this exemption during the previous four months or the overseas exemption within the past year. Specific limits include 2 pounds of tobacco, 50 cigars or 200 cigarettes and a quart of alcohol.

Pan-Am Museum Recalls Early Days of Airlines

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

NEW YORK — Airport terminals, in this day of stretch-out airlines around the world, are just airport terminals. They're either old, dull and uncomfortable, or new, glamorous, and uncomfortable. There isn't much to do while waiting for your flight but browse through the paperback and the newsstand; some don't even have windows for watching the planes take off.

Watch the planes take off . . . Does it seem possible that only 30 years ago, 25,000 people perched on San Francisco Bay to watch a plane take off on a trans-Pacific flight, an occasion that is now so commonplace it happens several times a day?

Memories of those curious days are lovingly preserved in an airport terminal that is a little different: Pan American's John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York. A corner of the terminal is a museum called Clipper Hall, and not only is it a fascinating place to kill an hour waiting for a flight, but well worth a visit in itself.

It is easy to see that the location was not always with us. That it took a week to fly from California to Hawaii if the weather held up (today, 16 hours). That men of superhuman courage, vision, and perhaps a touch of madness scouted the world for landing places and built way stations on desert islands and seaside as the Pony Express stations of the unwilling plains.

That once in a while, Pan American Captain Marius Lodeesen, "air transport pioneer of early days" had the privilege of being tossed about in walloping clammy bouballs, buttoned into leather suits their laps, at the mercy of the elements and the skill of his crews.

"But," adds Captain Lodeesen, with perhaps a touch of nostalgia, "what a thrill to receive their tickets was adventure — the unexpected mixed with discomfort, splendid with dreams. Between departure and arrival anything could happen."

Which reminds me of the Pan Am captain who told us he never permitted his passengers off the plane in Central America until he stepped out to make sure a mysterious war was not going on. (To this day, Pan Am has a secret signal to advise its flight crews of trouble on the ground.)

On January 16, 1938, Pan American Airways inaugurated its first flight, a 41-minute hop from Key West, Florida, to Havana, the fare for which was $50 (twice today's fare from Miami to Havana). According to the log of the flight, on display in Clipper Hall, the trimotored Fokker F-7 carried seven passengers, included in the Pan Am founder and still chief executive officer Juan T. Trippe, plus 12 packages of newspapers.

Even more fascinating is the first tentative timetable issued by Pan Am for its only route (the line now serves more than 80 countries). It described the wood - and - fabric aircraft's "sturdy" yet graceful lines that impart such a definite impression of power and reliability," file "spacious and luxuriously furnished cabin (with) wicker chairs beautifully upholstered." One of the chairs is on display in the museum.

The brochure goes on to tell how after Honolulu the flight lifts the passengers comfortably to their seats and passes out magazines, and mentions proudly that it "absurdly simple" to adjust the windows for "a refreshing breath of cool air."

Bigger things were in store for the pioneering airline. By 1935 it was ready to cross the Pacific, after numerous survey trips and development of bases in such unheard of places as Wake, Midway, and Guam. The latter was performing a newspaper story of the day as an almost "forgotten through the centuries since its discovery by the rare sight of a passing ship did only reminder of the rest of the world . . ."

The historic 1935 first flight of the China Clipper was chronicled with detailed avid interest by the press. "With waving hands and hats, loud cheers and din of auto horns and whistles," reads a San Francisco clipping in the museum "several thousand San Francisans gathered on the Marina to bid farewell to the China Clipper on its epochal flight to the Orient yesterday. Colorful exercises entertained the crowd prior to the take-off of the giant transoceanic flier . . . Thousands of spectators shouted themselves hoarse."

Every detail of the plane's flight was noted in lengthy stories . . . winds, weather, speed, messages of good will, tumultuous welcoming celebrations along the way, even the news that San Francisco's city council would permit Pan Am to erect a radio direction-finder on the city's old sewage farm.

Flight officers were engaged by the press attempting to pump purplish accounts of the trip: "As the sun goes down, casting a glowing radiance over the white clouds beneath . . ." A navigation officer even reminisced about the take-off: "Just a minute from Golden Gate to Diamond Head. Or, the last trip to Honolulu — aboard a square rigger!"

But the early flying years peel off in Clipper Hall. There are antique-looking radio communications devices, instead of the used to summon passengers to planes before the days of public address systems; navigational signal flags that were the "control towers" of their day; a huge globe that reveals how to Juan Trippe's roll-top desk (also in the museum) on which he personally plotted Pan America's new routes for 13 years. Vast areas of the world were uncharted, and it was not when Pan Am first considered flying to and over them.

Today Pan American operates more than 60 huge jet aircraft, the tails of which are about the size of each of the two "spacious and luxurious" F-7s that got the line in business.

But who knows? The way things are going, those 707s and DC-8s will probably look just as quaint by comparison in 30 years.

CLUB 4-H NOTES

BETHEL - ZION TEA POTS

BETHEL - ZION — At the second meeting of Bethel-Zion 4-H Club the name chosen was "Bethel-Zion Tea Pots." The 14 members present, demonstrated how to pack an overnight bag, the group practised writing thank-you notes for an imaginary visit, and discussed how to entertain a guest properly and how to be a well-mannered guest.

At the third meeting, Mrs. Ray taught the girls how to set a table properly. They practised their table manners while serving from the left. All members of the club were present for this meeting.

OPERATION CROSSROADS AFRICA

"This African students are most interesting to talk to and I've learned about the country through them . . . and, as well, I've told them about my country. This exchange of ideas is the most valuable part of Crossroads." — Julie Bradford.

* * *

"It is no exaggeration to say that it is the rainy season in our area. It has rained every day this week," writes Julie Bradford, (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bradford, 298 Albert Street,) from Africa in her letter dated July 11, describing her work this summer in Dahomey where she was met by Crossroads.

This organization selects its participants carefully. Selection and training process is rigorous. A thoroughly comprehensive application is followed by interview and reference checks, we are informed. This is necessary in order to secure applicants who demonstrate a high level of scholarship, an interest in foreign affairs, a record of constructive extra-curricular ability to relate to persons of other than their own racial, social, religious and economic group.

Candidates, once selected, embark on an intensive study of African affairs, including reading, language and a term paper.

Thus Julie, being a successful candidate who majored in French at Western University from which she had graduated, was sent to Dahomey, a French-speaking African country.

In her letter she continues:

"Actually, it has been wonderful weather for working. On, the other hand, instead of rain we were unable to work at all. The rest of the week we worked right through the frequent periodic cloud-bursts. Although there has been little direct sun, we've all become a pinky color so this gradual 'getting used to' the unaccustomed sun is sun's rays is to our advantage

"We have the trenches of the foundation dug — at last. Monday we hope to start pouring cement, although after last night's rain, I'm sure we'll have more digging to do. The boys do most of the heavy work. We (girls) spent most of this week raking the earth and spreading it around.

The trenches are about 40 inches deep and 18 inches wide. This we'll fill with cement and put a layer of concrete-blocks on top of this. We spread the earth that was dug on the floors-to-be of the houses. We'll have to add more so that they will be level with the cement blocks. Then we pour a floor. We can hardly wait to see the walls go up.

SPEAK DIALECTS

"Apart from the students, there are a few people with whom we can communicate as they all speak a dialect. However, many French words have been incorporated and I find I can carefully learn understand the main theme of the conversation and we are able to have discussion!

"The African students are interesting to talk to and I've learned about the country through them . . . government, economy, religion, socialism . . . and, as well, I've told them about my country. Because of the change of ideas is the most valuable part of Crossroads.

"Dahomian society is very social-ism as the only way of overcoming extreme poverty and unemployment. Capitalism is communism, they want to preserve freedom of religion, speech, etc.

"However, at the present, Dahomey is a one-party state and this situation seems to exist in most of the African countries. Many people confuse the socialism advocated in a unitary state with communism, but I am learning that it is not at all the same thing.

"Our work day begins about 9 a.m. Around 12-12:30 we break for lunch — usually bread and cheese or meat and eggs, fruit (bananas which I'm learning to like — or oranges) which by the way are green and not orange-skinned as we buy them!) About one and a half hours later we recommence and work until 4:30 or 5:00.

"Supper is at seven and so by the time the dishes are done and I wash a cake and we undress, a card, the verse on which the rest of the week is built, we can boys seeing our way of saying "Happy Birthday" proceeded to sing it through. One boy stepped out and picked some beautiful flowers and brought them to the birthday girl who stood up and sang the most touching song about these flowers of Dahomey and then they all danced. After supper we danced. They had borrowed a record-player and records from the village and some of their dances. These boys are leaving next weekend and will be replaced by four other students who can give two or three weeks of their vacation to work with us.

"It is Monday now — things are on the plane tomorrow. No work today because it is pouring. You can't believe how much water there is on the ground. The ground can absorb no more — streets and paths are flooded. Some roads are impassable, but life goes on despite this. People cover their heads with shirts and wait patiently for the rains to stop. The irony of it all is that in a few months here will be a dry season and during this period of four months or so there is no rain, everything becomes parched. What an imbalance exists in nature!"

PORTO NOVO UNIVERSITY

July 18: "This afternoon our counterparts took us to see the school and the building of Porto Novo's university—le Lycee, the first in Dahomey. It is a beautiful structure, modern and tastefully decorated.

"Though we were delayed in our work to do the late arrival of materials, we finally set into hard work, pouring cement. We have the mixer and carry the cement to the trenches from it in rectangular baskets. The last half dozen of the trenches with this and tomorrow we start laying blocks to the completed area as the foundation just above ground for the floor. It's fun working!"

July 21: "The African Market is a typical scene. Although it is there for some stores, the majority of the buying and selling is transacted in the market itself or from little stands which are numerous at every road.

"People buy for the day only and there is much activity at these stands where everything is sold; — prepared foods, bananas, pineapple, soda-pop, canned meat, trinkets, household items, clothes, and

P.M.'s $14,000-a-year Girl Friday Has Worked for Pearson 17 Years

Although she has had a long professional association with the man almost constantly in the public eye, few Canadians would recognize Mary Elizabeth Macdonald on sight.

She's the girl from North Cobalt, Ont., who worked her way up through the civil service from a Grade 4 clerk (salary $1,020 in 1940) to become executive assistant to the prime minister.

Miss Macdonald, who now earns close to $14,000 a year, has managed to stay almost completely out of the limelight during the 17 years she has worked for Lester Pearson.

"I don't like to talk about myself," she said gently but firmly in an interview.

Like many successful executive assistants, Mary Macdonald is a bit of an enigma. The personal mannerisms and physical image of her boss are more important to her than the freedom to be a celebrity in public.

SAYS LITTLE

She won't say much more about her job than that it is exciting and challenging.

Her dedication is reflected in the fact that she has only a purloined leg injury interferes with her work during the Nov. 8 election campaign.

In late August she snapped a leg tendon while playing with her young nieces and nephews and later developed a sprained ankle as well when the pressure of work kept her from resting.

She may be on crutches for a few weeks, but "I certainly don't intend to let the grass grow down." And she will probably go with the prime minister on all his trips to his new Northern Ontario constituency of Algoma East where she does a great deal of organizational work.

Miss Macdonald, 47, is a short, attractive woman with a friendly round face and sparkling brown eyes. She has a gilly manner and speaks quietly, but she also has the firmness of one accustomed to giving orders.

DRESSES SIMPLY

Her medium brown hair, now touched with grey, curls gently around her face. She wears it slicked and short — "I haven't much time to go to the hairdresser."

She lives in two offices — in separate buildings on Parliament Hill. From her desk in the East Block she can look out on the Peace Tower. From the other office, next to the prime minister's on the second floor of the Centre Block, she can make her other items.

"Many people seem 'to eat out' in that they stop at one of these stands to eat. You can buy roasted corn, accasa — a paste-like food made from corn which is served with hot sauce, manaik bread, cubes of deep-fried potatoes, other bread-like foods, fruit and peanuts. Fish and chicken are staple meat products, but these are not served in the home. Rice, too, is widely used.

"Things are going very well now, we are optimistic about finishing the clinic before leaving for home.

July 23: "The coast line of Dahomey is beautiful. We are a few kilometers from the sea in Porto Novo, but Cotonou, the country's seaport is right on the coast. It used to be an active slave-trading centre years ago and thus the name — Colonou — "Port of Death." We have been to the beach . . . it is all sandy and perfect for surf bathing . . .

U.C. Women Sponsor Cafe Art Exhibition

By RETA LAWRENCE

To enter the auditorium of Tabernacle United Church on Wednesday afternoon was to be transported to a sidewalk cafe on the left bank of the Seine.

The Cafe Art Show was presented by Ruth Eight of the United Church Women of Tabernacle Church. This energetic group is comprised mostly of business girls of Belleville and its president is Mrs. Margret Joseph.

ENJOY REFRESHMENTS

After a close-up view of the paintings on display an intertude with small cakes and coffee afforded an opportunity for the artists to acquire a more realistic perspective of the paintings. The refreshments were served at small red and white checkered tables amid a profusion of blossoms.

ARTIST MEDIA

Demonstrative of the great scope and talent were the many media used to create the pictures in this most attractive showing. There were oils, pastels, water colors, acrylics, collages and monotypes, each projecting its own beauty and imagination.

The late Sir Winston Churchill said, "If it weren't for my painting I could not endure the strain of things." It is obvious that many citizens concur with his philosophy and find pleasure, relaxation, fulfillment and monetary gain with a palette before an easel.

A Lift for Living

Need Inexhaustable Springs To Refresh Inner Life

By REV. HAROLD R. KOHN

The past summer was almost victoriously dry in some parts of America. In the U.S. Midwest, where I live, farms suffered from lack of sufficient moisture to produce good crops and to slake the thirst of livestock.

While driving in the country last summer I saw the parched, stony beds of vanished streams. Then I returned to my study and was gratified to find there as my doorstep Hidden Brook, alive and well. Sometimes this little stream was running low, its tinkling laughter less gay than usual, but it never allowed its spirits to be entirely subdued.

The reason our stream keeps on flowing through hot weather and drought, when water tables are generally low and when so many other brooklets have entirely evaporated, is that this brook has its source in inexhaustible springs. These natural fountains rise only half a mile to the east of our study.

NEED RELIABLE SOURCE

If we are to face life's dry spells and endure them without withering or becoming bitter, we will all need to find the kind of dependability that is represented by a spring-fed stream. One reason for the anxiety of our times is that so many people are seeking satisfaction in streams that easily evaporate. They are counting too much on perishable popularity, on impermanent health, on fleeting successes, and they are seeking gratification in passing pleasures. And all the while they are plagued with the haunting fear, "Suppose something happens . . . suppose I lose what I have . . . ?"

Anyone who looks for an abundance of absolutes in this life is bound for disappointment. Youth passes quickly. Remember your first "puppy love" affair and how you thought it would last forever? Some ideas, like the inevitability of "progress" are fashionable in one generation and obsolete in the next. But, thank God, there are some spring-fed streams that do not run dry. They are rare, but they do exist, and we need to find them.

FRIENDSHIP AN AID

Our God-given capacity for friendship is a dependable stream. In friendship we — like thirsty creatures coming to water — can always find refreshment, allowing us to return to our duties and our work mentally stimulated, reassured that life is good, our joys redoubled, our griefs assuaged, our sympathies broadened and our understanding deepened. To be sure, friends may come and go; we can lose this friend or that one, perhaps through tragic misunderstanding, perhaps through death. But we need not lose our capacity for friendship. Indeed we dare not, for it is one of the streams that keeps the soul alive. The friendly person will find friendship a brook that never runs dry.

God's goodness is inexhaustible. No drought of disappointment or doubt can dry it up. His goodness continues to flow through our days even when we ignore it, just as a spring-fed brook continues to run when we forget about it. But if we crave refreshment in our tomorrows, we will find it in the awareness that when our present strength is spent, God will make more power available. Faith in the future comes from knowing that God is a resource that never runs dry, that His mercy is beyond the blight of drought, that His love is unending and that His grace will flow through the fields and forests of human need now and forever.

Trainmen To Draft Demands

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — General chairmen of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen (CLC) will meet in Ottawa next week to put together a new set of contract demands to be served on the major railways next month.

A "very sizable" wage increase likely will dominate the demands, W. P. Kelly, vice-president of the 20,000-member union, said Friday in an interview.

He said the BRT's 10 general chairmen have already indicated that they will seek a pay boost well above the 12-per-cent request made in the last negotiations with the railways two years ago. That time the union finally settled for five per cent, spread over a two-year contract that expires Dec. 31 this year.

Mr. Kelly said the union is not likely to settle for five per cent this time.

BARGAINS FOR TRAINMEN

The BRT bargains for conductors, trainmen and yardmen. The BRT package will be only part of an immense wage demand to be served on the railways Nov. 1 and 2.

Contracts with the 15 unions representing 100,000 non-operating railway employees also expire at the end of this year and this group is planning to go after big wage gains. An average wage of the non-ops now is about $2.20 an hour.

The BRT and the Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) has announced it will seek a 35-hour, 90 cents an hour for its 22,000 members, all employed on the CNR.

With freight rates frozen, the railways are certain to turn down all the requests and fight the whole problem into the government's lap early in 1966.

Wagner Says

through phoney bankruptcies.

Mr. Wagner said Friday that authorities "are not surprised at the "violent reaction" of the underworld as the law draws closer to the ringleaders.

"I hope there will be as few deaths as possible," he said, "but on the other hand we simply must not forget that these people are playing for big stakes. It is them or us."

The Justice minister also disclosed in an interview that there have been threats on the lives of two Crown prosecutors involved in the investigation—Anatole Cohen, chief Crown prosecutor, and Roch Lefrancois, deputy Crown prosecutor.

Both men and their families were "well protected" under heavy police guard.

Meanwhile, a Justice department spokesman said there are indications that Paul Chandonnet, a Sherbrooke businessman whose body was found in the Sherbrooke area Thursday, was the most recent victim in the underworld purge of potential witnesses.

Chandonnet, 38, who owned a Sherbrooke snack bar, was reported missing Sept. 25 and was believed killed two days later. His quicklime - covered body was found in a wooded area near the village of Hampsted 30 miles northeast of Sherbrooke, and a revolver was found buried under a few inches of soil nearby.

The Justice department spokesman said Chandonnet played an active role in the arms-bankruptcy ring and was to have been a witness in cases currently before the courts.

that the Liberal government would give priority to Canadians of English and French background and make others "secondary citizens."

Addressing more than 200 persons in the town hall, he was cheered loudly when he used some Ukrainian phrases and recalled that he learned the language without much difficulty as a boy in Saskatchewan.

CITES RIGHTS BILL

"I set out in life to do one thing—equalize the rights of everyone regardless of their ethnic background . . . it ended with the Bill of Rights."

At every stop, Mr. Diefenbaker ridiculed the Liberals' two leading campaigners in the West, Agriculture Minister Hays and Mr. Sharp, and criticized the government for the drop in wheat prices.

He said Mr. Sharp had "declamped" to Toronto because he was in trouble in his own riding of Eglinton, where Conservative President Dalton Camp is running.

In London, Ont., Mr. Sharp said Mr. Diefenbaker's attacks on Prime Minister Pearson will backfire. "How low can a politician stoop in his search for an issue?"

He knew no one who had done more than Mr. Pearson to raise the standards of public life. The prime minister might have faults, but lack of integrity was not one of them.

DEMAND INQUIRY

Mr. Thompson and New Democratic Leader Douglas joined the Conservatives in demanding a public inquiry into organized crime and its alleged links with the Liberal party.

"The Liberal government has failed on its record of dealing with graft and corruption," Mr. Thompson said. If the Mafia was making inroads in Canada, the public should know about it.

While the hot controversies raged around him, Mr. Pearson flew back to Ottawa after completing a three-day campaign swing in Northern Ontario and Manitoba.

He issued a press release announcing that 24 towns across the country will get home mail delivery in the near future. "unspicuous in the list was Matane, Que., trading centre of the riding where Postmaster-General Rene Tremblay is seeking re-election.

Mr. Pearson was at home today writing speeches. He prepared for a cabinet meeting Monday and returns to the campaign trail Tuesday at a Quebec City rally.

Mr. Diefenbaker was whistle-stopping from Winnipeg to Watrous, Sask. Mr. Douglas was campaigning in Vancouver. Mr. Thompson was meeting Social Credit candidates in Toronto and Mr. Caouette was stumping the Eastern Townships of Quebec.

Will Discuss Crime Aspects In Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Cardin announced Friday that provincial attorneys - general will meet federal authorities here Dec. 2-3 to discuss all aspects of crime in Canada.

Mr. Cardin announced the dates in an interview but said details of the conference agenda must await further correspondence with the attorneys-general.

Neilsen Wants Sweeping Probe Of All Crime

VANCOUVER (CP) — Erik Nielsen called again Friday for a royal commission investigation of crime in Canada.

Mr. Nielsen, Progressive Conservative member of the last Parliament for the Yukon, said at a press conference such an inquiry should deal not only with the current investigation in Quebec of fraudulent bankruptcies but with all crime — "including dope" — that could have an effect on any level of government.

He said:

"There is no doubt in my mind that the killings in Quebec are the result of the same kind of international crime cartel that reached its tentacles into the office of the prime minister."

Mr. Nielsen made it plain that he was comparing the Quebec bankruptcy investigation with the Lucien Rivard affair earlier this year.

He said today no action contained in one report of the Sedkind brothers bankruptcy case is sufficient. If substantiated, for charges to be laid under the criminal code. He was "in a position to know" that all the three bankruptcy reports involving Max and Adolph Sefkind who sold furniture on credit to two federal cabinet ministers. Max Sefkind has since died.

Mr. Nielsen would not say that he has seen the reports although he gave the numbers of them in Justice department files. The reports were made by the superintendent of bankruptcies in Ottawa.

In Lindsay, Ont. Tuesday, Mr. Nielsen said recent events in Quebec had strengthened his conviction that a royal commission should be established to study crime and in Toronto Thursday he said Prime Minister Pearson should order an RCMP investigation into the bankruptcy of the Sefkinds.

Board Sets Stage for Unions' Battle

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canada Labor Relations Board has set the stage for the first round in a series of representation battles between two unions representing the men who operate railway locomotives.

The board announced Friday it has ordered a vote among 30 engineers on the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway to decide whether they want to stick with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (Ind.) or switch to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (CLC).

Traditionally, the BLE has bargained for engineers and the BLFE for firemen.

In recent months each has made applications to the board to take over the other's membership.

The firemen's union holds the current contract for firemen of Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo and claimed in its application that it had signed up more than half of the engineers on this line as well.

The engineers' union, meanwhile, is applying to the board for the right to represent all firemen on the CNR and CPR.

West Canada Orphan Says Diefenbaker

By STEWART MacLEOD

WINNIPEG (CP) — Armed with his "policies for the people," Conservative Leader Diefenbaker today was beginning his whistle-stopping trek across the Prairies to tell farmers that under Liberalism Western Canada is "a forgotten orphan."

The 70-year-old former prime minister Friday night warned that no one knows what's in store for western farmers if the Liberal government should come out of the Nov. 8 general election with a majority.

"The risk is too great," he told his audience at Steinbach, a town about 30 miles southeast of here. He reminded farmers that it was his Conservative government that brought prosperity to the West after the "forgotten years" of Liberal rule.

It was one of the quietest audiences Mr. Diefenbaker has faced so far in the campaign. The auditorium's capacity is double, organizers variously estimated the crowd at between 600 and 900.

Getting into the heart of Canada's agriculture area, Mr. Diefenbaker attacked the government's alleged neglect of the West, and he said wheat farmers had been played in the hands of a millionaire and a Bay Street baron.

HAYS AND SHARP

The millionaire was Agriculture Minister Hays. Trade Minister Sharp was the Bay Street baron.

Mr. Diefenbaker began laying the groundwork for his attack on the Liberal agriculture program earlier in the day when he went on a street-car and speaking through a series of nearby towns.

The Tory farmers $130,000,000 by cutting the price of wheat," he told some 200 people in the Bonnetsaut town hall. "And they say it's good for you."

As in earlier speeches, Mr. Diefenbaker lashed out at the government over the "honesty in government" issue, calling it "a frightful story."

"This is your country and my country. This thing must be cleaned up or the very tissue of Canada's future and reputation will be irreparably destroyed."

Sharp Calls Diefenbaker's Tactics Vicious

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Trade Minister Sharp Friday night lashed out at Conservative Leader Diefenbaker for his "vicious and unprincipled kind of electioneering" in what the minister termed a desperate attempt to find a campaign issue.

"How low can a politician stoop in his search for an issue?" Mr. Sharp asked a crowd of about 300 at a Liberal rally.

"I warn him the attacks on Prime Minister Pearson) will backfire," the minister said.

He said Mr. Pearson might have faults, but lack of integrity was not one of them. He knew of no one who has done more than the prime minister to raise the standards of public morals.

Point Anne

POINT ANNE — Mr. Murney Green Sr., who recently underwent surgery at Belleville General Hospital, has returned home.

Mrs. Jack Clarke and family have moved to a new home in Belleville. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Moon and family have moved into the Clarke residence.

Friends of David Kingston held a stag party for him in the Parish Hall on Friday evening. They presented him with a lovely gift.

Mr. Stewart DeRuhle is recuperating following recent surgery.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Chisholm have moved to the east end of the village.

Mr. Frank MacDonald and Mr. Manson MacDonald are home again after a time spent in hospital.

Friends gathered at the Parish Hall on Tuesday evening to hold a community shower for Miss Carolyn Chisholm who is soon being married. Euchre was played and the winners were: first Miss Penny Hart; second, Mrs. Vina Ellis; consolation, Mrs. Jean Walsh. Mrs. Vina Ellis won the lone hand.

A number of girls in town who are studying electronics at Moira Secondary School went to Cornwall by bus this week and toured some plants there.

Tuesday the Cementmen won the Community Hall display golf game and it seemed the entire village turned up to cheer their heroes.

On Wednesday evening the Canada Cement Company held a banquet at the Hotel Quinte to honor the men who have spent 25 years and more in their employment. Watches were presented to the new men just reaching their 25th year and the wives and widows of other members were remembered with gifts.

Members of the Point Anne Fire Department were invited to Batawa where they were guests of the Batawa Fire Department for the monthly meeting of the Inland Aid on Wednesday evening.

SEARCH FOR MISSILES

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP)—The U.S. Army is looking for another missile which missed its target. Last weekend, a geology student located one of the $750,000 Pershing missiles while doing field work near Creede, Colo. He collected a $200 reward. Now the army is hunting for a Pershing which was destroyed in flight after malfunctions last Wednesday.

Unite Milk Trade In Northumberland

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's first county-wide milk producing organization dealing with all aspects of production has been set up in Northumberland County, the agriculture department said Friday.

W. L. Moore of Cobourg, Ont., was elected chairman of the new organization, amalgamating bottling, cheese making and ice cream making.

A marketing board is also being set up to buy all milk and sell it for farmers. It will replace organizations of producers which sold milk for specific uses.

How are you going to feed her?

Sometimes it takes drought conditions like those suffered in Eastern Ontario to make dairymen appreciate the value of forage feed produced in their fields. Every extra mouthful you produce helps keep outside purchases down.

To get more forage from your fields you need an Agrico Fall Fertilizer Program. It will pay off in extra yield, extra grazing days and extra feed value for the animal.

Fellow Constituents:

I have been named once more Liberal candidate for Hastings South.

It is claimed so far in this campaign, that no man can serve two masters. Yet that, and more, is the vital role of a Member of Parliament today.

An MP must guard the interests of his constituents at home; must make himself regularly available there to discuss their problems and seek individual solutions. In Ottawa he must lobby for them.

The Parliament of Canada is the highest council in the land. Today, vital new forces are bidding for its recognition.

In 1965 an MP must be aware of these things:

(1) His constituents must be personally and individually represented — and aided — at the seat of national government.

(2) His constituents represent a sizeable segment of public opinion. Today, in national affairs, he must represent them in a way that gains them respected attention as a forceful majority in his riding.

It is the basic duty of an MP to guard the interests of his constituents.

Further he must also make his constituents count as a forceful unit in national government through his representation.

In my comparatively brief term (1963-65) of office these are the principles I've believed in and pursued with all the resources I could find to hand.

For the good of all of us my objective has been: TO MAKE SOUTH HASTINGS COUNT IN OTTAWA.

A Canadian MP must therefore diligently serve not one — but three — masters: His riding, his individual constituent and his country.

At this time in our national affairs, the candidate who most closely measures up to these principles is the one who must be elected for South Hastings this November 8th.

Robert TEMPLE
LIBERAL

Robarts

are a new division of revenue between the provinces and the federal government; the desire of the provinces to control their own economic development, and the question of bicultralism.

He stressed Ontario's dissatisfaction with existing tax-sharing agreements and said "diligent and searching negotiations" are in store when Ontario sits down with the provinces in 1967 to work out a new arrangement.

Provincial revenues were inadequate to maintain services that must be provided by the provinces under the existing division of responsibilities between the federal and provincial governments.

Mr. Roberts said Ontario still recognizes that the federal government has the right to make equalization payments among the provinces in order to maintain national standards in all parts of Canada.

"Ontario respects the primacy of the federal government in the field of economic policy for the benefit of the country," he said.

He said the people of Ontario would go a long way to recognize the special status of Quebec in terms of language and culture, but they could not accept a federal system that was not based on a single national economy.

Mr. Robarts stressed the need for economic consultation. No longer would Ontario accept "any policy decisions made by the federal government that affect matters under our jurisdiction unless we have been extended the common courtesy of prior consultation."

Dealing with constitutional amendments he said no change in the British North America Act should violate Quebec's special status.

The crux of the problem facing Canada's two main cultural groups was their inability to communicate with each other, Mr. Roberts said. He described communications "the key to the future of the Canadian nation."

And he delivered this message to Quebec for a starter: "We do not find ourselves in agreement with the proposition that the Quebec government in any way represents the interests of French-speaking Canadians living in any other province of Canada."

Mr. Robarts said pre-conceived ideas that Ontario's English Canadians are alone in looking for changes in the basic structure of the nation are no longer relevant. No province is satisfied with tax - sharing agreements for "varying reasons."

Ontario is convinced the provincial economy exists as a part of the national economy. "If you accept the argument that provincial governments must have control over fiscal policy to pursue the development of 10 different provincial economies, then it becomes only a matter of time until Canada exists merely as a political system without the sinews of a national economy to weld it together as a whole," he said.

Although Ontario is prepared to go to great lengths to recognize French - Canada's rights, Mr. Robarts expressed serious doubt whether his province can accept a federal system which isn't based on the principle of a single national economy controlled by a single national government.

Social and economic policy decisions taken by one government affect the policies of all other governments.

This makes consultation on economic policy essential, Mr. Roberts said.

"The Ontario government will not longer accept any policy decisions made by the federal government that affect matters under our jurisdiction unless we have been extended the common courtesy of prior consultation."

Biculturalism in Canada is a key problem because no pat answers exist toward finding a solution. Establishing a single Canadian national identity doesn't mean assimilation of

Income Tax Explained

REAPIR AND APPLIANCE SERVICE MEN

Expenses allowable to repair and service employees will depend entirely on their employment contract or agreement with their employer. Should the employer supply the vehicle and pay all the expenses connected therewith, then the employee would have no claim at all except the cost of a meal if he was away for over 12 hours.

On the other hand, if the employee is required to supply his own car and pay all the costs of its operation then he may deduct all his car expenses applicable to the extent it is used to earn his income. When the taxpayer is entitled to car expenses he may also claim depreciation on the car at 30 percent of the car's value when first used for business; this also applies to the portion of its use to earn the income.

Expenses may not be claimed on a mileage basis. It is the actual outlay that is deductible. When a vehicle is used partly for business and partly for pleasure, it is up to the taxpayer to determine what percentage of the car's operation in the year was for business. If the car was used to 50 percent for business, then the taxpayer may claim one half of the cost of operating the car, including one half of the depreciation. He should submit some proof by way of receipts to verify any claim he may make.

I receive a number of letters each year from repair and service men asking if the cost of tools or depreciation on them may be claimed as a deduction. The answer is always no. There is no provision in the Income Tax Act whereby an employee can be allowed a deduction of this nature.

For a personal reply, enclose a self-addressed, five cent stamped envelope, plus 25 cents for each question.

Question 1: I am a television service man. Occasionally I sell a new set and my employer pays me a bonus. Is this bonus taxable?

Answer: Yes. It must be added to your income.

Question 2: I am an appliance service man. I have the use of my employer's station wagon on weekends. $100 is shown on my T4 slip for this use. Must I add this in?

Answer: Yes. It is considered income.

French Canada by the English.

It simply means that both ethnic groups should think of themselves as full partners in the Canadian nation.

"It is, therefore, much more than a recognition of the French language in public documents," Mr. Robarts said. "It is a matter of breaking down the barriers that block the effective communication between people."

Britain warned that economic sanctions would cripple Rhodesia, internally self - governing since 1923.

Britain at present takes 30 per cent of Rhodesia's exports including 40 per cent of the vital tobacco crop.

Even in Rhodesia, some voices were raised against independence on these terms. The Bulawayo Chronicle said that if the threat of a unila'eral declaration is discarded "a concerted sign of relief would go up."

The Rhodesia Herald urges that if Smith planned any such action, he should prove his public support by having a vote on the question.

Even if he had public support before going to London, the paper said, he might not have it now that his demands had been firmly refused by Britain.

Graham Takes Exception to Sharp Criticism

TORONTO (CP) — Lt. - Gen. Howard Graham, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, said Friday he is taking "the strongest possible exception" to criticism levelled against the exchange by Mr. Justice Kelley in his royal commission report on Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd.

Mr. Justice Kelley said in his report to the Ontario government, released Thursday, that the TSE was fully responsible for the continued trading in shares of Windfall while they rose spectacularly in July 1964.

The exchange's argument that the Ontario Securities Commission had assumed control of trading in the stock was rejected by the commissioner.

"The exchange's responsibility cannot be lessened by anything that was done by the commission or in its name," he said in his report.

Gen Graham said in Friday's statement: "It is difficult to understand how the commissioner is justified in placing responsibility for continued trading subsequent to July 6 upon the exchange."

The disputed responsibility occurred July 10, 1964, when the exchange demanded the Windfall company dispel market rumors within three days by issuing a statement of assay results of ore samples from their property near Timmins or trading in the stock would be suspended.

Gen. Graham said the exchange would have suspended trading in Windfall's shares if the securities commission had not intervened.

Federal Candidates Will Lose Deposits Totalling $100,000

OTTAWA (CP) — All candidates in the Nov. 8 general election must pay a $200 deposit and, on the basis of recent elections, chances are that between one-third and one-half of the total deposit money will remain in the federal treasury.

The deposits, intended to discourage mischief-making candidates from entering the election, are returned if the candidate polls at least half as many votes as the winner in the riding.

Almost half the candidates in the 1963 election—509 of 1,025—lost deposits, an increase over 1962 when 463 of 1,018 lost theirs. The 1963 total topped the old record of 462 in 1945.

Highest number of losers was in the New Democratic Party. Of its 232 candidates, 193 lost deposits.

In the last election, Social Credit included what now is th Quebec Creditiste group led b Real Caouette which broke away from leader Robert Thompson a few months later.

Heaviest Liberal losses were in the West, where the party lost deposits in 12 Alberta and 10 Saskatchewan ridings. For the Conservatives, the roughest sledding was in Quebec where 33 candidates lost deposits.

The NDP lost deposits in 61 Ontario and 61 Quebec ridings. Social Credit in 68 Ontario and 33 Quebec ridings.

Thirty-five of 39 Independent and Communist candidates lost theirs.

TREASURY GAINED

The amount retained by the federal treasury totalled $101,800.

By party, the financial losses were: Liberals $5,600, Conservatives $17,000, Social Credit $52,800, NDP $28,800, Independents and Communist $7,000. Four candidates who withdrew early did not appear in the election results but lost their deposits anyway.

Breakdown of lost deposits by parties and provinces:

Conservatives: Newfoundland 5, New Brunswick 2, Quebec 33, Ontario 17, B.C. 8.

NDP: Newfoundland 3, Prince Edward Island 4, New Brunswick 7, Nova Scotia 8, Quebec 61, Ontario 61, Manitoba 11, Saskatchewan 17, Alberta 17, B.C. 4.

Social Credit: New Brunswick 3, Nova Scotia 2, Quebec 30, Ontario 68, Manitoba 12, Saskatchewan 16, Alberta 7, B. C. 15, Yukon 1.

Independent: Newfoundland 1, Quebec 9, Ontario 7, Manitoba 1, Saskatchewan 1, Alberta 2, B. C. 3.

Distribution of Commons seats by provinces: Newfoundland 7, Prince Edward Island 4, Nova Scotia 12, New Brunswick 10, Quebec 75, Ontario 85, Manitoba 14, Saskatchewan 17, Alberta 17, B. C. 22, Yukon 1, N.W.T. 1, total 265.

The $200 deposit has been in effect since 1874. However, accurate records date back only to 1911.

Number of lost deposits in previous elections: 1911, 33; 1917, 170; 1921, 197; 1925, 113; 1926, 76; 1930, 74; 1935, 407; 1940, 183; 1949, 333; 1953, 404; 1957, 342; 1958, 366; 1962, 461; 1963, 509.

The Canada Pension Plan and its benefits

Mike works in a plant where the normal retirement age is 62. If he continues to work until age 62 at the above salary, at age 65 he will receive a Canada Pension Plan retirement pension of $100 a month plus $75 a month Old Age Security. The retirement pension is the same as he would receive if he worked until age 65 because under the Plan a certain number of years of low or no earnings do not affect the amount of the pension.

Should Mike die anytime after 1967, having contributed until his death, his wife will receive a widow's pension of $62.50 a month providing she has young children to support. She will also be entitled to $25 a month for each child, which means that if she has three dependent children, her monthly income from the Plan will be $137.50. At the time of Mike's death, Mrs. Thomas will also receive a lump sum payment of $500.

Benefits for children cease when they reach 18, or 25 if they continue full-time education. If Mrs. Thomas is over 45 when her youngest child reaches age 18, she will continue to receive a widow's pension of $62.50 a month until she is 65. From then on she will get $75 a month from Old Age Security, plus a widow's pension of $60 a month—a total of $135 a month.

All benefits under the Plan will maintain their value. The actual benefits payable will probably be higher than those given here since benefits will be adjusted to meet changes in living costs and in wage levels before they are paid and changes in living costs after they become payable.

What will the Plan cost you?

If you, like Mike, are employed and have earnings of $4,800 spread evenly over the year, you will pay at the rate of $1.45 a week. Your employer will pay the same amount.

This advertisement is one of a series which relates some of the important benefits of the Canada Pension Plan to individual circumstances.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver

Keen-eyed Fearless Fosdicks of the conservation staff of the Department of Lands and Forests are keeping wary watch for neophyte hikmeds, who take potshots at anything that flies and bears a reasonable resemblance to a duck.

And that goes for some of the wily wary veteran ducksters whose appetite for roast whatsit overrules their sense of hunting fairness and conservation knowhow.

I see where on opening day a hunter was apprehended by officers for having shot a pied-billed grebe. He said he didn't know what it was. It was just a bird. It was swimming, looked like a duck so he blasted it.

Much has been written and aired and emphasis placed on safety regulations. The Ten Commandments of Hunting are published annually in the public prints. Schools are held periodically to teach young hunters how to handle their firearms and how to use them.

But little or nothing regarding identification outside of being advised to study the regulations, and colored chart of the wildlife which are "fair game" so to speak.

The opening day incident of the pied-billed grebe is another revival of the hoary cliche "ignorance of the law is no excuse."

I am not condoning the shooting of protected wildlife.

Hunters should check the regulations and abide by them. Many keen-eyed veterans can identify the proper game to shoot when on the wing or otherwise.

Hunting is increasing in popularity each year by leaps and bounds. This is indicated by the large number of teen-age lads who apply for licences and purchase their first shotgun or rifle.

They're all set—and naturally a little trigger-happy on their first invasion of the deer-runway or the duck haunt.

Yet he is subject to apprehension and punitive measures if he knocks down a pied-billed grebe. I know he should know better but a little assistance from governmental people in the identification of proper game would help no end.

Lands and Forests conservation officers sometimes draw criticism from law-breaking hunters. These are people who deliberately break the law for selfish purposes and resent being called to the act.

I have worked in co-operation with L. and F. people for many years and found them to be fair, dedicated men who have a job to do—and do it. A lawbreaking simmer is just that to them regardless of social background or his place in the workaway world. I have yet to meet one who has shown "favoritism."

They remind hunters, young and old that the regulations' summary clearly outlines what can be hunted. Duck, geese, rails, coots, gallinules, Wilson's snipe and woodcock are likely to be taken and on which there is a daily bag limit. Merganzers can be killed but are not included in the bag limit. They are considered to be game and as such should not be wasted.

And trigger-happy hunters who shoot for shooting sake and bring down a "mallard" or "black" which proves to be an eagle, hawk, osprey, owl or a vulture, are headed for deadly trouble. If a departmental sleuth catches them—they've had it and so has the taxidermist who mounted it for the family mantel-piece.

Pledge $500,000 For Centre

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government pledged $500,000 Friday toward the cost of a new civic centre in Ottawa that will house a football stadium and hockey arena.

The contribution, which overcomes the last financial barrier to the $5,500,000 project, entitles the City of Ottawa to a $1,000,000 grant promised by the federal government on condition the province also agreed to help.

The centre, to occupy the city - owned Lansdowne Park now used by Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference, will have a 15,000-seat football stadium, and a 10,000-seat hockey arena and accomodation for conventions.

Twins Favored 3-1 To Win Series

By JOE REICHLER

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Minnesota Twins limped into the third World Series game against Los Angeles Dodgers today with outfielders Tony Oliva and Bob Allison hobbled by pulled leg muscles.

The American League champions held a 2-0 advantage over the National League titleholders, winning the first two games, 8-2 and 5-1, in Minneapolis.

While the Twins were favored 3 to 1 to win the series, the Dodgers were made 1 - 13-to-10 choice to take the third game, largely because it was to be played first in Los Angeles. A sellout crowd of 56,000 was virtually assured.

"Oliva pulled his right leg a little more in each of the first two games," said Mele. "He tells me it's pretty painful.

"Allison complained of a charley horse in his right leg around the sixth or seventh inning of the second game. He said he was not sure how or when he got it but he thinks it might have been when he made that sensational catch of Jim Lefebvre's liner in the fifth."

Oliva and Allison spent a good deal of time in the trainer's room Friday. Both had their thighs heavily taped afterwards.

"Our guys better stop swinging for those fences," warned Alston. "They ought to concentrate more on just meeting the ball."

Alston observed that the Dodgers probably would have a slight advantage playing the next three games at home, but added:

"In the final analysis, it's what you do between those bases and they're still 90 feet apart no matter what park you play in."

The Dodgers' position, while not drastic, certainly is precarious. They have 19 wins at least two out of three to bring the series back to Minnesota.

Don Drysdale, loser of the first game, put it best. He said:

"I would say that we certainly got offensives in a bind."

WILLS SURPRISED

Maury Wills, one of the few Dodgers to fare well at bat against Minnesota pitching said: "Minnesota has surprised me. I assumed they were a good club, but they are much better than we were led to believe. We just can't afford to lose any more until we win at least two."

If they don't lose two, the Dodgers will again face both Jim Grant and Jim Kaat, the right - lefty duo who limited them to three runs in the first two games. Grant goes Sunday and Kaat Monday, if needed.

Alston will come back with Drysdale and Sandy Koufax. Drysdale, a 22-game winner during the regular season, was blasted from the box in the third inning of the opener, giving up seven runs on as many hits. Koufax, 26-8 during the regular season, bowed out for a pinch hitter in the seventh inning of the second game, trailing, 2-1.

Drysdale will pitch Sunday and, barring a Minnesota sweep, Koufax will face Kaat Monday.

"Drysdale and Koufax are great pitchers, but they're human, too," said Mele. "I told our guys they weren't invincible, pointing out to them that they were beaten a few times during the season too."

Junior "B's" Open Camp On Wednesday

Club president Gordie Bell said the first tryout of the 1965-66 edition of the team will be held in Memorial Arena next Wednesday — if ice is available.

Arena manager Bob Burrows expects to have the surface today and says barring unforeseen incidents the ice should be ready by Wednesday.

President Bell said present prospects indicate a strong club for the coming season.

Youngsters desiring to try out with the squad will be welcome, Bell said, adding that all positions in the club are open.

The initial practice gets underway at eight p.m.

Canadian Horse Wins Big One

In winning the 3-eighth, the third leg in U.S. trottin's triple crown, Armbro Flight, scattered trotting and pacing victory among three favorites.

O'Brien brought Armbro Flight from behind in the first heat to win in a driving finish and set most of the pace in the second mile dash, winning by one length.

Noble Victor finished second in both heats and Egyptian Candor was third both times.

Armbro Flight was timed in 2:02 3-5 for the first heat and was one-fifth second slower the second time around. She paid $4.20, $2.20 and $2.20 in the first heat and $3 and $2.20, with win betting only, in the second dash.

Armbro Flight was timed in 1:59 3-5 for the first heat and was one-fifth second slower the second time around. She paid $4.20, $2.20 and $2.20 in the first heat and $3 and $2.20, with win betting only, in the second dash.

Stamps Win Squeaker Over Argonauts

TORONTO (CP) — Calgary Stampeders opened a four-point margin atop the Western Football Conference Friday night by wiping out Toronto Argonauts' last chance of making the Eastern Conference playoffs.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Ottawa Rough Riders, meanwhile are both hoping to stay on top in the EFC when they clash in a key game Monday afternoon in Hamilton.

The Stamps rolled to their ninth victory of the season but discovered the Argos were in a mood to give up easily. Calgary downed Toronto 27-26, needing a pair of second-half touchdowns by Lovell Coleman and three goal-line stands by their defence.

The Stamps, who meet Montreal Alouettes Monday afternoon in Montreal, do their Thanksgiving Day opponents a favor since the Toronto loss assured Montreal of a playoff berth.

Edmonton Eskimos, with slim hopes of making the WFC playoffs, put their last chance on the line today against British Columbia Lions at Edmonton.

It was only a matter of time before the Argos bowed out of the playoff picture officially, the 16,716 fans turned out to see the Stamps inflict the fatal blow.

The Stamps now have 18 points in 12 games while the loss was Toronto's 10th in 11 games. Calgary gained its key game Monday afternoon in Hamilton.

But the victory was costly for Calgary, who lost the services of quarterback Eagle Day for the season and defensive halfback Ron Atchison for several games earlier this season and he's a doubtful starter against Montreal.

Substitute quarterback Jerry Keeling suffered a bruised shin on the last play of the first half but is expected to be fit to play Monday.

Toronto scored on an 11-yard pass from Keeling early in the third quarter and ran 54 yards for the clincher following late in the fourth quarter. Keeling got the Stamps remaining touchdown on a 10-yard run while Larry Robinson kicked three converts and a field goal.

National Football League

Nine Could Finish On Top

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nine teams could wind up in first place after this weekend's games in the National Football League.

Taking the Western Division lot—Detroit and Green Bay are on top at 3-0, Baltimore and San Francisco are next at 2-1. The Lions play the Colts at Baltimore Sunday, while the 49ers meet the Packers at Green Bay.

Thus, victories by Baltimore and San Francisco would create a four-way tie at the top.

In the even more tightly packed Eastern Division, Cleveland Browns, Dallas Cowboys, New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals all are 2-1, and Philadelphia Eagles 1-2.

The schedule has Pittsburgh visiting Cleveland and the Giants at Minnesota Vikings Saturday night, with the Eagles at Dallas and the Cardinals at Washington Sunday.

Thus, victories by Pittsburgh, Minnesota, Philadelphia and Washington would leave five teams with 2-2 records in the East.

In the American Football League, San Diego Chargers meet the Bills at Buffalo and Kansas City Chiefs are at Denver Broncos Sunday.

Art Powell went on a spectacular pass-receiving spree Friday night, grabbing two touchdown tosses from Tom Flores, in helping Oakland Raiders to a 24-10 victory over Boston, as was the Patriots' fifth straight AFL defeat.

Powell caught 11 of Flores' passes for 206 yards

Yankees Eye Ryder

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — The U.S. Ryder Cup team won four matches, lost two and halved one Friday and grabbed a 9-7 lead over Great Britain and appeared set to capture the 28-year-old trophy for the 13th time in 14 attempts.

Good sun, light wind and a drying Royal Birkdale golf course encouraged some of the greatest par - smashing ever seen here on the English Coast of the Irish Sea.

The 7,037-yard par-73 course succumbed to an absolute stream of birdie shooting in eight four-ball foursomes.

Eight singles matches this morning and another eight in the afternoon conclude the play which represents world supremacy in pro golf match competition.

The British haven't won the cup since 1957.

Crozier Sent To Hospital

DETROIT (AP)—Goalie Roger Crozier of Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League is in Detroit Osteopathic Hospital recovering from a back injury suffered while exercising.

He joins team - mate Alex Delvecchio on the hospital list. Delvecchio is undergoing allergy tests at the University of Michigan Medical Centre at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Juniors Beaten

Quinte Srs. Shade BCI

By DAVID TEMPLER

BCI split a doubleheader with Quinte on the fairgrounds muddy pitch on last night with Quinte seniors edging a 7-6 thriller and the junior collegians winning 17-2.

BCI received the kickoff in the game but their march was quickly halted. Quinte had a first down but BCI intercepted a pass to regain possession. These plays set the pattern for the first quarter with both teams jockeying for position around the midfield stripe.

In the second quarter Bob Moon got a break and romped from the 50 to the 19 yard line. A clipping penalty forced Quinte to punt for a rouge.

Again the battle swayed back and forth. No team crossed the 4 yard line until Walsh caught Quinte unaware with a quick kick and forced the Saints back to their own one yard line. Two successive first downs by Taylor and Moon crossed the Saints from difficulty before the end of the half.

Early in the second half Kirk Lightfoot brought the Collegians from the 35 to the 13 yard line in one powerful drive. Quinte's powerful line forced BCI back to the 25 where, on third down, Ian Moon kicked a field goal to make the score 3-1. For the remainder of the half a defensive battle existed until the last five minutes of the game. Quinte's Bob Moon beat at the 51 and went to the 36 for a first down. Jill Leslie carried for five and Moon dazed around the left end for a winning major.

For the winners the play of Moon and Shanahan and defensive stwdy, of Jack Reppard was outstanding.

comDue ocjetahod

For the Collegians the running of Walsh and Lightfoot, the strategy of Hallam, and the defense of of Brian Smith were very creditable.

In the junior game strong defensive lines allowed only a safety touch against Quinte in the first period.

Another opportunity after assaults by Tom Boulier and Dave Huiser, came on the eight yard line, but the Saints escaped by losing only a single.

In the third quarter the wind was san advantage to BCI in the punting duel. Quinte forced to their own fwy and lies was caught for the safety touch.

In the last quarter a fumble on an attempted punt gave BCI the first on Quinte's 24. Riddley went to the 12, Huiser drove to the on and quarterback Laing lunged for the final touchdown of the game.

Tyke Champions Honored

The DeMille Consstruction tyke baseball team, newly crowned city champions of their class, were honored at a presentation dinner at the A and W Drive-In on Thursday evening.

In appreciation of their achievement, Mr. DeMille presented each player with a special award. Coach Jack Yott also received a similar gift.

Guest speaker for the occasion was Ricky Locke, physical education teacher at Sidney Secondary School and a former minor baseball graduate.

Mr. Locke outlined the essence of good sportsmanship, keen competition, and desire. He urged the boys to show support, efforts made by team-mates, parents, coaches, umpires, executive members and others.

Shooters Hold Trials

TORONTO (CP)—Final trials to select Canada's rifle and pistol shooters at the 1966 British Empire Games in Kingston, Jamaica, next August and the world shooting championships in Wiesbaden, Germany, next July, will be held in Ontario this weekend.

The trials will be shot at the Peel County game farm near Brampton and the rifle trials at the Owen City Rifle Club near Waterloo. They start today and end Monday.

A two-man team will be selected for each of the rifle and pistol events in the games, and a four-man team in each category will be chosen for the world championships.

Among rifle shooters competing for berths on the two teams will be Gil Ross of St. Catharines and George Marsh of Toronto. They were members of Canada's Olympic team last year in Tokyo. Boa, Canadian open match rifle champion, won a third-place Bronze Medal in Tokyo.

Old Smoothie Howe Still In Stride

Scores Three

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

In a couple of weeks, Gordie Howe begins his 20th season as a National Hockey League player. But if opposing left wingers were expected when to behave like an elder statesman, they can forget it.

The 35-year-old right winger put on quite a show Friday night as Detroit Red Wings edged Boston Bruins 4-3 in a pre-season exhibition game at London, Ont., scoring the first three Detroit goals and setting up the winner by Andy Bathgate.

And he did it in the absence of his usual sidekick, Alex Delvecchio. The smooth - skating Red Wing captain spent the day in hospital undergoing allergy tests.

Howe, who is five goals short of the 600 mark in regular-season play, has scored five times in Detroit's last two outings, finding the mark twice when the Wings tied Chicago Black Hawks 3-3 Tuesday night.

Johnny Bucyk scored twice in less than half a minute Friday as the Bruins rallied early in the third period. Murray Oliver was the other Boston marksman.

It was Detroit's first victory in three pre-season outings and the Bruins second defeat in two tries against NHL opposition.

GREY EAST WINS

Meanwhile Montreal Canadiens and New York Rangers created an exhibition victories over minor-league opponents.

Two goals by Yvan Cournoyer sparked the Canadiens to a 7-3 decision over Houston Apollos. Their Central Professional League farm club. Bobby Rousseau, Claude Larose, Claude Provost, Dave Balon and Red Berenson also scored for the Stanley Cup champions. Bob Charlebois, with two, and Bill McCreary replied for Houston.

Meanwhile the Rangers visited Rochester Americans and drubbed the American League champions 8-3, humiliating their opponents by scoring on the only two occasions they had to play shorthanded.

Lou Angotti, a former Ameri-can, broke a 1-1 tie early in the second period as the Rangers disrupted the Rochester power play with a two - man breakaway and rookie Gary Peters broke loose to score his second and two goals while a Ranger was off in the third period.

Ingarfield and captain Bob Nevin signed their contracts with the Rangers during the day. Detroit announced the trade of defenceman Dunc McCallum to Vancouver Canucks of the Western League for-cen-tre Bob Cunningham.

Stamps Quarter Hurt

Good Day Said Leg-Pulling Shipp

TORONTO (CP)—Eagle Day, quarterback of Calgary Stampeders, Friday night accused Mike Billy Shipp of Toronto Argonauts of deliberately trying to injure him in Wednesday's Football League interlocking game.

The Stampeders won 27-16, and wiped out Toronto's last chance of a playoff berth in the Eastern Conference.

Eagle blamed Shipp for a knee injury he suffered after five minutes of the second quarter. He didn't return to action and is doubtful starter for Monday afternoon's game in Montreal, against the third-place Alouettes.

"My would an old pro do a thin, like that?" asked Day after whoffing Shipp when the Toronto player tried to shake hand after the game. "The play was finished, the whistle had sounded and then Shipp, who had me by the foot, twisted it."

ADMITS TWIST

Ship admitted he had twiste Day's foot earlier, but challenged the Calgary quarterback explanation of the incident.

"There was this big plieup and I ad hold of him by the foot wile I was lying on my back. Bet were thrashing all around and I turned over. I wasn't fr letting go because it ido andke gets away I'm sure going to'sear about it from my coach."

Calgry coach Jerry Williams didn't have the same viewpoint as Day.

Sohnttuh quarterback Jerry Keeling of the Stamps was also hurt suffering back and leg injuries on the final play of the first half when tackled by Dick Shatto. Keeling continued to play.

But defensive tackle Larry Anderson was knocked out of play. Was hurt. He tore liga-ments in his left knee and will miss the Montreal game.

Author Costain Dies At 80

NEW YORK (CP)—Thomas Costain, who rose from a $5-a-week reporter on the Brantford Expositor to become a best-selling novelist and historian, died Friday in his Manhattan home at the age of 80.

A spokesman for his publisher, Doubleday and Co., said the Brantford-born author died of a heart attack.

After a successful career as a journalist he turned at the age of 55 to writing of novels, of which appeared. He also published seven histories and was an editor of anthologies. His name appeared on more than two dozen books.

The Black Rose in 1945 was Costain's first overwhelmingly-successful novel. Others included The Silver Chalice in 1952 and The Tontine, a two-volume work launched with a printing of 100,000 copies in 1955.

Born May 8, 1885, son of John Herbert and Mary Schultz Costain, he attended school in Brantford. Before he was 17 he wrote four historical novels, none of which got into print.

REPORTED SPORTS

After high school he covered lacrosse games for the Brantford Expositor, which at that time also published his first fiction, a mystery story.

His appetite for journalism whetted by sports reporting, he moved to the Guelph Mercury, where by 1908 he was editor. In 1910 he became an editor with Maclean Publishing Co. in Toronto, and soon became director of Maclean's Magazine, a position he held until he moved to the United States in 1920 and became an American citizen.

For 14 years, 1920-1934, he was chief associated editor of the Saturday Evening Post. In 1934 he became story editor for 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. and, in 1937, editor and part-publisher of American Cavalcade, one of the earliest pocket-size magazines.

In 1938 he entered the world of book publishing as advisory editor for Doubleday and Co., remaining in that capacity until 1946 when the pressure of his own writing demanded his full time.

Costain, capable of quick, clean-cut decisions, made one of his best as Book Selection Sprague of Guelph sing the role of Ruth in a performance of Ruth Sullivan's Ruth at Rutes of Penance. She became his wife in 1910 and survives.

There also are two daughters, Mrs. Howard Haycraft in New York and Mrs. Henry Darlington Steinmetz in New Jersey, and a grandson, Thomas Costain Steinmetz.

The white-haired, blue-eyed Costain commented several years ago that he had started writing "about 10 years too late." But he made his writing years enjoyable and fruitful.

In May, 1952, when he received the honorary degree of doctor of letters from the University of Western Ontario, the citation said in part:

"The fundamental interest in people, the power as a story teller, the facility as a writer, the capacity as a historian, the skilfulness of a craftsman—these are the inherent gifts which have made Thomas Costain one of the greatest historical novelists of our times, and his books admired and purchased by hundreds of thousands of people."

He often grieved a bit that many critics persisted in looking down on the historical novel, but explained that he was by nature a story teller.

"I'm always looking for a story when I'm reading," he once said, "and I like history, so I write what I like."

Million Accident-free Hours at Union Carbide

Seven hundred and thirty days, or 1,000,000 man hours.

That's the length of time which the Union Carbide (Bakelite) plant at Belleville has gone without a lost-time accident.

Yesterday afternoon the Industrial Accident Prevention Association paid tribute to the plant for it's record with the presentation of a plaque in recognition of the accomplishment, while by way of thanks from the management each of the plant's 220 employees received a Thanksgiving turkey.

Wilson Haugh, 1st vice president of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association, presented the I.A.P.A. plaque to plant manager Wilburt Canniff.

Congratulating the plant management for its long accident-free record of 730 days or 1,000,000 man hours, Mr. Haugh said that the Belleville plant was only the sixth out of 31,000 industrial plants in Ontario which this year have received the 1,000,000 hours accident free award.

"It's a real accomplishment and one which could not be achieved without the full co-operation of every person on the staff," he said.

RESULT OF TEAMWORK

"To achieve such a record you have to have a full team-management, coaching staff and players," the accident prevention association official went on.

Last year there were 16 plants in Ontario which achieved the million hours without a lost-time accident.

In recognition of the workers' accident-free record, the plant management also presented a safety award to its workers. Plant works manager George Merriman received the award from plant safety superintendent Fred Catton.

Belleville Mayor J. R. Ellis and city manager J. R. Reynolds were present for the plaque presentation ceremonies and added their congratulations to management and workers for their achievement.

Also present was Mr. Frank Hogg, safety co-ordinator for all Union Carbide plants.

In announcing the gift of turkeys to all workers, Plant Manager Canniff said the turkeys were in appreciation of the long accident-free period. It was merely a co-incidence that the free turkeys came in time for Thanksgiving, he said.

Master Bowlers Compete

Belleville and Trenton Master Bowlers are competing this weekend, at the Nickel City Open Five Pin Tournament, in Sudbury. About 135 Masters from every part of Ontario are expected to participate in Northern Ontario for the first time.

Local master bowlers, Mary Fox, representing D. & A. Label of Trenton, Jim McKenzie from the Gay-O-Drome, Belleville and a newly appointed master, Jim Begley, are definitely entered and will be spending Thanksgiving away from home.

Begley, who will also represent the Bowl-O-Drome, has been coming through in fine style in the last few years.

Last December he was the "dark horse" winner of the first annual Holiday Match Play Tournament, held in Belleville and despite that victory, was also considered in the same category in the next local tournament, the Belleville edition of the "Championship of champions". Once again Begley was the winner, for back to back efforts.

There at Hamilton was Master Bowler Holly Leet of Toronto who went home $5,000 richer. Top prize at Sudbury is $1,000

Budd Bursts Into Drobnock

TORONTO (CP) — Frank Budd, once a world - ranking sprinter, has put the finishing touches on the Canadian Football League.

Head coach Jerry Williams still must perfect this latest addition to Stampeders' offensive arsenal, but just the fact it can explode provides pass defenders with all the headaches they want.

Budd, a chunky Asbury Park, N.J., native, has scored four touchdowns on 12 passes so far for Calgary, all covering distances of more than 50 yards. In three games his touchdowns have provided the winning margin as the Stampeders have set up winning scores.

A rarity among import speedsters in their first season here about his speed are more than promotion material, Budd held the world mark of 9.1 seconds for 100 yards in 1961. It since has been eclipsed.

It took Williams a long time to convince the 200-pound pass receiver, he should try football again after Budd played a few games with the National League Philadelphia Eagles in 1962 and Washington Redskins in 1963-64.

DINAH DIVORCED

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — A divorce suit in which singer Dinah Shore's husband alleged she committed adultery with five unidentified men was dismissed in Superior Court Friday. Judge Merrill Brown then awarded Miss Shore her final divorce decree from Maurice F. Smith, Palm Springs contractor.

Eastern Scoring Leaders

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pat Brosnan and Dave Thelen both of Toronto Argonauts, moved up in the Eastern Football Conference scoring race last weekend as Brosnan cracked the top 10 as the Argos dropped a 27-26 decision to Calgary Stampeders Friday night in an interlocking Canadian Football League game.

Brosnan and Thelen each counted a touchdown to remain tied with 24 points each. Both jumped into a deadlock for sixth place with Jim Dillard of Ottawa Rough Riders, who also has 24 points.

Parker kicked three converts and added a field goal to bring his total in 11 schedule games to 20 points, good enough for 10th place behind Joe Zuger of Hamilton Tiger-Cats who has 23 points.

'Where The Dear Ole Rough Riders Play'

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal transport department has asked Air Canada for a full report on an incident early Tuesday aboard a DC-8 jet airliner in which some members of Ottawa Rough Riders created a noisy disturbance.

Mervyn Fleming, the department's chief of air regulation, said a verbal report was received Friday from Air Canada officials "and it appears on the surface that there was no threat to the safety of the flight."

But he said the disturbance was "some pretty rough conduct" and the department is withholding a decision on the incident until a written report has been filed by the plane's captain and crew.

The flight in question was 804 which left Vancouver Monday night and arrived in Toronto about 7:30 a.m. EDT Tuesday. The football team boarded in Winnipeg.

Air Canada said some reports of the incident circulating in Ottawa were greatly exaggerated. The team was returning after a western tour in which they lost two games.

The players kept ringing bells for service and grabbed the ball off a stewardess, Air Canada said. The captain of the aircraft had to come into the passenger cabin and asked them to quit disturbing other passengers. They refused.

An airline official said reports of the players drinking aboard the DC-8 were not true. However, there had been some drinking on the chartered Air Canada Viscount that flew the players from Regina to Winnipeg to make the jet connection.

"From our information, one or two players opened a bottle and passed it around. A bottle doesn't go very far among 36 players."

Redneresville

REDNERSVILLE—The Redneresville P.T.A. held their first meeting for the season at the Redneresville school, with the election of new officers as follows: president, Mrs. Oakes; vice-president, Mrs. G. A. Bentley; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Bruce Post; ways and means, Mrs. Hazel Lighfoot and Mrs. Lorraine Esper. Refreshments were served during the meeting.

About 35 friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Douglas Weese for a miscellaneous shower for Miss Helen Osterhout who will be married on Saturday in Albury church. Helen expressed her thanks for the many lovely gifts, and refreshments were served.

The Albury Ladies' Aid held their meeting at the home of Miss Marjorie Peck with about 18 present. Plans were discussed for a chicken pie supper in November.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Barron and family spent the weekend in Connaught Park.

Mr. Kenny Genereaux underwent a tonsilectomy at Belleville General Hospital recently.

Western Scoring Leaders

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Calgary Stampeders' Larry Robinson and Lovell Coleman took over the top two spots in the Western Football Conference scoring race Friday as the Stampeders downed Toronto Argonauts 27-26 in a Canadian Football League interlocking game in Toronto.

Robinson, who had been tied for first place with Peter Kempf of British Columbia Lions, scored two field goals and three converts to take top spot in the race with 66 points. Fullback Coleman collected a pair of touchdowns to move from fifth to second place with 62 points.

Kempf now is in third spot 57 points and fullback George Reed of Saskatchewan Roughriders back in fourth spot.

The leaders:

Watch Brakes Carefully For Response

BY EUGENE B. MILMOE

To the question of how often should brakes be checked or serviced, no general mile age timetable can be given. It all depends on the use or abuse to which they've been subjected.

In some cases, linings are burned or worn to the danger point after just one or two thousand miles. This is the result of foolish driving practices . . . habitual panic stops, riding the brake pedal constantly or continued braking while descending hills.

The wise driver not only avoids such brake-killing habits but he is ever alert to changes in braking response. He can be, to, and should notice if more stopping distance is gradually needed, if brake travel is increasing, if the pedal must be pushed harder and closer to the floorboard, if the car pulls to one side when braked, if there is a slight grab or drag, or if squeaks, clicks or other noises are developing.

• • •

From D. M.: "Isn't it abnormal for oil pressure to start increasing in an engine which is near ten years old?

Yes, and this points to either a clogged crankcase ventilating system or a faulty pressure gauge.

• • •

F. McB.: asks: "What does an oil stain around the seat of a spark plug indicate? Only one of my plugs is like this and there's no loss of power or oil mileage."

Oil can show around the well if the plug is not properly tightened.

• • •

S. L. writes: "Please explain how — as you claim — carburetor adjustment can cause engine overheating. I never heard of this". Our reference was to carburetor maladjustment, which causes an excessively lean fuel mixture. This contributes to engine heat build-up.

• • •

From H. E.: "When I accelerate suddenly, the car seems to back for a moment, then there's a popping noise through the carburetor (I believe) and finally, a normal surge of power."

This is due to a flat spot when the throttle is opened quickly — a momentary lag or failure of the engine to respond instantly. A defective carburetor accelerator pump or incorrect float level is the probable cause.

Ivanhoe

IVANHOE — Mr. and Mrs A. Chapman and children spent the weekend in Toronto.

Mrs. John Stephens who has been a patient in the General Hospital, Kingston, is convalescing at the home of her aunt, Mrs. E. Morton, in Thomasburg.

Czech Producer Recoups Losses

Among his pictures was the famous Ecstasy, in which Hedy Lamarr ran nude through a forest and stirred up the first controversy that she became a major Hollywood star.

Then came the Nazis. Auerbach fled to South America and eventually made it to New York.

Little by little he has regrouped his fortunes. The biggest boost came when he bought the Our Gang comedies, held onto them and then released them to television.

In recent years, Auerbach mostly has distributed or sold films, but now he is producing again. He currently is making Chefs of the Mona Lisa with George Chakiris.

He is 80 years old.

AT THE PARK — Victim of an evil fate — Peter Cushing, possessed by the dug-up cranium of the Marquis de Sade, stars in Paramount's newest shocker, "The Skull", in Technicolor and Techniscope opening Monday at the Park Theatre. A Milton Subotsky-Max J. Rosenberg production, "The Skull" was produced with a keen sense of reality and a modern setting. Not only it is horror at its best, but it is also a landmark in updated horror films. On the same program in color action and thrills, "Black Spurs", stars Rory Calhoun. Both features are first showings. Special matinee Monday at 2.00 p.m. Doors open at 1.30 p.m.

Now Sideburnless Presley Sings Without His Guitar

HOLLYWOOD (CP) — First the sideburns. Now the guitar. Whither Elvis?

Elvis Presley in the movie he is making now—Hawaiian Para. dise—sings 10 songs but doesn't play a guitar in one.

"People seem to think I'm married to the guitar but the truth is I'm not very good at it," says Old Swivel Hips.

"I usually get credited with beating up a storm on it but usually I have another and much better guitar player backing me up when I play it.

"For me the guitar has just been something to do with my hands and beat time with.

BEATS THE GUITAR

Elvis says he is virtually abandoning the instruments with which he long has been identified.

He now gets $1,000,000 a picture against 30 per cent of the gross, which ranks him alongside Elizabeth Taylor as the highest-paid movie stars.

So giving up the guitar isn't about to hurt him.

It may hurt the guitar business though. The American Music Corporation says: 7,000,000 Americans now play the guitar and AMC gives Elvis a great deal of credit for the guitar boom.

When Elvis first twanged onto the scene in 1956, only 300,000 guitars were sold in the United States. Last year the figure was 1,065,000, one-third the number of all musical instruments sold.

At the Belle

- JOHN FORD LOVES MONUMENT VALLEY

With "Cheyenne Autumn," new Warner Bros. adventure drama, in Technicolor and wide screen, showing today for the last times at the Belle Theatre, for the first time at regular prices, director John Ford made his 7th trip to Monument Valley in Arizona-Utah. Ford brought the incredible scenery of the valley to the world's attention when he first utilized it in 1938 while shooting "Stagecoach".

Subsequently he used the same locale for "My Darling Clementine," "Fort Apache," "She Wore A Yellow Ribbon," "The Searchers," "Sergeant Rutledge" and now "Cheyenne Autumn".

The new Ford epic stars Carroll Baker, Richard Widmark, Edward G. Robinson, Karl Malden, Arthur Kennedy, James Stewart, Ricardo Montalbán, Gilbert Roland, Dolores Del Rio and Sal Mineo. Performances tonight begin at 6.30 and 9.10.

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Dr. Walter MacKenzie of Edmonton, president of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada, Friday called for a healthy injection of federal aid to improve medical research and education. Addressing the annual Canadian regional meeting, Dr. MacKenzie said Canadians will soon face the possibility of receiving only second-rate medical care if the situation is not improved.

Ann Landers

Teenage Behavior Has Changed Over Years

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A group of us (all parents) were discussing what goes on with the teen-age today. Some insisted that kids are no wilder than we were when we were teen-agers. These people claimed he-laggured teens are just getting a lot of bad publicity, that the subject of teen-age sexual promiscuity has been beaten to death, that today's kids are the scapegoats for all the ills of envy, misery and poverty in the world.

My wife and I would be interested in hearing what you have to say. — MR. AND MRS.

DEAR MR.: Most teens are darned good kids, and when you look at the examples set by some of their parents, they look even better. Statistics indicate that conditions are not precisely the same today as when we were teen-agers. There are more kids in trouble today. The trouble is more serious and it comes at an earlier age than ever before. Yes, there are more teen-agers, but I am referring to percentages, not numbers.

In the last 20 years, the percentage of unwed mothers has tripled. Since 1957 the V.D. rate has tripled. (More than 60% of the cases of reported V.D. fall in the 13-19 years old group.)

Teen marriages are way up. Divorce is on the increase, and one reason is the sad record of teen-age marriages. (Such marriages have a 50% chance of ending in succeeding as a marriage between a couple in their middle 20's.)

Teen crime is up. Teen drinking is up. Teen car accidents are up. If this picture doesn't reflect a change in teen-age behavior, then I'm the Queen of Sheba.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll bet you are sick of mother-in-law problems and I hate to bother you with mine, but I need your help.

My husband and I have been married two years. He was transferred to another city five months ago and it was a Godsend. His mother would not leave us alone for even one day. I was getting out of my mind trying to keep her from even though she was at our front door before my husband left for work in the morning.

Now that we have moved 200 miles away she says her heart is acting up and she knows she isn't long for this world. So we drive 400 miles every other week end to see her. She insists that we stay at her house. My folks have adjusted and I don't blame them. My husband and I used to get along fine, but now we argue about this a lot. He says my folks are 15 years younger than his mother and we can stay with them after his mother is gone. I need your help. — BEAT DOEN.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Keith and I haven't been married very long, but there is one thing that is bothering me and I'm afraid it will bother me until we get it talked out.

Keith went with a girl two years before he started to go with me. Everyone who knew them figured they would be married one day. I had seen the girl three or four times but I never got to know her. She was very attractive and had a sweet personality.

Now that Keith and I are married, I think he should tell me all about her. I want to know how far they went and exactly why they broke up. I didn't ask him these questions while we were going together because I was afraid he was one of my business. But now that we are married I think everything that has to do with Keith is my business.

You are a great believer in people being honest with each other. Please print my letter and your answer. — NOTHING WITHHELD.

DEAR NOTHING: What happened between Keith and the girl wasn't your business then and it's not your business now.

I admire him for keeping his trap shut. He sounds like a first-rate guy to me. Keep him happy!

North Viet Nam Battalions Flee From Trap

By COLIN GIBSON

SUOI LA TINH VALLEY, South Viet Nam (Reuters)— Two battalions of North Vietnamese Army regular troops have broken out of a trap set by a massive U.S. and South Vietnamese force in this strategic valley 280 miles northeast of Saigon, American officers said today.

Until late Monday night, it was believed that an encircling operation involving thousands of U.S. and South Vietnamese troops had closed the net around the two battalions of the 325th North Viet Nam infantry and three companies of local Communist Viet Cong guerrillas.

U.S. and South Vietnamese troops had pushed forward this morning to consolidate their hold on the eight-mile-long valley. They had reported only sporadic sniper fire, and no contact with any sizable enemy units.

The jungle-walled valley had been a Viet Cong stronghold, from which guerrillas could strike at the key north south highway.

The assault troops for operation Shining Beyond were flown in by helicopter from An Khe, 20 miles to the west.

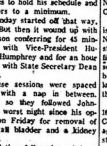
Intelligence reports said one trapped battalion, without food for three days, had planned a breakout attempt Monday night.

At least 70 Viet Cong were believed killed in savage artillery and air strikes Monday. U.S. and South Vietnamese casualties were said to be light.

Enemy snipers and one U.S. jet-bomber was shot down over North Viet Nam and another in South Viet Nam, Saigon reported and were rescued unhurt, spokesmen said.

In the 10 non-combat areas 20 miles north of Saigon paratroopers reported 30 Viet Cong dead since U.S. and Australian troops launched a big clearing operation last Friday.

A multi-billion government force was reported to have killed or guerrillas in a battle late Monday night five to 20 miles southwest of Saigon.



Truckers May Soon End Strike

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Teamster officials Sunday night predicted an early end, possibly today, to the wildcat strike that broke out seven days ago crippling Ontario's truck industry.

The sudden optimism of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (Ind.) was triggered by the weekend ratification by Quebec teamsters of a new three-year contract which brings that province's truckers to near wage parity with Ontario members.

"With the Montreal settlement, it is expected that the majority of teamsters involved in the wildcat walkout, in Ontario will be back on the jobs, probably by Tuesday," Ken McDougall, president of the 8,000-member Toronto teamsters local 938, announced in a statement.

Another teamster official said when the Ontario truckers "get a look at what Quebec has settled for, they may not feel too badly about their lot."

Quebec's agreement, which covers 1,400 workers employed by seven major trucking companies, calls for hikes of 12 cents an hour over three years and a reduction in the work week by 1868 to 44 hours from the current 50 hours. The basic hourly rate now in Quebec is $1.86, compared to $2.00 in Toronto.

Negotiations between the Ontario teamsters and the Motor Transport Bureau, which represents 85 trucking companies affected by the strike, broke down over the work-week hours. The bureau wants the work week cut to 43 hours from 50 in a three-year contract.

Ontario teamster negotiators had tentatively agreed to settle for a 52-centan-hour wage increase over 3½ years, when the talks broke off.

Both sides were to meet today in another attempt to settle the unauthorized walkouts which have paralyzed truck yards in Windsor, Hamilton, Orhawa, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Kitchener, Waterloo, Guelph, Preston, Toronto, Hespeler, Oakville and Brantford.

STATUE UNVEILED

NEW YORK (Reuters) — A statue of Sir Winston Churchill was unveiled in Trinity Church, a famous historic landmark at the corner of Wall Street and Broadway, Sunday. The statue is one of a series of six eight-foot statue of the late statesman that stands in the public square of Woodford, his parliamentary constituency.

Record Fatality Toll

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Accidental deaths soared to a record 104 during the three-day Thanksgiving weekend, including 81 highway fatalities, also a record for the holiday.

The two totals surpassed previous Thanksgiving highs of 100 deaths overall in 1962 and 69 roads in 1962. The Canadian Highway Safety Council had predicted that 57 persons would die in traffic mishaps this weekend.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Monday, local times, included 62 drownings, five fire deaths, two hunting fatalities, a boy killed by a farm machine, a man killed by carbon monoxide poisoning and two unclassified deaths.

Ontario reported 31 fatalities —28 highway, one drowning, one fire and the carbon monoxide poisoning.

Quebec registered 18 road deaths, two drownings, four fires and two other deaths.

British Columbia had nine highway mishaps and a hunting death; Alberta eight road fatalities and a drowning; and Saskatchewan five drownings and four highway deaths.

Two persons were drowned and two died in traffic accidents in Manitoba and a boy died when he was struck by an auger.

New Brunswick reported seven traffic deaths and one drowning; Nova Scotia two traffic and one hunting; and Prince Edward Island two traffic.

LBJ Heeds Orders To Rest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hospital chart showed no official appointments for President Johnson today and for the time being the bedside doctors' orders to hold his schedule and visitors to a minimum.

Monday started off that way, too. But then it wound up with Johnson conferring for 45 minutes with Vice-President Hubert Humphrey and for an hour more with State Secretary Dean Rusk.

These sessions were spaced out, with a nap in between. Even so they bolstered Johnson's worst night since his operation Friday for removal of the gall bladder and a kidney stone.

And they followed word from the doctors that the president should have plenty of rest.

According to plan, the president received no mail Monday night and the regulr was restlessness, sleeplessness and discomfort.

Rhodesian Premier Expects Independence by Christmas

By ADAM KELLETT-LONG

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Rhodesian Premier Minister Ian Smith returned here today from his abortive talks in London and said it was an even bet that this white-ruled British colony would have independence by Christmas.

Large crowds of whites jammed the airport public gallery and cheered as Smith's plane taxied to a stop. The premier stepped out into a drenching downpour.

(In London, Prime Minister Wilson announced that he would broadcast to the nation tonight on the Rhodesian crisis.)

Smith made his "independence by Christmas" statement at an airport press conference. Government officials earlier today had discounted any early, dramatic developments.

But the official independence issue. Five planes of the Royal Rhodesian Air Force flew past to give a hero's welcome to the returning prime minister as the white crowds burst into For He's A Jolly Good Fellow.

CABINET MEETS

Smith said the Rhodesian cabinet met this morning under Deputy Prime Minister Clifford Dupont before his arrival but that it would not meet again for a few days.

He said he would report to the cabinet Wednesday on his London independence discussions.

Smith said he did not think that it would be any further talks with the British government "unless something completely unforeseen, revolutionary or dramatic occurs—and I don't think that will happen."

Asked if he felt impelled to make a decision soon, Smith said: "It is in the interests of Rhodesia the sooner a decision is made the better."

However, observers here said the press conference remarks as a whole tended to reinforce the impression that dramatic early steps on independence are unlikely.

Rhodesia is ruled by a white minority government despite the fact that Negroes outnumber whites 20 to 1. The whites have the vote, the Negroes do not.

Most of the 220,000 white Rhodesians seem to favor a unilateral declaration of independence. Premier Ian Smith has said to be a growing movement in commerce and industry to urge him to reconsider what some businessmen believe would be the disastrous consequences.

The Rhodesian leader said before leaving London he is convinced it is possible to bridge the gap between the British and Rhodesian position on the independence issue.

'THE ONLY WAY'

"We have come to the conclusion that we must have immediate independence and we believe independence is the only way we can maintain justice, law and order and civilized standards," he said.

Informed observers here said that the presidents of the key Rhodesian economic organizations plan to meet in the near future to discuss an approach to the prime minister.

The Rhodesian Herald said Smith would be untrue to past pronouncements if he plunged into decision making without satisfying himself time to catch up on the state of feeling in Rhodesia

Few French African Lands Back France In Supporting Red China for Seat in UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP)— Only three or four of the dozen or so French African countries seem likely to vote with France to seat Communist China in the United Nations this year.

That as much as anything is expected to prevent a majority in the General Assembly in favor of replacing the Chinese Nationalists with the Chinese Communists on UN bodies.

The assembly will vote on this issue in late October or early November. Delegates who have studied the outlook privately have alarmed the others and made them fiercely anti-Communist.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Skies will be predominantly cloudy over the entire province Wednesday. Showers and snowflurries will be quite general around the upper lakes and through Northern Ontario. In Southern Ontario showers are also anticipated but are unlikely to be either so frequent or widespread as in more northern localities.

Viet Nam Action Defended

By BILL COULTHARD

TORONTO (CP)—Withdrawal of United States troops from Viet Nam would lead to war because it would vindicate the position of Chinese extremists, an American professor told a free-ranging, explosive audience at a weekend teach-in at the University of Toronto.

"We must undercscore that force will be met by force, that we are not paper tigers and that we do not intend to surrender," Prof. Robert Scalapino of the University of California told at a session on the war in South Viet Nam.

Prof. Scalapino, who has voiced a strong defence of U.S. policy in Viet Nam at other teach-ins, was often hissed and sometimes applauded by 5,000 persons at the third session of the three-day teach-in which wound up Sunday night.

His arguments met with sharp rebuttal from a Cambodian representative and an American journalist who presented the position of the Viet Cong.

Meat-and-Potatoes Election Issues Are Debated by Various Party Chiefs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Party leaders marked Thanksgiving Day by debating such meat-and-potatoes election issues as cost of living, insurance and tax incentives for potash mines.

Prime Minister Pearson said the price gap between Canadian and United States cars should be narrowed in due course as a result of the auto trade agreement between the two countries.

(About the same time, Chrysler Canada Ltd. followed the lead of General Motors of Canada Ltd. and announced varying cuts in the suggested prices for its 1966 models.)

The prime minister said in a free-time CBC telecast that the auto pact has been misunderstood and misinterpreted. The intent was to give Canadian car makers a greater share of the North American market.

Meanwhile at Assiniboia, Sask., Conservative Leader Diefenbaker charged that the Liberals neglected to bargain for lower car prices when the agreement was negotiated.

Prices had dropped recently because of campaign efficiism, "But if this bunch ever goes back in office again, the cuts will be over."

External Affairs Minister Martin told a Winnipeg press conference that the auto deal will inject more than $1,000,000,000 into the economy in the next 18 months.

A tax break for potash mines was promised by Liberal Premier Lloyd Hoey of Saskatchewan at a press conference in Saskatoon. He said solution-type mines should benefit from the three-year tax holiday available to new shaft mines. He predicted that Saskatchewan soon will produce a greater tonnage of potash than of wheat.

As for wheat, Mr. Diefenbaker blamed the Liberals in "large measure" for lower prices on farmers. He accused the government of deception, incompetence and indifference in its dealings with farmers.

Mr. Diefenbaker interrupted his Prairie whistle-stop trip for a quiet Sunday in Saskatoon. Today he visits Moose Jaw and addresses an evening rally in Medicine Hat.

The Conservative leader told an overflow audience in the Assiniboia that Mr. Pearson stands for "two Canadas." If the Liberals were re-elected Nov. 8, Canadians with origins other than British and French would not enjoy equal status.

"Discrimination on the basis of race or color is the vehicle on which communism rides in marches. A Liberal vote would mean the end of a Canada in which citizens of all origins stand as equals."

The government's proposal for a federal-provincial universal medical care insurance plan was criticized by Credit-iste Leader Real Caouette in a weekend swing through the Eastern Townships of Quebec.

He said individuals should be free to join the private insurance plan of their choice, with the help of an allowance from the government. Such a system would cost less than a government-run scheme, he argued.

Mr. Caouette told a rally in Douglas told a meeting at Cranbrook, B.C., that the Liberals should keep their 1963 election promises. They posed as the party of reform, but obeyed Bay Street financiers on whose support they depended.

He also criticized the government for surrendering control over the waters of the Columbia River to the U.S.

Social Credit Leader Thompson, interviewed in Beamsville, Ont., Sunday, disagreed with a prediction by Social Credit Attorney-General Robert Bonner of B.C. that the Creditistes will rejoin Social Credit ranks after the election. Mr. Thompson said there have been no indications of such a possibility.

Today, Mr. Douglas speaks in Calgary. Mr. Thompson visits Toronto and St. Catharines and Mr. Caouette is in Thetford Mines, Que.

Crisp, Sunny Autumn Weather Greets Most of Canada Over Thanksgiving

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Crisp, sunny autumn weather gave Canadians a reason to observe Thanksgiving Day outdoors. And most of them took advantage of it.

Motorists proved particularly vulnerable and by late Monday, which marked the end of the three-day Thanksgiving weekend, the nation's road toll of 81 had exceeded the 57 deaths predicted by the Canadian Highway Safety Council. Highway congestion reached its peak Monday with people out for afternoon drives, returning from visits to relatives, or from boarding-up summer cottages for the winter.

Sunday, Canadians paused to give thanks for the bounties of a fat harvest. In worship services across the land, they observed the solemnity of Thanksgiving.

But, mixing the solemn with the gay, they also flocked in great numbers to a wide variety of outdoors events, particularly the full agenda offered in sport.

Apart from that, there was the World Series on television, and the opportunity to contemplate how the campaign is shaping up for the Nov. 8 federal election.

There were some weekend bonus events.

Thirteen universities participated by telephone hook-up in football in Saturday and Sunday, an international forum of discussion of world events by distinguished speakers in Toronto.

Business and industry closed down Monday except in Newfoundland, which doesn't observe the holiday.

Horse racing on the Prairies and British Columbia were well-patronized. Temperatures in B.C. hovered in the low 60s' under sunny skies.

In the Maritimes, showers put a damper on outdoor festivities in the morning but the sun broke through by noon.

And at Guelph Sunday, the Tiet running of the city's Thanksgiving road races over city streets drew thousands of spectators.

THANKSGIVING HOLIDAY was no time for slackers on Pinnacle Street yesterday as men and machines suddenly stepped up efforts to clear railroad tracks and extend sewers. All tracks south of Bridge Street East were cleaned out by last night.

Charges Laid After 10 Injured

Provincial police said today charges had been laid against the 20-year-old driver of an automobile involved in a two-car crash north of Belleville Saturday night which sent 10 persons to hospital.

However, they did not specify the charges made out against Donald McDermott, of Read, who was hospitalized with head lacerations.

They alleged the car driven by McDermott — carrying five passengers — failed at a stop sign on Thurlow township's fourth concession, then drove out onto Highway 37 — into the path of a northbound automobile driven by Garfield James Hall, 43, of Plainfield.

Four doctors were called to Belleville General Hospital to tend the injured as ambulances rushed them to the emergency ward.

Injured besides McDermott in the car he was driving were: his brother, Michael, 19, shock; John Mullin, 19, Canniton, stomach injuries; Thelma Bole, 22, owner of the car and employed at the Ontario School for the Deaf, rib fractures; Jean Clapperton, 21, OSD, spine and pelvic injuries; Celine Marchand, 16, Toronto, fractured pelvis, back, abdominal and face injuries.

Mr. Hall sustained face cuts; his wife Gwenn, 38, head lacerations; their daughter, Elizabeth, 16, a fractured nose, and son Richard, 13, shock.

All but Richard Hall and Michael McDermott were admitted to hospital.

Club Directors Hear Liberal Candidates

TRENTON — The two Liberal candidates in the respective ridings of Hastings South and Northumberland were guests of Trenton Kinsmen Club directors, on Saturday night. Miss Pauline Jewett and Mr. Robert Temple made themselves available to answer questions pertaining to Liberal government achievements in the last administration and particular projects they intended to bring to parliament's attention in the event they are returned to office.

Much congenial informative discussion resulted from this "Opportunity to Meet the Candidate" function sponsored for club members and their guests.

Young Farm Hand Found Dead in Field

TRENTON — The Brighton O.P.P. detachment heads up the investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of a young farm hand from the Cramahe township district north of Colborne.

On Saturday rabbit hunters discovered the body of Gregory Lindsay Ide 16, missing from his land DeKeyser's tobacco farm where he worked since September — Ide's accidental shotgun was found beside the youth's body in the field.

Rotarians Will Visit Consecon For Meeting

TRENTON — The regular meeting of the Trenton Rotary Club was slated Monday evening was cancelled because of Thanksgiving Day observance by club members with the families at home.

The Club's next regular meeting will be held at the United Church hall at Consecon a week from last Monday night when a sumptuous meal and an informative guest speaker, RCAF padre Rev. W. Shiu" Graham can be expected to please all in attendance.

TENDERS CALLED

Tenders have been called for the construction of an addition to the Ebenezer Canadian Reform Church on Fourth Avenue. The tenders must be in by October 15.

The original church, erected around 1952, is too small now to accommodate the needs of the growing congregation.

DRILLS CARRIED OUT

Fire Prevention Week in Trenton is over and the engineers and inspectors of the fire hall have completed their annual inspection of factories, stores, schools, churches and the Trenton Hospital.

Fire drills have been carried out at the schools, but no drill was necessary at the local hospital owing to the fact that the staff carries on a period t e a l drills as a matter of routine.

Airman Suffers Head, Face Cuts

Airman Robert Risk, 12 Richard Street, Trenton was treated following a two-car crash reporting for duty this morning.

Risk's car collided with an automobile driven by John Young, 85 Geddes Street, Belleville, at the intersection of Highway 2 and the 6 RD road at the Transport Command base.

Young was unhurt.

IN MEMORIAM

BURKE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father Blanche Burke who passed away Oct. 12, 1964.

Today recalls sad memories
Of a loved one gone to rest,
And the saddest part of parting
Is the way we miss you best.

Are the ones who loved her better
Sadly missed and ever remembered
By her daughters Glenda, Millie and Lorraine.

SUMMERS — In loving memory of a dear husband and father of Charles John, who passed away October 11th, 1960.

Sweet memories linger day, dear,
To bring you to my mind,
The days I do not think of you,
Are very hard to find.
God alone knows how I miss you,
And always will miss you.
My thoughts are always wandering
there.
To the spot where you are laid.
—Sadly missed by loving wife
Rose and family.

William Shannon, Reeve Of Marmora, Declines To Seek Nomination

By HARRY MULHALL

MARMORA — William Shannon, reeve of this village and former Liberal candidate in Hastings Frontenac, Saturday captured the spotlight at the second political convention here in a week.

Reeve Shannon, who surprised fellow Liberals October 4 by announcing his disenchantment with federal politics of both Old Parties, turned up at the NDP convention Saturday—and was nominated a candidate.

Mr. Shannon declined to run because, he said, he now could not wholeheartedly enter a fight with an organization that seemed most likely to fail.

However, he indicated he might be available in future contests.

Since he publicly turned his back on his own party, Mr. Shannon said the possibility of seeking the NDP nomination in the Conservative stronghold of Hastings-Frontenac has caused much soul-searching.

"But what I really find in analyzing the position of myself and this party (NDP) and the party that I recently was associated with is simply this: That without a powerful machine, well-organized — as the only party (Conservatives) which carries this riding has — this riding will go as it has."

"And if I enter a fray I like to do so with my whole heart and soul. But I've worked now since 1952, ever against strain."

He said he could not now make a decision to enter a new field with an organization that would seem "most likely to fail, no matter how well-dedicated you are and no matter how well-dedicated I am."

MAY HAVE TO CHANGE

"The only purpose would be to educate the people in the policy of your party," he added.

Government after recent government has been unable to administer Canada and has been torn by debates that debased democracy, he charges. "And it's quite likely that this is going to continue. I only hope this country can continue to weather this sort of thing. But soon the people are going to have to decide on an alternative course."

Prime Minister Pearson had the best intentions for Canada and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker was a "truly fine Canadian," he added.

However, Mr. Shannon felt many people were now viewing the NDP as a possible alternative to the Old Parties.

Refusing the nomination he requested the NDPers "to permit me . . . to come back to fight another day when all of us may be more well-prepared."

Then if they should express confidence in him again "I can join the ranks of so many other NDP candidates who are coming forth across the country unspoilt by association."

He charged that Canada had hitherto been at the behest of power groups more concerned with their own importance than the country's betterment.

"Some day," he said, "Canadians may elect a government that will allow us to live in harmony."

"I will not be a party to the mudslinging and almost slandering that seems to be the order of the day," he added. "And I for one would like to live in peace and love and charity, with respect for my fellow man."

"And I hope," he said, "that never again will I, myself, permit myself to dance on the string of any power group."

Officers Busy Weeding Out Illegal Hunters

Thanksgiving weekend traditionally attracts hunters to the Belleville district — and also law enforcement officers seeking illicit hunters.

Three Belleville men were hailed hunting in the Wallbridge area Saturday morning and the case turned over to RCMP. Police allege they were found near an area known as Aiken's Pond — which was posted against duck-hunters this year.

Monday a Toronto man had his gun confiscated by police and was interviewed by a Lands and Forests game warden after he was allegedly found in possession of a songbird.

A third complaint was investigated by provincial police at Glen Miller where a man was reported hunting near the Trent Canal muskrat's residence.

The man had disappeared when officers arrived.

Thieves Fail To Crash Vault At BCI Office

Detective Inspector Harold Reid said the planned robbery was given up after the sturdiness of the vault bore up under the pounding of heavy implements.

Contract for New Hospital Addition Officially Signed

Believed to be the biggest single construction contract ever let to be let in the city, the contract for the construction of the new addition at Belleville General Hospital was officially signed today at noon.

The official signing of the contract was scheduled for 12 noon at the hospital board room with all members of the board invited to be present at the signing. A representative from the hospital architects' office was also expected to be present.

Robertson Yates Ltd. of Hamilton were the successful bidders for the hospital construction job, the final amount of the contract with adjustments being $7,117,902.

The over-all cost of the hospital project is approximately eight and a half million dollars, including the new boiler house which was built under separate contract, architects' fees and other items.

Socreds Swing Support to Hees

CASTLETON — Members of the Northumberland Social Credit League have swung their support to Progressive Conservative Candidate Hon. George Hees in the Nov. 8th general election.

The decision was made by the membership at a meeting last week at the home of Northumberland Social Credit League president, Gerard Beaudry.

Mr. Beaudry, who was the Social Credit candidate in the 1963 general election said his party had decided not to field a candidate in the Nov. 8th election and that the decision to swing Social Credit support to Mr. Hees was purely a riding arrangement. He explained the decision was reached after a careful study of Mr. Hees' campaign platform, many planks of which, he said, were similar to those of the Social Credit.

Points of agreement worked out by the Social Credit League and Mr. Hees supporters are:

POINTS OF AGREEMENT

1. More readily available money to individuals and commercial projects at minimum cost.

2. Agriculture to receive greater attention through increased trade, direct support and/or help toward farmer controlled agricultural boards.

3- Enquiry into school systems, human health, labor needs, small businesses, etc.

Mr. Beaudry emphasized that the move was a "purely riding decision" and that members of the Social Credit League in Northumberland were strong supporters of National Social Credit leader Robert Thompson's party.

In 1962 Dr. Jewett won the riding from former PC member of parliament Harry Bradley by less than 500 votes, including the armed services vote with more than 21,000 ballots cast.

Roy Frost, Mine Worker, Chosen NDP Candidate In Hastings-Frontenac

By HARRY MULHALL

MARMORA — With a small band of party faithful in attendance, the New Democratic Party gimlet eye campaign armor here Saturday to contest the November 8th federal election in that stronghold of sturdy Toryism — Hastings-Frontenac.

To champion the NDP cause and pick up the gauntlet against both Old Parties, they chose Roy Frost, a worker at nearby Marmora Mines.

Mr. Frost confessed although he was a union member for many years he was never closely associated with politics.

"I'm the greenest candidate," he admitted. "I don't know anything about politics. I'm sure willing to learn."

He will campaign against Liberal Roy Cadwell, 37-year-old author and retired lawyer, and Rodney Webb, MP for the riding since 1958 and expected to be renominated at a Conservative convention later this month.

Mr. Frost was acclaimed after the only other nominee, Marmora reeve William Shannon and former Liberal candidate in the riding, declined to run. (See story page 7).

Slightly more than 20 local NDPers turned up at the town hall here for the afternoon nomination meeting.

Their candidate told them he was a farmer at heart, but added: "We are the working people and the producers of the wealth of this country. And I think it's high time we had something to say about the distribution of that wealth. What do you think?"

The keynote address was delivered by Tony Ketchum, 27-year-old high-school teacher and NDP candidate in Durham.

WEAK EXCUSE CLAIM

Mr. Ketchum said the Liberal call for a majority government at Ottawa was "the weakest excuse I think any party could possibly use in this election.

Minority governments have been among the best in Canada's history.

"There's no difference between the Liberals and Conservatives and . . . we are going to see another minority government — there's no doubt about that.

". . .But I think we are going to have a minority government by the New Democrats."

The NDP were the most dedicated members of the last Parliament and were ready to support the government on a series of legislative measures. However, the government stalled on introducing them, said Mr. Ketchum.

Canadians were disenchanted with the "power politics" which have been running their country he told the delegates.

"People are fed up with the flabby sort of government we've had in the past ten years — in the past 20 years," he charged.

The emphasis must now be on planning for the future, and proper training of youth.

MUST TRAIN YOUTH

"It's the youth of this country who are going to determine this country's future," he said.

A recent federal survey of 4,000 Ontario firms revealed a need for 69,000 skilled workers by 1967. But only 2 percent of those vacancies could be filled by Canadian school graduates at that time, he claimed.

"Now, if that's not evidence of lack of planning and lack of foresight, I don't know what is," said Mr. Ketchum.

A grant of some $85 million to universities would abolish tuition fees. Yet Ottawa spends $500 million annually on "obsolete defence equipment."

Fractures Spine, Breaks Ribs In Silo Fall

A Corbyville district farmer, George Clare, is in Belleville General Hospital with a fractured spine and broken ribs following a fall Monday afternoon from the top of a 26-foot silo.

Mr. Clare was putting up ensilage pipes at the Roy Boldrick farm near Plainfield when the pipe apparently gave way allowing him to fall to the cement floor of the silo.

Four other men standing on the floor of the silo escaped injury when Mr. Clare fell at their feet. One of the men, Mr. Carman Gibson was struck a glancing blow on the shoulder.

Mr. Clare and Earl Trevethon were preparing to custom fill Mr. Boldrick's silo when the accident occurred.

Population Crisis

In his address to the United Nations General Assembly, Pope Paul said: "You deal here above all with human life, and the life of man is sacred; no one can dare offend it. You must strive to multiply bread so that it suffices for the tables of mankind, and not rather favor an artificial control of birth, which would be irrational, in order to reduce the number of guests at the banquet table."

There, in a nutshell, is the Roman Catholic viewpoint on the crisis posed by population growth in relation to available food supplies. Yet millions of people in countries like India do not have enough to eat, and most are living at starvation level. There simply is not enough food for the people of Asia, but they continue to multiply, thus adding to the overstrained resources of the countries in that vast region.

Even in the wealthy nations of the western world, warnings have been sounded on the strain being imposed on food resources. And hard on the heels of the Pope's historic address comes another, from B. R. Sen, director-general of the UN Food and Agricultural Organization. In a foreword to the FAO's annual report, Dr. Sen indicated that only concerted action to control population could avert a serious crisis with regard to food supplies.

Speaking in Bombay late last year, Dr. Sen asserted: "Can we any more turn our faces away from the concept of family planning when the alternative is starvation and death . . .?"

The report itself noted that during the past decade there had been a dramatic increase in the output of food. However, the rapid growth of population . . . "had resulted in little or no improvement in their diets and levels of living."

There is the core of the problem: it is clearly impossible to provide enough food for such a fast-multiplying population, and there is the ominous possibility suggested by the following passage in the FAO report: "The latest and most critical phase of FAO's work, which now most with the third postwar decade, is the one when the Malthusian correctors (reduction of the population by famine, pestilence and war) will inexorably come into play unless organized will and dedicated endeavor . . . can find an effective expression."

At present, 10 to 15 per cent of mankind is undernourished, while at least half suffer some degree of hunger and malnutrition, the report maintained.

Alabama Justice

The recent acquittal of an Alabama deputy sheriff charged in the death of a young civil rights worker has had strong repercussions in New England where the victim, theological student Jonathan Daniels, made his home.

The reduction of the murder charge against deputy sheriff Thomas Coleman to one of manslaughter, and his subsequent acquittal, are widely regarded as a travesty of justice in the southern tradition.

Daniels was a native of Keene, N.H., and in a report for the Ottawa Journal on reaction there, Max Freedman wrote: "One has to be in this city and in New England to understand the incredible sense of outrage that has run like a through fuse through the civic life and the recents news from the courtroom in Haynesville, Ala."

Freedman said the first sense of "angry revulsion and smothered outrage" came when the charge against the deputy sheriff was reduced to manslaughter.

"Suspicions hardened when reports from Alabama predicted that Coleman, whose family has deep roots in Haynesville, would never be found guilty."

"These prophetic fears that justice would be mocked and outraged in that tiny courtroom, too small for the American dream but large enough for the nightmare of racial injustice, have now been tragically and savagely fulfilled," said Freedman.

To outside observers the administration of American justice in the southern states has never inspired confidence. The events of the trial that accepted no delay in the trial that would permit Richard Morrisoe of Chicago, also wounded in the shooting indicent and still in hospital, to give evidence. The death of Jonathan Daniels is but another example of the manner in which justice is flouted in the deep south.

Students From Overseas

Canada's universities are becoming more and more cosmopolitan, and none more so that the University of Toronto.

Last year 1,034 foreign students were enrolled in full-time courses in Toronto and this year's figure is expected to be higher when the tally has been completed.

The United States had the largest representation—396—from outside Canada last year, followed by Asia 285, West Indies 118, Europe 110, Africa 70, Oceana 29, South America 12, Central America one, and the Bahamas and Bermuda 13.

In all they represented 84 countries from Russia and the Baltic lands to New Zealand.

Advantages of modern labor saving machinery to the farmer have been clearly demonstrated in the Bay of Quinte district this summer with pick-up balers travelling through the district pressing straw for the market.

Previously farmers who had their crops cut with a combine were forced to rake and handle straw to get it to bilers before shipment. This year pick - up balers take straw directly from the windrow left by the combine.

The executive committee of the city council has deferred action with regards to the deficit in connection with the Old Boys' Reunion which was held this past summer, but the deficit is said to be about $2,000. A deputation composed of R. D. Mascall, Harry W. Corporon and Herbert A. Fish, waited on the executive committee. Ald. Graham informed them that it was impossible for the present council to make a grant to cover the deficit as there are no funds. After some discussion it was decided to leave the matter in abeyance for a time to see what can be done.

50 YEARS AGO
October 12th, 1915

The members of the public works committee in the city council have decided to ask permission of the Provincial Board of Health, Toronto, to construct a sewer on Bridge Avenue from Pinnacle Street to Front Street.

Mr. George H. Pope, purchasing agent for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway at Winnipeg, is home on a short visit.

At a meeting which was held in the Baptist Church Sunday School rooms of representatives of the various societies and organized men's Bible classes in the city, it was decided to organize a carpet ball league. Rev. Charles Smith, pastor of the Baptist Church was elected president; Mr. Beecher Doolittle was elected secretary.

Just Forgetful

Peterborough Examiner

The person who leaves his car unlocked or with keys in the ignition, is guilty of negligence, except, at the most, forgetfulness. The penalty for such forgetfulness is the risk of the fact, of having one's car stolen and perhaps badly damaged. The person who steals the car is guilty of car theft and he must assume the full responsibility for the act.

To say that any citizen should be fined because he makes it easy for a certain type of crime to occur, borders on the ridiculous. It makes just as much sense, for instance, to establish penalties for persons who become burglary victims, partly because they forgot to lock all windows and doors in the home.

Election Candidates Look To Their Poster Images

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — . . . notes from the campaign trail . . .

It is almost frightening, this ghastly dental display whitely gleaming from all those thousands of election posters that grimly grin on telephone pole, church basement wall, collegiate auditorium stage and anywhere else the candidate can manage to paste up what the political trade knows as the Campaign Photograph.

It must haunt the dentists, this vast national facial cavity that gapes with all those countless facelifts of smiling teeth from the pictures of party rallies, candidate nomination conventions and assorted campaign rah-rahs as the election-evening chuckles and laughs its merry way.

Like the recently-new jet-style campaigning. The Campaign Photograph underwent a definite in glittering gold and white enamel — just how much fashions in politics have been changing.

He tried to look like a statesman.

THEN CAME DIEF

But as Prime Minister Pearson, who initially made his name and fame in World Statecraft, noted with a wry grin the other day in a Toronto campaign appearance:

"Please don't call me a statesman — I'm not a dead politician yet."

The Old Campaign Photographs of only a few elections ago — to further back than in former Prime Minister "Uncle Louie" St. Laurent's time — took now almost like caricatures of the old-time, turn-of-century, gas-light era politicians.

Dear old "Uncle Louie." So quietly courtly, so gently prim, so properly serious.

And former Conservative Leader Drew, at least, a warm personality who could never project himself in his two losing campaigns against the Liberal St. Laurent, such starchy dedication, such unbending propriety, such inflexible dignity.

Then along came Dief and Mike and five elections in eight years.

With them and the New Wave of Parliamentarians, the age of the Political Pumpkin Face was the era of the Big Election Grin.

The candidate back there in Sleepy Hollow West by Sneed may have lost the women's vote, the business vote, the labor vote, even his wife's vote — but facing inevitable and humiliating defeat, there he'll be, beaming out at you from those posters, his campaign folders, your newspaper or TV, gamely grinning his way into political discard.

EVEN PICK

For contrast, try and remember the fine old photographs — they're still in the history books — of the Sir John A. Macdonald and the Alex Mackenzie.

Faces so serious, solemn, even funereal.

And the old political picture albums — they've got five more elections down here at National Liberal and Conservative headquarters — show it was that same serious way straight down the years through to R. B. Bennett, Mackenzie King, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry Truman, George Drew, "Uncle Louie" and the dawn of television.

Since then there has been a dogged determination to defy location to the ear-to-ear grin.

Tommy Douglas chuckles externally.

Socred Bob Thompson smiles with a wistful sincerity.

Creditiste Real Caouette laughs a hard, flat laugh that comes out in The Campaign Photograph in a sort of menacing steel-trap way.

Even that still-dreaded "Grey Eminence," Transport Minister J. W. "Jolly Jawn" Pickersgill, probably ever to be remembered as the feared Mr. Fix, is chuckling in his campaign photographs, and mirthfully making it look like a humor like a bowlful of jelly with the dieff.

Smiles, chuckles and hearty harhars in this election are no laughing matter — especially for the poor defenceless taxpayer who has to look at them and probably weep.

Wants CBC In Ottawa

Lethbridge Herald

Admittedly there is a central tension of entertainment and associated enterprises in Toronto and Montreal areas, and many people who would like to break into these fields think they can do so only by going to these cities.

But that's one of the things wrong with Canada and with Canadian broadcasting. Too many people think the country is built upon and exists primarily to serve Montreal and Toronto.

In the interests of Canadian nationhood and the people, the CBC should stay as far away as it can, "spiritually" at least, from these two smug, self-centred wildernesses of superficiality. Since the nation's political capital is more or less neutral ground, and is certainly more aware than either Toronto or Montreal of the nature and extent of Canada, it is fitting that the CBC head-quarters should stay right in Ottawa.

Cocoa Glut

Winnipeg Tribune

A world glut of cocoa has driven down the futures price of cocoa to less than 12 cents per pound, a level last seen in the early 1940's. Western Canadians have reason to understand what this kind of thing means. If prices for wheat were driven down to the levels prevailing prior to the Second World War, stark ruination would be the lot of Western agriculture and the economy on which it relies.

Strictly Personal

Words Are Frequently Misused

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

When actress Dorothy Malone was seriously ill last month, the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Los Angeles issued a bulletin which said, in part: "Her vital signs are beginning to stabilize — pulse, blood pressure and respiration. She still has a temperature."

Illiteracies of speech are thus more and more, creeping into print. A hospital, of all places, should know that everybody has "a fever."

This does not even have the excuse of being a short-cut, for "temperature" is a longer word than "fever," as well as being inaccurate. But such inaccuracies are increasingly winning acceptance as standard English, among laymen and specialists alike.

"He was diagnosed as suffering from ulcers" is another common misuse. One diagnoses a condition, not a patient; but the distinction is blurred in ordinary speech and writing. Likewise, we say someone "is undergoing treatment for sinus" which is like saying someone "is undergoing treatment for arm." A sinus is a bodily cavity, and only a "sinus infection" or a "sinusitis" can be treated.

Another recent news story reported: "When the car crashed up, the speedometer showed only 6,000 miles." The speedometer shows the rate of speed, not the total mileage, which is registered by the odometer. Yet this latter word has been wholly obliterated by the former, except for racing buffs.

A baseball item last week referred to one player as a "phenomenal hitter," which is a hallowed (and possibly ineradicable) misuse of the word. "Phenomenal" means "apprehended by the senses," but nowadays it is used only in the sense of "remarkable," or "extraordinary," so its original meaning has been utterly lost.

We also speak of "verbal" contracts as opposed to written ones; but all contracts are "verbal," that is, constituted of words. The opposite of a verbal contract is an "oral" one, but only lawyers make this distinction. (Which reminds me of the famous Goldwynism: "A verbal contract isn't worth the paper it's written on.")

Speaking of lawyers, a strange thing has happened to the legal word "moot." A "moot point" is one that is arguable or subject to discussion, but most people use it to mean exactly the opposite — superfluous or not open to debate. Words keep changing, of course, but must they keep changing in the direction of fuzziness?

Leisure Time

Ottawa Citizen

A popular conception of leisure is that it is an escape from the drudgery of earning a living. It is much more than that.

Leisure means freedom for the individual to play, to rest, to create—or to dream. Modern life has tended to broaden the gap between work and enjoyment. Work is usually regarded as something that should be pushed into the background as soon as possible, while leisure is too often looked upon as laziness.

Swelling Under Arm Often Follows Surgery on Breast

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Six years ago I had surgery for breast cancer and am thankful for good health since then. For the last 18 months, however, I have been bothered by swelling in my arm. The doctor says that elevating the arm is the answer but with a job and a family to care for, there is little time for that except when I am asleep and that is difficult. I am not complaining but have you any suggestions? — Mrs. W. W.

Usually such swelling occurs sooner, if at all. Scar tissue and interference with the flow of lymph in the armpit causes the trouble.

Yes, elevation of the arm is important, but good results also come from physiotherapy (baths, massage, etc.) and use of a long elastic sleeve.

If there is a rehabilitation centre nearby, it would be worthwhile for you to seek treatment there. If not, discuss the other suggestions with your doctor and point out to him your difficulty in keeping the arm elevated.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a seven-yearold. At birth he weighed 11 pounds 11 ounces, and now he is 4 feet 10 and weighs 150. He had a thyroid test taken recently which was normal, but since there is diabetes on both sides of the family I am concerned about his excessive weight. Can you help me? — Mrs. A. K.

You are wise in keeping tab. His birth weight, his weight now, and the presence of diabetes in both families make the lad a prime target for the disease.

He should also have a sugar tolerance test (a series of blood tests, showing how the sugar level behaves over a period of two or three hours), which will give a much more illuminating idea of his condition and prospects.

Then a program of weight reduction should be started.

Electronics Aid Traffic Cops

Massena Observer

A new weapon in the war against the motorist who guy who breaks traffic regulations and then ignores the tickets he gets is undergoing a test in New York.

A system combining the watchful eyes of police and the incredible memory of a computer is smashing motorists right and left. This is how it works:

A policeman at one end of a bridge radios random samples of license plate numbers of passing cars to a central computer, which has been programmed with the continually changing numbers of thousands of scofflaws, also the numbers of stolen cars.

Long before a car can cross the bridge — in a few thousandths of a second—the computer has scanned its memory banks and radioed back any wanted numbers to other officers waiting at the other end.

Since May, when the experiment began, 1,200 scofflaws have been located by this method.

So successful has it been that one police captain is convinced that general use of the system would pay for itself even before anyone was apprehended because it would encourage many motorists to pay their fines promptly.

Which is the way it should be.

Oct. 12, 1965 . . .

Sir Robert Borden announced the formation of his Union government, coalition of Conservative and Liberal ministers, 48 years ago today — in 1917 — in order to stand by the conscription bill which the previous Conservative government had passed. In the subsequent election the Liberal party was split, returning 68 members in favor of conscription and 82 anti-conscriptionists, of whom 60 were from Quebec. With 85 Conservatives, the Unionists were comfortably established in office, but the divergent aims of English and French Canada had been made once more a source of bitter disagreement.

Dear Dr. Molner: I had a successful operation for detached retina, but later I developed deterioration of the retina. My doctor tells me there is no treatment for this.

My family would like me to see another doctor, but I feel I can take my own doctor's word for it. I would appreciate your opinion. — Mrs. J. S.

I have no reason to doubt your doctor's diagnosis, either. But if the opinion of another specialist will make your family feel better, tell your doctor that you (or they!) want a second opinion.

A conscientious doctor doesn't recent calling in a consultant. He welcomes it. Sometimes another specialist may detect something else that may help.

gressor in Viet Nam. He reiterated his country's plea for negotiation of Viet Nam under the International Control Commission and a reconvening of the Geneva conference.

NOT DOING ENOUGH

William Worthy, American journalist who has spent much of his career on assignment in Communist countries, said the Vietnamese conflict was a "Hitler-type war" and "nobody—neither" (our) government nor people—is doing enough to stop it."

Michael Myerson, an American recently returned from North Viet Nam, was to have outlined the North Vietnamese position on the war but was excluded from the session, because Prof. Scalapino refused to participate in a debate with him.

The exclusion sparked a brief sit-in by students and some organized a separate meeting Sunday night at which Mr. Myerson spoke.

He said that next to the United States, Canada was the nation most disliked by North Viet Nam. The North Vietnamese believe the Canadian team on the International Control Commission lurns a blind eye to violations of the 1954 Geneva agreements by the U.S. and South Viet Nam.

Mr. Myerson said American raids on North Viet Nam are strengthening morale in that country, much as German blitz raids on Britain strengthened British morale during the Second World War.

Gunner, 72, Highlights Reunion

Outsiders would have started with surprise and amazement had they seen the "antics" of, who could be, the patriarch of Canada's Second World War active troops.

He is George "Pappy" Hepburn of Montreal, a member of the 14th Field Regiment, RCA, who served overseas with the unit.

"Pappy" is reputed to be 72 or 73 years of age. He is perhaps the only "old soldier" of the second conflict who served with a son, George Jr., in the same unit.

He evaded questions on the part of the colonel. He could not shake his statement of birth.

The colonel then tried to trap him with, "Hepburn, how old were you when you got married?" Pappy never blinked an eye.

"I've been married, sir, since I was twelve years of age."

Pappy made it. He went overseas with the unit and landed in France on D Day with the troops, as the colonel's chauffeur.

Pappy attended the 34th reunion the other day and proved to be one of the highlights of the get-together.

He sang songs in French and English, step-danced and teamed with Jim Browning in a bagpipe serenade that "brought the house down."

Rhodesian

since he left for London last week.

The opinion of the business community here took into consideration British threats to answer a unilateral declaration of independence with trade sanctions, a move which could shatter the colony's economy.

However, Smith was asked in London whether he believed economic sanctions would follow an independence declaration. He replied: "The answer is in the negative."

The British stand encompasses refusal to grant independence to the self-governing African colony without assurances that the government will pass into the control of the Negro majority within a "reasonable" length of time.

ODDS AGAINST OSW

Smith's protracted stay in London—talks broke off formally Friday—and his acceptance of a British proposal Monday for a last-minute meeting, revived speculation here that the odds are growing against an immediate seizure of independence.

Rhodesian High Commissioner Andrew Skeen told a group of British members of Parliament in London Monday night that Rhodesia is not worried about United Nations intervention in the independence dispute.

A resolution was brought before the UN General Assembly today calling on Britain to "take all steps necessary" to end what would amount to a rebellion by the Rhodesian government in the event of a unilateral declaration.

Skeen said talk of British force to block a breakaway was "too ludicrous. No Briton would try it against us. We are not in the least bit worried about what the United Nations or anyone else could do to us."

Lord Caradon, Britain's chief delegate to the United Nations, began consultations in London today on the Rhodesian problem and other issues. He flew from New York Monday night.

An African nationalist leader in Tanzania forecast a terror campaign against Rhodesia's whites if they declare independence. "We expect a lot of deaths but we are sure we will inflict some ourselves," said James Chikerma, president of the African Peoples Union.

Kiwanis Club to Resume 'Travel and Adventure' Series

The Kiwanis Club of Belleville will again present its "Travel and Adventures Series" and the first of these will be shown at the Belleville Collegiate Institute auditorium this coming Thursday evening.

The first travelogue will be based on "Portraits of Mexico" by Curtis Nagel. The cinema portraits of the famous Hollywood camera team of Curtis Nagel and William Moore are nationally acclaimed and recognized as the ultimate in beauty, color - content and interest. Their "Portraits of Mexico" is one of the finest of their 34 colorlogues produced through the years.

One will be instantly caught up in the charm of colorful Mexico - its unique costumes and costumes - its incomparable romantic music and dances - its distinctive architecture - its glamorous and magnificent capital of Mexico City - its gay and popular tropical resorts and luxurious hotels - all set in landscapes and seascapes of spectacular scenic grandeur.

History unfolds too, through the magic lenses of the Nagel - Moore cameras in this land older than Montezuma with pyramids rivaling those Egypt, and floating gardens reminiscent of Babylon and the magnificent cathedrals equal to those of France and Italy, and museums laden with art treasures.

The Kiwanis Club has arranged another outstanding series of programs for the 1965-66 season.

34th Battery RCA Marks 25th Anniversary Reunion

The camaraderie or "togetherness" that holds war veterans' organizations together was again clearly demonstrated here over the weekend.

The tie that binds, born in training camp and reared on battlefields, brought together some 80 members of the 34th Battery RCA for their 25th annual reunion.

It runs strongly through the 14th Field Brigade RCA of which the 34th was a member unit. Representatives of the other brigade batteries, the 66th of Montreal and the 81st of Shawinigan, Quebec, were here for the celebration.

Ably organized and arranged by the secretary of the 34th Association, Jim "Snipe" Matthews, the reunion ran off its sequence of events without a hitch.

Reminiscences and person al reunions came thick and fast.

One of the highlights was George "Pappy" Hepburn of Montreal reputed to be well over seventy, who "wangled" his way into the unit and served overseas. (See special story elsewhere).

Upwards of 100 members and guests attended the anniversary banquet held in the ANAF Branch auditorium Saturday evening.

Jack Lundberg ANAF Dominion Command president, was the chairman, and introduced the various toastmasters.

PROPOSE TOASTS

Ex-BSM Eddie Lee proposed the toast to the battery with response given by Bob Harper. Dick Reid of Montreal toasted the regiment with Alf Prince, Shawinigan, responding.

Art Duncan, well-known public relations official of Bata Shoe Company and popular after-dinner speaker of the district, gave the banquet address.

Mr. Duncan's clever and pithy claims, stories and anecdotes told with his delightful sense of humor and garnished with some fine philosophy, drew a fine ovation from the assembled guests.

A well-attended dance Saturday evening rounded out the first day's activities.

On Sunday morning, behind the ANAF Kilty Band, some 50 members paraded to the Salvation Army Citadel, Pinnacle Street, where they held divine services and again paid tribute to the memory of fallen comrades.

"This was the first time a veterans' organization memorial parade has been be at the Citadel," Jim Matthews said. "We were delighted with the extremely warm welcome afforded us Padre Ross Humphries conducted the service."

The main award of the reunion was won by Bill Ironsides of 9 Holden Street, Belleville.

The 34th Battery was organized in Kingston 25 years ago and later was brigaded with the 66th and 81st Batteries.

Arrangements have been made and plans will be drawn up shortly for the first brigade reunion. This is slated for Montreal in 1967, Canada's 100th birthday. It will be held in the shadow of "Expo 67".

The reunion went down into the units archives as another unqualified success. The greater part of out-of-town gunners stayed over until yesterday.

Medical Scholarship Awarded James Bonn

One scholarship was inadvertently omitted from the list of those presented at the Nicholson Catholic College graduation exercises, held in St. Michael's auditorium Friday evening. This was the Dr. E.G. Kennedy memorial Scholarship for $100, awarded to the Grade 13 student in the Quinte district going on to study medicine. The scholarship was awarded to James Bonn, now attending Queen's University, and was presented by Dr. J. B. McSherry.

Five Toronto Youths Facing Theft Charges

The quintet appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills and were remanded to November 2nd. on their own recognizances.

Leading up to the court appearance was the curiosity of constable Charles Peters, walking his Front Street beat early Sunday morning when he spotted a northbound car grieving towards him on the road for southbound traffic only.

He flagged it down and was joined by a curious, cruiser crew.

The officers then spotted chewing gum strewn on the car floor, checked further and found $16 in dimes and pennies in an overcoat on the rear seat.

The five youths were taken to headquarters for questioning and police slanted further investigation revealed theft of outside gum machines from Amodeo's groceteria, North Front Street.

Arthritis Society

Thirteenth of a series of articles on the 14 participating agencies of the United Appeal, explaining the functions of the agencies and their reasons for being included in the United Appeal Campaign.

In the Belleville are a alone, at least 1500 persons are suffering from one form or another of arthritis or rheumatism.

Contrary to popular belief, arthritis is a disease common to all ages. Generally speaking, arthritis attacks people in the productive prime of life. About 25 per cent of those disabled by it are of working age, many are children.

The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, or CARS, is fighting this dreaded disease, and it needs your help through the United Appeal.

There is no cure for arthritis, yet it is estimated that Canadians will spend $20 million dollars this year for useless gimcracks and panacess supposed to be cures.

But although the cure is not in sight, CARS has by no means lost hope. Pursued with adequate resources, medical research may well discover, within five or ten years the cause and cure for this disease.

COST IS HIGH

Arthritis will cost Canada 75 million dollars this year, through wages lost, treatments and research.

It has been said that arthritis does not get the attention it deserves because it is not lethal enough. It does not kill, it merely cripples. It is not dramatic enough. It merely leaches away life savings; it keeps its victims from earning a living and helps increase the public welfare burden.

Approximately 1.2 million Canadians have some form of arthritis. And it would be fairly safe to assume that at least two million days of work annually are lost because of arthritic disability.

GROUP OF DISEASES

What is arthritis? It is a group of distinct diseases. The warning signs are any persistent stiffness, inflammation, pain or swelling in and about joints.

It is a form of rheumatic disease, the kind that involves joint structures and sometimes other body organs as well. Most cases of arthritis belong to one of three common types: rheumatoid arthritis – a disease of the body as a whole, and not only of its joints, which may be mild, moderate or severe, but if neglected is capable of producing severe crippling and deformity; ankylosing spondylitis – mainly affecting the spine, which most often attacks men, usually young men; or osteoarthritis – not a systematic disease. It is essentially a wearing - out process of the weight - bearing joints, usually associated with advancing age.

There are many other, less common types, such as gout, non- articular rheumatism and rheumatic fever.

CAN REDUCE EFFECTS

Though there is no real cure there are effective treatments that prevent disability and deformity. Correct diagnosis is the foundation of proper treatment. With early diagnosis and treatment, serious disability can now be prevented in about four out of five cases.

Just what does C.A.R.S. do? Well, C.A.R.S. is a national, voluntary, non - profit health agency, with divisions and local branches throughout Canada. Thousands of volunteers and a professional staff of over 130, take an active part in the Society's program from coast to coast.

The society stimulates, promotes and co-ordinates the attack upon arthritis in Canada through research, professional education, public information and patient care. Its objective is to develop research, professional education and greater public awareness to the end that this major illness will ultimately be brought under control.

The Belleville branch provides a treatment centre at the Belleville General Hospital, rented from the hospital on a low-rental basis, two nights each week from 6.30 p.m. to 10 p.m. Patients referred there by their family physician are treated, regardless of their ability to pay, by a professional physiotherapist. Normally between 10 and 12 persons are present.

The society also maintains a consultation clinic, held every three months at the Belleville General Hospital, when a doctor (rheummatologist), a social worker and a physiotherapist from the Ontario Division are in attendance and to which those patients presenting special problems of diagnosis and treatment may be referred by their family doctor.

Belleville's CARS also helps support the Queen's University Rheumatic Disease Unit, that consists of a number of hospital beds set aside for specialized treatment of arthritis, research laboratories and teaching facilities and enables patients to receive long term care. Three area persons are now receiving long term care at no cost to themselves.

They also support a national program of research in the relentless fight against this terrible crippler.

FEES BELOW COST

While some fees are received for treatments given, the total is far below the annual budgeted needs. United Appeal contributions assist in meeting professional and consultation expenses, general administration expenses and support of a national research program.

The case of Mrs. J. is a typical one. She was suffering from acute rheumatoid arthritis and was referred by her doctor to the Arthritis Treatment Centre. Unable to walk without the help of another person, she also could not dress herself, sit down or stand up without assistance. Feeding herself was also very difficult. A program of drugs, rest and heat was offered.

As time passed, the disease became less acute, while the patient's edurance, dexterity and independence increased noticeably. Aids were provided to correct existing deformity of the hands and wrists as well as to prevent any further development.

Certain devices enabled Mrs. J. to feed herself and put on her own shoes. She was also taught ways and means of dressing herself and to perform household duties despite her disability.

When Mrs. J. was discharged after many months of treatment, she was able to walk home, dress and feed herself and return to her former employment on a part-time basis. The disease had subsided a great deal, and only a trace of deformity remained.

AUXILIARY BUSY

The Belleville branch of CARS has a self-supporting Women's Auxiliary performing valuable welfare services. Its loan cupboard contents, consisting of two exerciser bicycles, two glider chairs and two walkers, are loaned free to any arthritic person in the Belleville area.

The auxiliary also supplies groceries, orthopedic shoes and other necessities to needy arthritic patients. The members sponsor a Christmas party and a summer picnic for continual bed patients, often the only time these patients get out.

Though no cure has yet been found, researchers are hopeful of finding that cure. But research costs money, treatment of the disabled costs money and modern equipment costs money. This money is needed to fight a crippler that has caused more losses to all nations of the world than the losses suffered during all the wars every fought by man.

CARS needs and deserves your support. Give the United Way, through your Belleville United Appeal.

Sevigny Calls for Crusade To Establish World Peace

By DAVID MacDONALD

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Sevigny, former associate defence minister, called for an immediate Canadian crusade to Communist countries to demonstrate Canada's wish for peace during a teach-in here Saturday.

Mr. Sevigny, who served in the Diefenbaker cabinet, referred to the recent visit to New York of Pope Paul who asked United Nations delegates to work for world peace and said: "What's good enough for the Pope is good enough for me."

He gave the Progressive Conservative point of view in a panel discussion of Canadian Viet Nam policy before 500 students.

The teach-in was sponsored by the student-faculty committee for Viet Nam representing Loyola College, McGill University and Sir George William University. Those attending listened in later by an audio hookup on a similar discussion being held in Toronto.

On the panel with Mr. Sevigny were Ian Watson, Liberal member of the last Parliament who is running again Nov. 8, and Professor Charles Taylor, the New Democratic Party's candidate for Montreal Mount Royal.

Mr. Sevigny said Canadians have the highest standard of living in the world, have complete freedom of speech, and should become a world mediating force.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment held its annual reunion in Picton over the weekend. The Hasty Pees' new executive consists of, left to right, vice-president Mike Grohagan, president Tony Basciano and secretary-treasurer Pete Castle, all of Peterborough, Ont.

PICTON (Staff) — The wooden Indian-mascot of the famed Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was brought home to Picton Sunday to stand beside the reviewing stand in front of a forlorn and deserted armouries that was the original headquarters of the regiment.

The 30th annual reunion of the regiment of Hasty Pees or "Flow Jockeys" as they were often called, was held in Picton over Thanksgiving weekend.

Some 250 members attended the reunion, from all over Canada and as one veteran said, "What could be more fitting than to hold our reunion in Picton - where the regiment was first formed some 26 years ago and the nucleus of the famous Hasty-Pees began to learn the rudiments of squad drill, small arms drill with 1914 rifles."

The regiment held their dance in the Community Centre Saturday night and Sunday conducted their memorial service at the cenotaph. On the return march to the Community Centre from the service the parade led by the 100P band passed the reviewing stand in front of the armouries. On the dais to take the salute was Lt. Col. Angus Duffy, the regimental sergeant-major in the Second Great War. Along with Col. Duffy on the stand were Lt. Col. Willcocks of the Hastings and Prince Edward Militia and Lt.-Col. Haynes, Commanding Officer of the First Canadian Guards station at Camp Picton.

At the annual election of officers on Sunday morning the new executive for the coming year were elected: Past president, Mike Gohagan, of Peterborough, Ont.; President, Tony Basciano of Peterborough and secretary-treasurer, Peter Castle, of Peterborough, Ont.

It was also decided at this meeting that from now on all militia who served either in peace or war are now invited to join the Hastings and Prince Edward Association. The regiment reunion will be held next year in Peterborough, Ont.

MASCOT WENT TO DINNER

The Indian went to dinner — as well as being prominent near the reviewing stand as the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment marched past their old headquarters. The formal dinner held each year by the regiment crowded the upstairs of the Prince Edward County community centre to capacity.

Head table guests were introduced to the veterans by James Bird, Picton school principal and member of the regiment. Present for the occasion at the head table were Donald Bond and Mrs. Bond representing the Warden of Prince Edward County; Dr. and Mrs. Lionel Dockrill, Picton councillor representing His Worship Mayor J.J. McFarland; Mr. and Mrs. A. Douglas Alkenbrack, M.P.; Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Willcocks, Belleville; Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Haynes, 1st Canadian Guards, Camp Picton; Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Angus Duffy, Belleville.

Guest speaker for the dinner was Lt.-Col. Angus Duffy who was introduced by Lew Ames. Others who spoke were A. Douglas Alkenbrack, Dr. L. Dockrill, Reeve D. Bond, Lt.-Col. Willcocks and Lt.-Col. Haynes.

A. Douglas Alkenbrack in bringing greetings from Lennox said that they were proud of the record of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. We are also proud as you meet to uphold your traditions and recall your campaigns that brought glory to this Dominion of Canada, "Gentlemen of the Hasty Pees," Mr. Alkenbrack continued, "knowing you, the memorials you perpetuate will never die."

Lt.-Col. K. Willcocks, in his remarks, said, "the shutting down of the armouries has just halved our strength. We need help now from Picton and Belleville. We must inform the young men, he said, what a good thing the regiment is. We are no longer "super Boy Scouts" sitting around tying knots, he continued, we are now conducting a tactical training. We parade in battle order, live out and experience the type of rugged training that is expected of the army. "Our men," he said, "have recently won the Eastern Ontario award in patrolling competition and now we think we will take the Ontario championship. Many people think that all the regiment does is sit around and drink, we would like the public to know that this is untrue and that we are today a tactical training unit."

PRAISED GOOD WORK

Lt. Col. Haynes in his remarks referred to the situation in the militia and said that the First Canadian Guards would do everything they could to assist with the militia training program. The colonel praised the good record of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and said that their reputation as a regiment was known everywhere. Ours, by comparison with your long history, is just a baby unit.

Lt. Col. Angus Duffy said: "I could not help thinking, when we marched up the main street of Picton 25 years ago, of the change. We were going to war then, there were bands, great crowds of people and band clapping. I was pleased to see in the band today the two Lockyer boys. The Lockyers have been a tradition in the band and kept the band going from 1914 to 1940. Today they played Sussex by the Sea. It's a regimental song of the "Royal Sussex," with which we are associated.

"We went to war with 100 1915 rifles, and we won it," continued Col. Duffy, "our regiment showed patriotism, sacrifice and comradeship. These things are just as valid today. 99% of Canada is afraid to stand up and say "I'm not ashamed to fight for it and serve it. You should try to teach the young people and the rest of Canada to stand up for their country'. This regiment is doing something all of Canada should be doing, they should be proud to walk up 'Main Street' with their heads high and proud of their love for their country, Canada."

Guardsman Seriously Hurt In Accident

PICTON (Staff) — Two accidents in Picton on Sunday hospitalized three persons with serious injuries and involved five others. The first accident occurred at 5.35 p.m., when an auto driven by Guardsman Joseph P. Coe left the road when coming down Church St. hill from the direction of Camp. His vehicle struck a hydro pole and the car was badly damaged.

Coe was taken to hospital in Kingston where its condition is reported serious. He sustained serious head injuries.

Coe, a guardsman with the First Canadian Guards is married and was alone in the car at the time of the accident. He was reported still in coma late Sunday night.

At approximately 10 p.m. another accident occurred at the intersection of Church and Union Street about one-half mile from the scene of the first. A car driven by Marrit Wood of 176 Pine Street, Belleville, allegedly failed to stop at the intersection and struck a car driven by Gerald Freeborn, who was proceeding up Union St. hill on his way home with his wife and three children, all girls. Mr. Wood was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Ethel Wood, in their car. Both cars were badly damaged and all were taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital by Bond ambulance for treatment.

Mr. Wood was not seriously hurt and was not admitted.

His wife received a bad head laceration and multiple bruises. Mr. Freeborn also was not seriously injured. Mrs. Freeborn was admitted to hospital with a back injury. Of the three daughters, Virginia, Beverly and Barbora, one sustained a fractured ankle.

Safety Leaders To Hold Meet At Yacht Club

PICTON (Staff) — With the month of October being set aside by the Industrial Accident Prevention Association and the Ontario Fire Marshal's office for a special drive to reduce both industrial and highway accidents and fires, this town will be the gathering place for leaders in this field along with government, civic and industrial representatives to promote general safety in all such areas.

The Oct. 19th meeting will be in the form of a dinner meeting at the Picton Yacht Club. It will bring together representatives of some 30 industries of Picton, Belleville, Trenton and Kingston along with members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Mutual Aid Firefighters Association.

The meeting will be under the chairmanship of John Austin of the Downs Coulter Company of Canada, Trenton, who is the chairman of the Belleville, Trenton section of the IAPA. Co-chairmen for the program and special dinner are James Sault of Proctor-Silex and Art Duncan of Bata Shoe Co., Batawa. Co-ordinator is Miss Peggy Kerr, Belleville, Divisional Secretary of IAPA Central Ontario. Guest speaker for the event will be Chief Highway Safety Officer District 9 of the Ontario Provincial Police, who will give an illustrated talk on Highway Safety.

'Undesirables' Among Lawyers

DRUMMOND VILLE, Que. (CP)—Quebec Justice Minister Claude Wagner Sunday called on lawyers in the province to spurn the sort of shady practices which he said have deprived the legal fraternity of much public respect.

He said the Quebec bar has frequently served as a well be. hind which "a good deal of hypocrisy has sometimes been going on."

Mr. Wagner said a "knot of undesirables" is to be found among lawyers in the province.

There is some reason for a widespread loss of respect for lawyers and judges, he said, and the legal fraternity, "by our collective conduct, has provoked sarcasm and bitterness."

The minister told a convention of Quebec rural lawyers that a resurgence of vitality in the bar is in sight.

He urged a stepped-up effort by lawyers in the fight against organized crime and for the cause of truth.

Changing forms of wrong-doing required new forms of crime-prevention and these had been set in motion in recent years—a factor contributin to what Mr. Wagner called "the dramatic events of recent days."

He apparently was referring to the mysterious deaths of the bodies of men killed in what the justice minister says is a panicked underworld attempt to block his department's crime-busting activities.

Insurance Co. Loses Appeal In U.S. Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court declined Monday to review and thus let stand a decision that a Canadian insurance firm must make payments in the United States on a policy issued in Havana to Alicia Varas, a Cuban.

The decision was given by the Pennsylvania Superior Court and was appealed to the Supreme Court by the Crown Life Insurance Company, with home office in Toronto.

Crown has a branch in Haverford, Pa., which Miss Varas made demand on a company agent for a payment of the cash surrender value, $3,965, of her insurance policy. She now resides in Miami, Fla.

Crown's appeal to the Supreme Court said its property in Havana might be confiscated by the Cuban government if it is required to make such payments outside of Cuba. A Cuban law now prohibits such payments.

Picket Homes Of Workers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking oil workers extended their picket lines to five homes during the weekend, claiming the occupants were scabbing by driving British American Oil Co. Ltd. trucks.

Fred Geddes, president of the Vancouver local of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union (CLC), said Monday the five men are employed by BA as salesmen and the union took the action "to inform the neighborhood that the men are considered strike breakers."

Mr. Geddes said the union doesn't consider the salesmen to be supervisory staff. "They were hired to sell oil, not load trucks and drive trucks," he said.

OVEN BEEF STEW FOR FOUR

We were going to the football game and I wanted something ready for dinner on our return. More of our family was arriving later to play bridge so I could not dawdle over preparing dinner.

In my mind's eye I had a picture of me sitting in the stands at the game while at home in the oven a stew was simmering itself into a lovely state of tenderness. So just before we left for the stadium I put it into works. Preparation time was 20 minutes exactly.

TUESDAY
Dinner Menu

Turkey Hash; Cranberry Sauce or Jelly; Sliced Zucchini; Creamed Cauliflower; Sliced Tomatoes; Fresh Applesauce; Spice Cake; Tea

OVEN BEEF STEW (serves 4):

1½ lbs. stewing beef cut into 1" pieces, ½ cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 4 tablespoons butter or margarine, 2 chicken or beef bouillon cubes, 2¼ cups boiling water, ½ teaspoon accent, ¼ teaspoon garlic salt, 6 carrots, 1 large Spanish onion cut in eighths (or 4 medium cooking onions).

Into a paper bag measure the flour, salt, paprika and pepper. Shake the cut-up beef in this to dredge it. Melt the butter or margarine in a large frying pan, and tip the dredged meat and any loose flour remaining in the paper bag into the frying pan. Sear the meat over high heat on all sides until browned. Add accent and garlic salt. Turn all into large casserole. I used a 9 x 3½" baking dish. Put bouillon cubes in frying pan. Pour the boiling water over to dissolve them and to rinse out the pan, and pour this liquid over the meat in casserole. Add the raw carrots, scraped and cut into 1" pieces, and the cut-up onion or whole small onions. Cover and bake at 250 deg. Fahr. 3 to 3½ hours. (If desired, to stretch the stew, during last half hour add 1 small zucchini squash sliced thin and ½ lb. sliced mushrooms.)

I served this stew over hot split tea biscuits which I quickly made after our return from the game, which our team won. I kept the stew hot in the warming oven while the biscuits baked. Fluffy mashed potatoes or rice would be an appropriate accompaniment too.

Barclay – Hay

MR. AND MRS. ARNOLD W. BARCLAY

Janet Alexander Hay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Hume Hay of Gananoque, and Arnold William Barclay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon J. Barclay of Belleville were united in marriage by Rev. M. C. Young in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Gananoque, on Saturday, October 2, 1965. Mr. Fred Laughton was organist and Mrs. I. Doney was soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white peau-de-sole with a bell shaped skirt, jewel neckline and a full length train. Her headdress of silk illusion fell from a tiny coronet of pearls and she carried a bouquet of lily-of-the-valley.

Mrs. John Logan of Ajax, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Vincent Compeau of Gananoque were the bridal attendants. They were dressed alike in full length peau-de-sole gowns with matching headdresses. Mrs. Logan in emerald green and Mrs. Compeau in gold. They carried bouquets of bronze mums and yellow pom-poms.

Mr. Ronald Dulmage of Toronto was groomsman and Mr. Hugh Barclay of Kingston and Mr. John Logan of Ajax were ushers.

At the reception held in the Gananoque Inn, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a beige brocade suit dress with chocolate brown accessories and a corsage of yellow rosebuds. The bridegroom's mother assisted, in a dress and full length coat of blue and gold brocade with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

For her wedding trip to Killarney Lodge in Algonquin Park the bride chose an emerald green dress and hat with brown accessories, a beige top coat and a corsage of Talisman rosebuds.

On their return, the couple will live on Benjamin Street, Belleville.

U.C.W. Meetings

FRANKFORD U.C.W.

The general meeting of Frankford United Church Women was held on Tuesday evening, in Rose Lowery Hall.

The president, Mrs. C. Bennett, opened the meeting with a poem. Arrangements were completed for the U.C.W. to assist in the Manse open house Saturday, October 16th in the afternoon and evening.

The annual fall bazaar will be held on Wednesday, October 20th in Rose Lowery Hall.

Mrs. Preston Chase gave a report of the executive meeting of the Cobourg Presbyterial U.C.W. The annual Presbyterial meeting will take place on Feb. 16, 1966 in Warkworth United Church.

Mrs. Gordon Savage and Mrs. Len Hoyle conducted the worship service.

Mrs. Charles Bennett, Mrs. Hans Huer and Mrs. Jack Beach conducted a study on Brazil. This dealt with the people of Brazil. Ensuing unit studies will deal with the part the United Churches and other churches are taking in Brazil. Questions were answered from the congregation. Mrs. Bennett closed with prayer.

Mrs. Beach, with Mrs. Walter Morrow at the piano, taught the group a Brazilian hymn.

B and P Club Sponsors Fashion Show

NAPANEE — The Napanee and District Secondary School Parents' Club was the scene of a very successful fashion show, sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Club, arranged by Yvonne Wilson and Hazel Stewart.

Fashion commentator Jean Pratt described the styles as smart and some "way out." The new colors are parrot green and azalea. The evening dresses this year are floor length. Teen-age styles are above the knee skirts with wild, wild stockings. The luxurious fur coats shown had pelts arranged horizontally and colors ranged from light grey, to navy blue, which is very unusual for a fur coat.

Many different ensembles were shown during the evening by lovely models. The ladies and matron styles were worn by Jane Altenbrock, Lois Smith, Sue Sinclair, Elaine Wood, Eileen Clarke, Linda Gibbard, Beverly McLellan, Judy Dowling, Mrs. Hinch, Helen Loucks, Jean Daverne, Florence Clancy, Gladys Mooney. The Misses fashions were worn by Ann Wright, Cherie Baker, Elizabeth Skiba, Heather Sedore, Barbara Sedore, Verna Denison, Karen Degan, Ingrid Degan, Asta Degath. The children's models were Donna Walters, Barbara Dean, Kathy Gibbard, Ricki Walters and Barry Walters.

DOOR PRIZES

Tickets were drawn by Mrs. L. Smart and Mrs. D. Alkenbrack for the many door prizes given away during the evening. A hat donated by Bernice's hat shop was worn by Mrs. H. Ramsey. A suit donated by Mason's Department Store was won by Mrs. McTaggart, and a Kolinsky collar donated by McKays furrier was wone by Mrs. Madaline Way.

Betty Stimpson played soft music throughout the show and accompanied Mrs. H. Ramsey who sang a solo, and John Stimpson and Maxine MacEacheron, who danced during the intermissions.

A candy table was present at the door supervised by Ita Maguire and Ellen MacMillan. Tickets were also on sale for a beautiful wooden tray made by one of Gibbard's craftsmen and donated by Hazel Stewart.

Eleanor Aylsworth and Myrtle Russel were in charge of admission tickets. The proceeds from this show are used for awards presented to the students of N.D.S.S. at the commencement held in November.

Well known in Marmora and district, Mr. and Mrs. Edward O'Connor (inset) celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Sunday. They played host to scores of relatives and friends who came from near and far to congratulate them. Attending the reception following the anniversary mass were 35 grandchildren, 14 of them the children of Breen O'Connor and his wife, the former Lillian Kennedy of Toronto. They are, in rows across from top to bottom: Breen, Jr., 21, left; Dennis, 20; Leo, 18; Anne, 19; Donald, 17; Margaret, 16; Paul, 15; Eddie, 12; Lillian, 13; Patricia, 10; Kathy, 9; Janet, 4; Colleen, 7 and Maureen, 3.

Marmora Parish Hall Is Scene of Reception For 50th Anniversary

MARMORA — Hundreds of relatives and friends attended Mr. and Mrs. Edward O'Connor's 50th anniversary wedding reception in Sacred Heart parish hall here on Sunday.

A half a century earlier the couple were married at Hogan's hotel at Millbridge by the late Father Thomas Murtagh. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Hogan. The groom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Connor. Best man for the occasion was the late Leo Murphy while Mrs. Edward Keating, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. After the ceremony the newly weds boarded a train at Marmora station and travelled to Bothwell in the Chatham district to spend their honeymoon at the bride's brother's place. Their flower girl, Kathleen Keating, lives at Peterborough.

On Sunday the anniversary Mass was celebrated by Father Joseph Donnelly the couple's grandson, a priest with the Carmelite Order in Los Angeles, Calif. Sacred Heart's parish priest W. Healey presented Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor with matching wing chairs on behalf of the congregation.

From the union there were 2 sons, three daughters, 35 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren. Their five children include sons Michael of Montreal, and Breen of Marmora; daughters Mrs. Joe (Mary) Donnelly of Niagara Falls, Mrs. Don (Margaret) Courneya of Elgin and Mrs. Andre (Joan) Verreault of Montreal.

Mr. O'Connor farmed in the district until retiring in the village 17 years ago. He operated the White Bear Hotel there before Local Option was enforced.

MENU Magic from the KITCHEN

Apple Pie Topper

Come October and sensuel-topped apple pies are sure to be on the menu. For a crisper new topping, cream together ¼ cup each soft butter and brown sugar. Mix in ½ cup each flour and shredded Canadian Cheddar Cheese and ¼ cup chopped nuts. Sprinkle evenly on unbaked open-face apple pie and bake at 400°F. 10 minutes. Reduce oven temperture to 375°F. and bake until apples are tender, about 20 minutes longer.

Sauce-Y Tips

Next time you're planning to serve broccoli with a cheese sauce, make it with Canadian-made Swiss, instead of Cheddar. Season with nutmeg, salt and pepper. Delicious!

Caraway and Cheese

Two other vegetables we wouldn't dream of serving without cheese sauce, are cauliflower and cabbage. You'll find a teaspoon or two of caraway seeds added to your best Cheddar sauce makes a good flavor change. And sometime use the same sauce over buttered parsnips when you're serving them along with cold meat.

Cheese 'n' Onions

Before we finish with vegetables, here's a smart way to fix onions. Cook large, ones until par-boiled, drain and remove the centers. Chop the centers and combine with melted butter, fine bread crumbs and chopped almonds for a crunchy stuffing. After filling the onion cups, sprinkle generously with grated Cheddar Cheese, then bake about 20 minutes in a 350°F. oven. This makes a good accompaniment for roast pork.

Festival Time

Our recipe ideas feature cheese this month because it's National Cheese Festival time again. A golden opportunity to remind you that there are over 40 different types of cheese now being made in Canada. That's one for every day of the month, with some left over! So why not go adventuring along the cheese counter and try a new one.

Restaurants Feature Cheese

Happily, October is also Restaurant Month . . . a perfect excuse for dining out, if you need one! You'll find Canadian chefs taking advantage of the flavor of good cheese, as do good cooks everywhere, not only this month, but the year round.

Ann Landers

Stealing Will Always Be Dishonest Act

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are trying to raise our son to be an honest, law-abiding citizen, but we aren't getting much help from the outside. Here is an example of what I mean:

Last week I found a hotel ash tray in our son's room. (Hal is 15.) I asked him where he got it and he said, "I took it. I'm collecting souvenirs." I told him it wasn't right to appropriate hotel property—no matter what he called it. I then wrote a letter to the hotel manager describing the ash tray. I explained Hal had taken it and asked how much he owed.

The reply from the hotel manager read: "Your boy doesn't owe us anything. We want people to take our ash trays. It is good advertising." This letter has made me a laughing stock at home and set my "integrity and honesty program back 10 years.

I realize things have changed since you and I were 15 but have they changed so much that people are expected to steal? Your opinion is wanted — and needed. — M.D.J.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR M.D.J.: Several weeks ago I published a letter from a woman who complained because a relative stole ash trays, sugar bowls, linen — whatever she could get her hands on — from hotels and motels all over the country. Her home was practically furnished in Early Holiday Inn. She asked my opinion. I said, "It is dishonest and indefensible."

I received several letters describing me as naive and foolish. I was told that people are expected to walk off with items bearing the name of the establishment — (I got this word from outfits that manufacture the gadgets.)

Shocked? You bet. But I'm not budging. If it is foolish to oppose stealing then I'm a fool, but I stand foursquare behind my original advice.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have just reread this letter and it sounds like petty high school stuff, but it is far more serious. I can't express myself clearly in writing. Ann, but I do need help.

I'm a married woman with a family. A close friend of mine (I'll call her Daisy) repeated some dreadful things about a mutual friend whom I will call June. I telephoned June and told her I wanted nothing to do with her because of the things I had heard. (I did not name my source.)

Last week I ran into Daisy and June, who were having lunch together. They appeared to be thick as thieves. That evening I phoned Daisy and asked her for an explanation. She said, "I found out the stories I had heard about June are untrue. She's really a nice person." What should I do now? — THIRD LEG.

* * *

DEAR THIRD: Now you can kick yourself with that third leg for condemning the girl on the basis of vicious gossip. Apologize to June and how time will heal the rift. (P.S.: Who said Daisies don't tell?)

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please answer this in your column. It might open a few eyes and shut a few mouths.

A friend of mine has a teen-age daughter. They fight like cats and dogs. The poor girl can't do anything right. Her mother is continually finding fault with her friends, her hair, her walk and the way she talks.

The thing that baffles me is this: The daughter is a carbon copy of her mother, not only in looks but in actions. The mother must see it. So why is she so hostile to the girl? — KWEST-IONER.

* * *

DEAR K.: The faults parents find most difficult to tolerate in their children are the ones they have themselves. I feel sorry for the girl. Living with a hypercritical, fault-finding mother is like being nibbled to death by a duck.

* * *

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What to Expect from Marriage," enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Kiwanis Aux. Hears Talk On Education

On Thursday evening members of the Kiwanis ladies' auxiliary met at the Kiwanis centre for their first meeting this fall. Despite the heavy rain that was falling the attendance was very good.

The president, Mrs. Don Hickson opened the meeting and welcomed the members and visitors.

A short business session followed. Mrs. C. Mott will again look after the bridge marathon which will begin the first of next year. Members were given dolls to take home and dress, these will later be put in welfare baskets and distributed at Christmas by the Kiwanis Men's club. An auction sale will be held at the November meeting.

A blood donor clinic will be held at the Kiwanis Centre on Thursday, October 14th.

With the completion of the business the guest speaker for the evening, Mr. Ed Buckley was introduced by Mrs. John Denton. Mr. Buckley is a graduate of St. Michael's school here in Belleville and received his M.A. at Ottawa University.

Mr. Buckley's subject was "continuing education". Today many men have found it necessary to return to school to further their education as the means of earning a living has changed greatly in the past few years. Work for unskilled labourers is becoming less and less with automation doing away with many of the jobs that unskilled laborers were able to do. If one is to have work today the need for education is greatly increased. Ninety per cent of the unemployed in this area today are Canadians and many come from rural areas. In 1910, 13 per cent of our teenagers were in school, today 95 per cent of teenagers attend schools. Therefore the cost of education has greatly increased.

Mr. Buckley was thanked on behalf of the Kiwanis ladies' auxiliary by Mrs. Robert Brain and a small gift of appreciation was given to him.

Susanna's Family Fare

DULS TROUBLE

NOTE: Answer to this letter taken from Dept. of Agriculture news release.

Dear Susanna: Our huge rummage sale included a flower booth for the first time last year. Assorted Dutch bulbs were the big feature, and to assist this project most of our members (including me) ordered a supply of these pretty bulbs for planting in the fall. Now they have arrived — about 90 of them — and I honestly don't know exactly how to go about planting them. How deep, how far apart, how anything! — "What Now?"

The most common planting method is to dig holes with a trowel and drop each bulb in individually. (Anyone can see from this opening statement that I know just what I'm talking about!) Plant now for spring blooms, but first dig the soil up well, and wherever possible add organic matter to improve the physical condition of the soil. The application of a complete garden fertilizer is also advised.

How deep do we dig? A general rule to follow is to cover the bulb with about twice its own depth of soil; thus a bulb that is one inch from base to apex should be covered with two inches of soil. Bulbs should be planted slightly deeper in light, sandy soils than in those of heavier texture. Tulip bulbs may be planted reasonably close together — three to four inches apart when individually clumps are being arranged in a border . . . and you'll know which end of the bulb is up by its little pointed head! — SUSANNA.

Dear Susanna: My metal venetian blinds had lost their shine from repeated cleanings. Twice thin coats of self-polishing floor wax restored their lustre beautifully.

Might also add that soiled plastic tapes respond well to a scrubbing with warm water and kitchen cleansing powder on a soft brush. Rinse thoroughly. — Marian Chisholm

Mother's Helper

IF YOUR TODDLER no longer naps but still takes a "play rest," he needs a Snap-and-Tie Board. I made ours by fastening various "rest" things in a piece of masonite board with epoxy glue—the top of a tennis shoe, with shoestring—a strip of washable zipper—fabric cuff from shirts and sheets with snaps and buttons that fasten properly. My mopped loved to manipulate the everyday articles again and again. (Idea from Mrs. James Parker, Morristown, N. J.)

New 'Drymaster' Control gives clothes a new lease on life!

The new 1966 Inglis Royal Automatic Dryer dries garments faster than ever before, yet with a totally new kind of tender care. "Drymaster" control precision-dries every known kind of fabric for the exact length of time, to produce the exact degree of dryness you want. This extra-special Inglis drying care helps clothes to last longer, look nicer.

You set the dial, but "Drymaster" works out its own drying-run, then shuts off the machine when clothes are as dry as you want them to be. Fabric fibres are never scorched or over-dried. The new 1966 Inglis Royal Automatic Dryer also has 2 speeds! Normal speed for regular drying action. Low speed for delicate fabrics.

New Push-Button Fabric Selector

Touch a button to select the exact fabric drying temperature you need: heavy, regular, wash'n'wear, delicate or air-fluff. Fabric Selector works in conjunction with "Drymaster" control to give you foolproof, precision-drying, for every known fabric from hard-working corduroy to gossamer chiffon.

See the matching 1966 Inglis Royal Automatic Washer!

Rev. G. Paul Addresses Graduating Class at Albert College Conservatory

By RETA LAWRENCE

Though scientists have recognized that the weather affects the physical and mental well-being of people, no ill effects were evident at the 100th Fall Convocation at Albert College on Monday afternoon. Despite cold and threatening rain, Memorial Chapel was filled with the sunshine reflecting from the faces of the graduating class.

Rev. H. M. Davis, BA, BD, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada, pronounced the invocation.

Mr. H. B. Simpson, BA, Principal and Headmaster, presided.

OFFERS CONGRATULATIONS

Mr. Simpson first offered his congratulations and best wishes to the graduates. He told them that in a very real sense the responsibility of the college rests in their capable hands, and that he has no doubt that Albert College will be mightily represented by them.

Mr. Simpson then called a welcome, and expressed appreciation to the Board of Governors and their chairman, the Hon. Owen's Guild, the Faculty and the Belleville Presbytery for their interest and assistance, as well as a welcome to the new members of the faculty and the new chaplain, Rev. Paul Francis Gerard, B.A., B.D., S.T.M. He said, "Keenness of mind and depth of understanding for their challenging tasks will be invaluable to the school."

The Headmaster also described the summer work of renovation in the forms of new classroom lighting, extensions and a new heating unit. The college is at full capacity enrolment and this, its 109th year, promises to be the best in the history of the school.

The choir under the direction of Mr. J. M. MacKay, B.A., B. Paed., with Mr Douglas Hoare, B.A., as organist, sang several selections, including the Albert College hymn.

INTRODUCES SPEAKER

Vice-Principal MacKay introduced the guest speaker, Reverend Gerald Paul, B.A., B.D., who is at present Interdenominational Chaplain to the Ottawa Universities, with headquarters at Carleton University.

From 1942 to 1946 Reverend Paul served with the Canadian Army, after which he worked as an electrician with International Nickel Company in his birthplace of Sudbury. He returned to Albert College in 1947, graduated in 1950, and entered Queen's University where he subsequently received his B.A. and B.D. As a student minister he held charges at Boulter, Calvan, Kingston and Elginburg. In 1957 he was ordained by the Hamilton Conference and after ordination was minister at Manitouwadge and North Bay. He has four sons and one daughter.

THREE WONDER WORKERS

Rev. Paul chose as his topic, "Wonder As a Way of Life." "The three greatest wonder workers," he said, "are nature, prose and poetry." His interest in the wonders of the world of birds has prompted him to write a book, recently published, entitled, "Blessed are the Bird Watchers." In his address he sighted many of the wonders of everyday life, which many people never notice, but rather take for granted. "A pinch of sand," he continued, "connects one with the past. It may once have been a part of a mighty mountain. Nothing in nature is too small for wonder and increased awareness.

Well written or well delivered prose can bring about agreement when it comes to loving our fellow men, despite differences in theological viewpoints. "It may well be that where there is Love there is God. The wonder of love can change the face of a sinner to the face of a saint."

Poetry is the best words in the best order. It creates wonder and visions and permits the game of life, which is begun in a fog, to be continued in sunlight."

Create a mood of wonder to be with you all through your adult life. Stand still and consider the wonders of God."

Mr. Wilson thanked the guest speaker.

AWARDS PRESENTED

Argyll Chapter IODE Hears Report On Aid to Schools

The regular meeting of the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held in the Officers' Mess in the Armouries. The regent, Mrs. K. D. H. Willcocks, opened with the I.O.D.E. prayer said in unison and the standard bearers brought the flag forward.

Correspondence was read from Mrs. F. M. Burtt thanking the chapter for a gift she received on her departure to Ottawa; also enclosed was a donation towards the dessert bridge returns. A thank-you note was received by Mrs. Vaughan, educational secretary from David Bush of the IODE adopted school, for a cheque received on his attaining high-est marks on entering secondary school.

A scholarship valued a $100 is to be given to student with the highest marks on leaving Grade 13. This student is eligible as the child of a veteran.

Blood Donor Clinic will be held in the Kiwanis Centre October 14th, and several members offered to help.

A well written essay by a Grade 7 public school pupil was read by Mrs. W. E. Reaume, world affairs convener. This covered the recent visit of Pope Paul and was most interesting.

It was decided to purchase a wreath for the cenotaph and Mrs. A. Duffy, services at home and abroad convener, and the regent will place the wreath on Armistice Day.

A rummage sale will be held in the armouries later in the month.

A questionnaire was presented from national headquarters, re proposed changes in the constitution. Each member was asked to state her opinion in a secret ballot.

The meeting was adjourned and refreshments served. The program convenors presented a film which created much interest, "The Invisible Keystone."

Church Groups

WESLEYAN METHODIST W.M.S.

The president, Mrs. Lyla Vickery conducted the meeting with Mrs. Helen Spearman and Mrs. Violet Mitts assisting in the devotions.

Mrs. Votary announced the forthcoming bazaar at the Hartings Manor and several ladies were delegated responsibilities for this worthy annual event, to be held October 20th. Plans for the season were presented and the executive has requested the assistance of the society to make drapes for the Sunday School rooms; also to refurnish smaller items for the nursery. Each member was asked to bring a used toy for the nursery to the next meeting.

The Canada Conference project for the year was again announced. It was planned to bring a missionary back to Canada from Australia who has not been home for seven years. October was designated as the month to aid at the service for this need.

In attendance at the service was the conference president, W. J. Spearman, who brought a detailed report of the Eastern Missionary convention held in September. She brought up to the minute reports from representatives at the convention which included the overseas, church extension and the American Indian departments of the denomination.

Warning Letter Might Hurry Paying of Debt

DEAR DORIS: We loaned $200 to a friend who begged for it, three years ago. He has only paid back $15. We have his I.O.U. for the debt.

He has a good job. I have called him about it. Now he has started dodging us, having his children tell me he is not in, and so on.

Please advise if his wages could be garnisheed. Would it be worth while to take him to court? How about the collecting agencies, did they help? — SOFT TOUCH.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR SOFT: Fees to a lawyer or collection agency could cost anything between one-third and one-half of the amount owing. But you could file a claim yourself in your provincial Small Debts Court (variously termed Division Court, Magistrate's Civil Court, or similar name).

If the claim is not defended, you get a judgment against the debtor. The sheriff might then attempt to obtain your money by seizing his car or some other item of value; or by having the court issue a garnishee, which requires his employer to apply against this debt any money accruing to this individual's benefit. The cost of such action is very small.

Ahead of taking this step, I'd suggest a warning letter telling him of your intention. This might be enough to jar the money loose.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I have a presumedly good friend, who is really a pretty girl. She has a sweet face, stylish hair, a nice shape and a fun-loving personality. No matter what she wears, she always manages to look lots better than I do, and therefore feel like a tramp whenever I'm around her. What should I do?

She attracts every boy. Whenever she sees other girls getting a bit of attention she has to start acting superior and so feminine. This is getting me down. — IN THE SHADE.

DEAR IN THE SHADE: Sometimes I feel sorry for the too-pretty girl, who learns to [illegible] on her looks. For a while she believes — and so do the boys — that fine feathers make fine birds. Only with more maturity comes a finer sense of what is beautiful.

Do what you can with your appearance, with the help of my leaflet "Are You Really Growing Up?", then bend your efforts to developing personality, learning to make conversation, being helpful — never, never stooping to criticize another girl.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I have been married for 15 years and am supposed to be a good mother. What would you do if you had a husband who just took off in the car for two or three days and didn't even tell you where he was going?

I get so worried I get sick. I am a nervous wreck anyway, being under the doctor's care. Would you leave him? He's 60 years old. He just started this since the three children have grown up. This is our second marriage.—A NERVOUS WRECK.

DEAR NERVOUS WRECK: Next time, try being gone when he gets back. Let him face the possibility that he could lose you, entirely. When he gets sufficiently frantic, materialise again and demand a clear understanding about your responsibility to each other. Then stand firm.

Women's Institutes

PLAINFIELD W.A.

The October meeting of Plainfield W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. A. Wright with an attendance of 17 members and three visitors.

The president, Mrs. Sullivan presided and opened the meeting in the usual manner.

Mrs. C. Marshall, convener for education introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Timmins, field secretary for the blind from Kingston and also Mr. Shepard who accompanied him and who will be a secretary in the near future.

Mr. Timmins outlined the splendid work being done by the C.N.I.B. and urged all Canadians to support the activities of the C.N.I.B., all over Canada.

Mrs. Marshall presented Mr. Timmins with a gift in appreciation of his visit to the Institute.

A panel discussion by Mrs. H. Harrison and Mrs. F. Hodgin on education was most interesting.

An invitation was extended to the Institute to attend a district Tweedsmuir tea at Roslin United Church hall, the latter part of October.

A consumers' report was given by Mrs. A. Legge.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Wright and her assistants.

Home, School Holds Program Planning Laboratory

A valuable advance in the science of better meetings was made at the "Program Lab." held recently at the Harry J. Clark School under the direction of the Leadership Training Committee of the Belleville and District Home and School Council.

"Good programs just don't happen . . . , they are carefully planned" was the theory being researched.

With the use of discussion techniques and visual aids, the three stages for successful programs for Home and School Associations were explored; namely, "mechanics", "methods" and "meat".

A program committee is also responsible not only for the ideas for the programmes, but, also, for the "how", "when", "why", "who" and "what" of it.

The effectiveness and vitality of a Home and School Association depends upon the programs planned within that Association and the degree to which these programs meet the needs and interests of the members.

Carefully planned programs will inform, explain and interpret the Department of Education' current and future plans, local school and school board plans, the training and development of children and subjects pertaining to family life.

Home and School's main contribution to the community must be to provide such information on a regular basis.

To ensure that programs meet the needs of the Association, program committees were told to consider these questions: "Do we reach all parents who are new to our system as well as Home and School members of long standing? Do we avoid duplicating the functions of other community organizations? Do we devote enough time to programs which interpret school and Department of Education policies and plans? Do programs meet the needs of our members? Do we consult the school principal and staff concerning areas of greatest need, such as homework, discipline, curriculum? Do we need more than four programs a year to foster and maintain interest? Do we place sufficient emphasis on member participation or do we rely on too much on speakers? Do we check on the teachers' participation to assure them a pleasant evening and not a series of unscheduled parent - teacher interviews? Do we provide clear channels of communication? Is there a two - way exchange of ideas between executive and members; between association and council and Ontario federa-

[illegible] Constant communi...on leads to good administration and helps to train future officers. Do we remember the Home and School objectives and build them into programs?"

Course leader for the "Program Lab" was Mrs. B. Stenson, chairman of the Leadership Training Committee. Mrs. L. Jourard and Mr. J. Welch assisted.

As a follow-up to this meeting the Belleville and District Home and School Council has arranged for a general meeting at Harry J. Clarke School on Thursday evening, October 21st, to explore, discuss and evaluate the whole area of [illegible] "membership." October is [illegible] month for Home and School.

300 Eskimos Will Get Jobs In New Mary River Iron Mine

By STUART LAKE

MARY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP) As many as 300 Eskimos will be employed when a big iron mine goes into production at this Eastern Arctic settlement, says Murray Watts, the Toronto prospector who staked the claim several years ago.

A few are already on the payroll of the preliminary work camp set up at this site 60 miles from Milne Inlet on the northern tip of Baffin Island.

The 55-year-old Mr. Watts told a reporter that drilling up to August had revealed 128,000,000 tons of ore containing up to 70 per cent iron. This represents 40 years of production and the figure could easily be doubled when survey work is completed, he added.

Feasibility studies are under way to determine if the ore, said to be the world's richest, can be delivered to markets overseas at competitive prices. The studies are expected to be completed early in 1966.

Anglo - American Corp. of South Africa, principal shareholder in the find, already has filed a town plan with the northern affairs department calling for a modern community to be located here. Housing is to be provided for a work force of 400.

"Eskimos are good, dependable workers and it only makes sense to employ as many permanent residents of the Northwest Territories as we can," said Mr. Watts, who spends a great deal of his summers prowling about the camp.

TRAIN ESKIMOS

The Eskimos will be doing semi-skilled jobs and so will have to be trained either at the mine or at schools in Frobisher.

Watts said the feasibility studies are based upon a two-month shipping season. The ore would be stockpiled at Milne Inlet and placed aboard specially-built ships while the harbor is free of ice.

Some work is being carried out in hopes of extending the ice-free season. This involves bubbling warmer water from the harbor floor to delay freeze up and placing material on the ice in spring to hasten breakup.

"But any success in this work will be considered as so much gravy."

Studies have shown that it will be much cheaper to move the ore from here to Milne Inlet by rail and not trucks.

The company is aiming at overseas markets because the ore here is too rich for New World furnaces. Mills in North America are fed pellets produced from concentrators using ore with 35-per-cent or better iron content.

Mr. Watts said contracts in Europe and Asia now are running out and that his company hopes to obtain long-term agreements within a short period of time.

NORTHERN MINE PLANS ESKIMO WORK FORCE — Murray Watts, the Toronto prospector who discovered what is believed to be the world's richest iron deposits in Canada's eastern Arctic, plans to have a large Eskimo work force at the mine. As many as 300 Eskimos will be employed in a work force of about 400. The company is aiming for European and Asian markets because the ore, which runs up to 70 per cent iron, is too rich for North American furnaces. (CP Photo)

FINE UPHELD

PARIS (Reuters) — A Paris appeal court Monday upheld a fine of 18,000 francs ($3,900) imposed by a lower court last May on self - taught biologist Gaston Naessens for illegal practice of medicine and pharmacy. The court ordered seizure of equipment used by Naessens to produce "anablast," a preparation which he claimed could cure leukemia and doubled the 5,000 francs damages awarded by a lower court to the Paris Doctors Union.

CURIOUS KEEP VIGIL on Cannifton bridge as Provincial Police officers probe Moira River throughout Saturday morning and afternoon in search which later confirmed fears Corbyville man drowned.

Swing Seen To Provinces Says Thompson

BEAMSVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Robert Thompson, leader of the Social Credit party, said Saturday "the pendulum of strong government has swung from Ottawa to the provinces."

Mr. Thompson said at a federal election campaign meeting in this community 30 miles west of Niagara Falls that any of the 10 provinces could provide Canada with a better government than the federal administration in Ottawa.

He said the real issue of the campaign is not a desire for majority government but the need to return to responsible principals.

"Today, national unity has broken down because today's leaders play one against the other," he said. Both the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives are burying principles to gain power by perpetuating the spoils system and bribing voters with their own money, he said.

Body of Man Found in River At Cannifton

The body of a 50-year-old Corbyville man was found in the Moira River Saturday after police, fearing he might have drowned, began dragging operations at Cannifton.

The search for Charles James A. Hinze, resident on Thurlow township's second concession, R.R. 6, Belleville started when his car was spotted parked on the Cannifton bridge from late Friday night.

As curious spectators lined the bridge police dragged the river through Saturday morning and afternoon for signs of the personal tragedy.

Finally police called in skin-divers Peter Weskett, Garnet Brown and Ronald Chapman. The divers located Mr. Hinze's body in about 12 feet of water, 50 feet south of the bridge.

Police estimated he may have drowned about 10 p.m. Friday.

Mr. Hinze had been employed at Corby Distillery for the past 18 years.

Born in Monteagle township, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hinze, he is survived by his wife, the former Alma Robinson, two sons, Ellis and Warren, both of Thurlow township, and two brothers and three sisters: Frank and Clifford Hinze, both of Maynooth; Mrs. John (Ena) Vance, Bancroft; Mrs. Fred (Violet) Le-Bow, Harold; Mrs. William (Nellie) Watson, Corbyville.

Also surviving are five grandchildren.

Mr. Hinze was a member of Wesleyan Methodist Church.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon from the John R. Smith Funeral Home where service in the chapel was conducted by Rev. E. F. Leroy. Interment was in Elmwood Cemetery.

The bearers were Walter Watson, Percy Hinze, Edgar LeBow, Floyd Jenkins, Dodge Franklin and Robert Ackerman.

Way Suggested for Smith To Have Cake and Eat It

By HAROLD MORISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Lord Lambton, a British foreign office aide during the Suez crisis, suggests there is a way in which Ian Smith can have his cake, eat it and at the same time embarrass the British government.

Having failed to obtain independence the legal way, the Rhodesian prime minister could meet with his cabinet and legislature and declare that his government intends to seize independence, but without fixing an official deadline.

The British government could not say this was an act of rebellion, since the actual step of independence had not been formally taken. But the Smith regime would obtain greater freedom to manoeuvre by imposing a continuing threat without the need to take the formal plunge.

Lambton, writing in the London Standard, suggests this is the wisest course Smith could follow. The Commonwealth might make a big noise but its argument would be legally weak, since there is a great gap between an actual commitment of an offence and the mere declaration of intent.

WOULD ANGER MANY

No doubt such a move by Smith would anger a great number of the non-white countries in Africa and elsewhere. There might be demands for sanctions and invasion and United Nations action, but legally the matter would be one only for the British government to decide, and Prime Minister Wilson might find himself opposing outside interference with a British colony.

The matter, so far, is only one of speculation and conjecture. Even at this stage, the British government finds itself highly embarrassed. There is no doubt that Smith does not represent the Rhodesian majority of 4,000,000 non-whites. It is not representative government, and yet it exists and controls the country.

The voice of the repressed Negroes increases and the British government, in response has called for a new independence conference at which the jailed and restricted Negro nationalists would be present. Smith wants no part of this. Wilson may not press him too hard.

Smith played his cards well. He got seven days of public exposure in London, where his [illegible] reaction indicated that the British public is sharply split on the issue and that Smith himself is personally popular. The Negro nationalist leaders didn't get equal exposure, because they were under guard back home.

Wilson is well aware that a things stand, the British electorate may feel more disposed towards Smith than towards some obscure non-whites languishing in a Rhodesian jail.

Pakistan Has Played Last Card To Wrest Kashmir From India

By JOE McGOWEN Jr.

RAWALPINDI (AP) — Pakistan has played its last card in the latest round of its effort to wrest the state of Kashmir from India and now must bank on moves by outside forces.

Several ranking Pakistani officials admit this. It also is the general feeling of Western diplomats.

But because of security regulations still in force here, officials say they are unable to disclose the full picture of the war's toll.

—Pakistan had as many as 600 to 800 men killed in combat, including a number of officers.

—The country's third five-year economic plan, which began in July with a projected total expenditure of $10,000,000,000, has been set back a year.

UN HOLDS KEY

Any hope for a solution to the 18-year- Kashmir problem now lies with the United Nations and efforts by one or more of the major powers.

Foreign Minister Z. A. Bhutto was sent to New York to plead Pakistan's case, both on the floor and in the cloakrooms of the United Nations. He returned to Rawalpindi for two days of consultations and then, despite illness and fever, rushed back.

It is up to him to keep the Kashmir issue alive before the UN and world powers. Resting on his shoulders are Pakistan's hopes that the world powers can be swayed to exert sufficient pressure upon India to relax its stubborn stand against a Kashmiri plebiscite.

The urgency of the situation from Pakistan's standpoint may well prompt President Mohammad Ayub Kahn to visit the United States. There were indications that such a visit was in the offing, but President Johnson's surgery has halted this speculation for the moment.

There has been signs that Pakistan may be softening its previously bedrock stand, which included a demand for a plebiscite within three months. But just how Pakistan might negotiate on Kashmir is not clear.

But speculation included the possibility of making Kashmir a sort of autonomous state with the big powers as watchdogs and a timetable for an eventual plebiscite, or division of the disputed Himalayan state, with the Moslem-majority part of Kashmir going to Pakistan and Hindu - majority Jammu state (southerly portion of Kashmir) going to India.

One thing has become clear. If Pakistan's demands are shunted aside in the UN, Pakistan and all of the subcontinent will be in for more trouble.

Government officials, the Pakistani press and all concerned have convinced the public that Pakistan's armed forces, though one-fourth the size of India's, won a mighty military victory. There were many demands for a punitive blow deep into Indian soil and there was a great deal of unhappiness when Ayub Khan accepted the UN call for a cease-fire.

Most persons fear it will not be as easy to control Pakistan next time if its leaders come home empty-handed.

Tensions Have Lessened Says Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Monday Canada should take every opportunity that presents itself to become more involved in world affairs and to work towards international peace.

In a CBC free time election campaign television appearance with two Liberal members of the last Parliament, Mr. Pearson said he believed international tensions have lessened in the last two years.

John Turner, MP for Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George who is seeking re-election, said some people think Canada is over - committed internationally and asked for Mr. Pearson's views.

"We are not over-committed abroad," said Mr. Pearson. "We should do everything we possibly can do to take advantage of every opportunity . . . if it will do anything in this world to increase the chance and promote international security."

Mr. Turner and Pauline Jewett, a political science professor seeking re-election in the Ontario riding of Northumberland, said university students and other young Canadians are anxious to participate actively in peace efforts and international aid.

On domestic affairs, Mr. Pearson said President Johnson had not known Canada when he took office but is rapidly developing to appreciate this country's problems and importance in U.S. trade.

Mr. Johnson has been invited to visit Ottawa when he can, the prime minister added.

SAFER SHOT DOWN

SAIGON (AP)—Morley Safer, 34, a correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System and two CBS cameramen were in a helicopter shot down Sunday by Viet Cong guerrilla ground fire 280 miles north of here. Safer, of Toronto, the cameramen and the helicopter's crew all escaped injury, a CBS spokesman said.

Rain Curtails Annual Mohawk Plowing Match

The farm of Stanley Brant, 1½ miles east of Shannonville was a busy place on Saturday as members of the Mohawk Band competed in the 47th annual plowing match, held under the auspices of the Mohawk Plowmen's Association.

Scheduled to start at 10 a.m. the meet was delayed until 1.30 because of rain.

Of the eight classes open for competition, only four were competed for under the watchful eyes of Judge Russell Morrison of Beaverton, Ontario.

Class 1 (mounted plows only) 1st Leslie Claus; 2nd Ross Carlisle; 3rd William J. Brant. Class 3 (Indians only) 1st Melville Hill; 2nd Brian Henry; 3rd John A. Brant; 4th Albert A. Maracel. Class 6 (best plowed land by a junior competitor) 1st Ken Brant; 2nd Ernie Maracle. Class 7 (novice junior) 1st Elton Brant; 2nd Dan Leween.

Leslie Claus and Melville Hill, winners of class 1 and class 3, will be competing in the plowing match held at the Six Nations Indian Reserve in Brantford at the end of October. Ken Brant, and Ernie Maracle, winners of class 6, are also eligible to enter the Brantford match but will not be attending because of school.

U.S. Senators Fail to Choke Off Filibuster

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. senators backing a bill to strip the states of power to ban the union shop failed Monday to choke off a filibuster by foes of the measure.

As the unchecked debate rolled on, majority leader Mike Mansfield (Dem., Mont.) leading the fight for the bill, told reporters: "I am disappointed in the vote. I'll have to think it over and decide what to do next."

But whatever Mansfield does next the vote appears to make certain that the bill, passed by the House of Representatives, will be shelved in the Senate until next year, despite strong pressure by President Johnson. This would hasten Congress toward adjournment, which many members are demanding with increasing insistence.

The hockey trail he broke when a minor in Toronto holds the same lure for the guy who was one of the most popular players ever to wear a Belleville McFarlands uniform.

Floyd Crawford, captain of the Macs who accepted the world trophy at Prague in 1933 announced yesterday he has taken the position of playing coach with the Des Moines Oak Leaves of the International Hockey League.

The position reunites two former buddies of the MacFarland era and others prior to that. Floyd joins Minnie Menard who is manager of the Oak Leaves.

FLOYD CRAWFORD

Floyd leaves a lucrative position because as he puts it, "I am dedicated to hockey and always have been."

"I," said Floyd, "like a lot of other players with experience have always wanted a chance to take up coaching and have waited a long while for it. This is my big chance and I'm going to give it everything I've got."

This is no news for Belleville fans and admirers of the big likeable guy. When he played with the Macs, whether exhibition, league, Canadian or world tournaments he always gave everything he had, win, lose or draw.

He will carry the same spirit and desire as well as ability into his new job that made him an outstanding star here and wherever he played.

"I think I have two years left as a player," Floyd said, "but these combined with the coaching experience I get under Minnie should go a long way toward fitting me for perhaps a bigger and better job."

"Do you like hockey that much?" he was asked.

"I broke into minor hockey in my hometown of Toronto and the 'bug's bite' has never left me."

"I have loved the game so well I gave everything I had for it—sacrificed many opportunities for it. In my case it is not the advice boys get today—and which I gave to the minor hockey team I coach here—education first, hockey second. In my case it was hockey first."

Floyd when younger took a long-range view of what he hoped would be a coaching berth.

"When I was playing I was lucky to get good coaches. These include Ike Hildebrand, Frank Carlin, Tee Blake and Bep Guidolin. I always remembered what they told me. I picked up coaching bits from all of them and never forgot them. I think these will help me."

The step he is taking is the first toward a goal he dreamed while a minor. It never faded, though he never wanted a coaching job until he thought he was ready.

With Menard, Floyd should make good. He realizes his responsibility and what his efforts mean during his first year in the new position. Basically he feels he is ready and with Menard's help should go a long way.

His experience is wide and varied. Leaving a Toronto minor club he joined the Montreal Royals junior team, later going to the senior club sponsored by the Canadiens.

Later he signed with the Chicoultmi Saguenayans, where he met and played with Lou Smrk, Lammy Lamirande, Johnny Mauricich, Rene St. Hilaire, well-known here, played in the same league.

Later he went to Val D'Or when he was associated with Bep Guidolin, Minnie Menard, Jean Paul Payette and Stew Bessett who played an another club.

After two years the "company" moved en bloc to Belleville and the McFarlands.

Floyd is the fifth "Mac" to my knowledge, who has crashed the help-of-balks coaching-managerial ranks of hockey. Benoit is a coach, Minnie is a manager, Bep Guidolin is coach of the Oshawa Generals junior "A" squad, Johnny McMillan is a manager, and now Floyd.

In this agent's book, and those of practically everyone who knows him hereabouts, it couldn't have happened to a nicer guy.

Best of luck, fella!

Dodgers Ready For Kill

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Twins, run right out of the Los Angeles ball park, were well pleased to be back on the friendlier turf of Metropolitan Stadium today for the last two games of the World Series with the Pesky Dodgers.

Metropolitan Stadium is the only place in the Series the Twins have looked like American League champions. At Dodger Stadium they were a bombing, fumbling crew, dropping three straight to Los Angeles and falling behind three game to two.

Monday's 7-0 defeat by Sandy Koufax put them behind in the Series for the first time. Ten Twins fanned and only one of their four hits was struck with authority. That was the last one by pinch-hitter Sandy Valdespino in the ninth inning. By that time it was too late.

In the meantime, the Dodgers played havoc with the record book as they tied their club mark with 14 hits, stole four bases—three by Willie Davis—and came through with spectacular plays in the field, making the Twins' defence look shabby by comparison.

The Dodgers, especially in the last three games, have astounded the Twins, as well as the critics, with an attack that has to be seen to be believed.

In all but one of the five games they have hit in double figures, compiling a rousing .302 batting average. That is the same club that won a pennant with a .240 team batting average—lowest for a winner in National League history.

The Dodgers' hasty hitting has been accompanied by their vaunted speed. Their nine stolen bases fell only half the score. The Minnesota infield is still reeling from the Dodgers' bunt-and-run antics.

And Twins manager Sam Mele observed: "They said they haven't been hitting at .240. I guess they're taking it out on us."

Willie Davis, the fastest of them all, stole bases all three times he got on. Maury Wills, the cleverest of them all, collected two doubles and two singles to equal the record of four hits in a game. Ron Fairly rapped three hits and drove in a run to take the lead in the Series with five runs batted in.

The Dodgers bopped on Kaat, their second-game conqueror, in the first inning, scoring two runs on a leadoff double by Wills, a single by Jim Gilliam, and Frank Quilici's perfect bunt sacrifice bunt.

The Dodgers got two more in the third on singles by Lou Johnson and Davis and a double by Fairly. They made it 5-0 in the fourth when Wills singled, stole second and scored on Gilliam's single. Dave Dowling had replaced Kaat at that point.

Jim Perry was on the mound when the Dodgers scored their final two runs in the seventh. Koufax and Wills drove them in with singles.

Claude Osteen, who blanked the Twins Saturday, was named by manager Walter Alston to pitch the sixth game Wednesday. Mele held off his pitching nomination until after today's work-out. He said he was undecided between Jim Merritt, big rookie left-hander, and Jim Grant, who won the opener and lost the fourth game.

THEY LED DODGERS' CHARGE — Dodger shortstop Maury Wills (left) holds the ball involved in the final out, as he joins pitcher Sandy Koufax (centre) and Willie Davis after the game. Fast Balls And Curves

Koufax Didn't Expect No-Hitter

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Sandy Koufax had just pitched a four-hit shutout against Minnesota Twins. He struck out 10. Los Angeles Dodgers won 7-0, giving them a 3-2 edge in the World Series.

A fellow asked Koufax what he threw to the Twins.

This is Sandy Koufax, who never has allowed the greatest in his arm to go to his head. Koufax did not allow a hit until Willie Davis missed Harmon Killebrew's fifth-inning blooper to short centre after getting a late start. Asked if he felt badly about losing his perfect game at that point, the 29-year-old southpaw said:

"Not at all. I didn't think it was going to be the only hit. I knew they'd make more. I didn't think I was pitching that strong a game. In fact, I'm surprised they didn't make more hits than they did.

BECAUSE TIRED

"I'm not disappointed with the way I pitched, but I have pitched better. I was behind the hitters too much. I became awfully tired after the seventh inning.

"It's been a long season. I think I've pitched 330 innings this year, not counting exhibition games."

Sandy said 70 per cent of his pitches were fast balls, 30 per cent curves.

Koufax was beaten 5-1 by Jim Kaat in the second game in Minneapolis but was trailing only 2-1 when he left for a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning.

Minors Open Training Camp On Saturday

Russ Soules of the BMHA says this is an increase of 200 registrations over last season.

The Association plans to open a training camp in Memorial Arena next Saturday, for novice, peewee, midget and bantam clubs.

The times are - midget 7.30 a.m.; bantam 8.30 a.m.; peewee 10 a.m. and novice 11 a.m.

All players are invited to attend the camp. Registration cards must be shown before being allowed on the ice.

Maury Shared Thunder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sign "go Dodgers" hung conspicuously over Maury Wills' head as he sat in front of his cubicle in the Los Angeles Dodgers' dressing room and prepared the game ball for presentation to Sandy Koufax.

As he slowly printed the score on the ball, someone jokingly asked if that was one of his usual duties.

"Yep," Wits said, "I do a little bit of everything."

And that's what he did Monday in the fifth game of the World Series, stroking four hits stealing another base and wiring up the day with a .455 batting average and a commanding lead over Minnesota Twins' Zoilo Versalles in a battle of shortstops.

In addition, Wills, who has not made an error in the five series games, started three double plays, including the last one that finished off the Twins last when it seemed they might be able to break up Koufax' shutout bid.

"I felt good today," he admitted. "When I walked into the cage, I felt strong. Then the first time I went up to bat, I looked up and everybody was on top of me. There was no way I could bunt. They took the bunt away from me."

He promptly slammed a ground-rule double to right. Before he was finished for the day he had a total of 10 hits for the series, three steals, three runs scored and three runs batted in.

Wins Feature At Mosport

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP)—Dennis Coad of Bramalea, Ont., Saturday won the feature race of the opening day of the Thanksgiving speed weekend by a margin of 1¼ seconds.

Coad, driving a Lotus 19, finished the 20-lap race for sports cars over 1,600 CC. and modified cars over the 2.5-mile road circuit in 21 minutes, 28.3 seconds. He finished ahead of John Cordts of North Bay, in a corvette. Al Pease of Toronto was third in a MGB.

Heavy rain drenched the track and keep down both average speeds and attendance.

Lords Split With Oakville

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

London Lords completed their schedule in the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union Monday with a 24-16 victory over Oakville Black Knights, but the Knights were still pleased with their weekend accomplishments.

Oakville scored its first victory of the season by tripping London 14-12 in Oakville Saturday night. The Knights had lost six in succession to that point.

Cats Nip Riders; Stamps Whip Als

Safety Won It

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Football's most misunderstood scoring play, the two-point safety touch, could wind up deciding which Eastern Football Conference team gets the bye into this year's playoffs.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats scored the safety Monday and it turned out to be the difference in a 25-23 victory over Ottawa Rough Riders before 27,735 Hamilton fans. It came in the final quarter when Angelo Mosca and Dave Vill of the Tiecats chased Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson behind his own goal line and nailed him in the end zone.

It was a vital play since the victory gave Hamilton first place in the EFC, breaking a tie with Ottawa, and provided the Ticats with a 3-1 margin over the Riders in games this season. In the event Hamilton and Ottawa tie for first place at the end of the schedule, the Ticats will finish on top because of their edge.

Calgary Stampeders, meanwhile maintained their grip on first place in the Western Football Conference by whipping Montreal Alouettes 36-21 in a Canadian Football League interlocking game Monday afternoon before 19,038 in Montreal. The loss left Montreal in third place. The Als have already clinched a playoff spot in the East.

Defence was again the key for Hamilton, which has been able to muster only a terrific offence this season. The Ticat defenders set up 15 of the team's points and provided the all-important safety.

Tommy Grant and Willie Bethea scored Hamilton touchdowns while Don Sutherin kicked three field goals and a pair of converts. The safety rounded out the winners' scoring.

Ottawa kicker Moe Racine also had three field goals and two converts. It left Racine first in the EFC scoring derby with 67 points while Sutherin moved into second spot with 38.

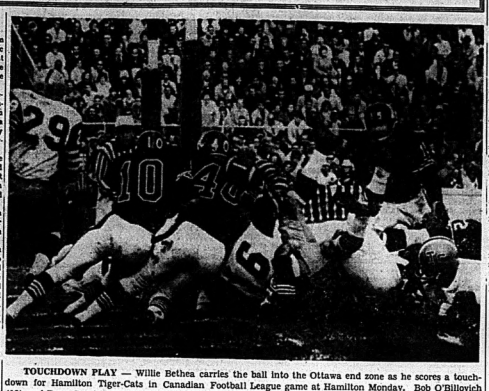
The game marked the return of linebacker Bobby Kuntz, who played a standout game, end Hal Patterson, who got in late in the contest and made several key blocks, and fullback Mel Anthony, who also played well. Kuntz and Patterson retired after last season while Anthony was called back after the Ticats cut him following a brief trial.

Ottawa picked up 16 first downs to Hamilton's 10 and outrushed the Ticats 163 yards to 77. Hamilton held a 226-136 edge in passing yardage, completing eight of 17. Jackson managed 13 of 28 with one interception.

Ottawa fumbled three times and lost the ball twice.



TOUCHDOWN PLAY — Willie Bethea carries the ball into the Ottawa end zone as he scores a touchdown for Hamilton Tiger-Cats in Canadian Football League game at Hamilton Monday. Bob O'Billovich (10) and Doug Specht (40) try to hold Bethea back. Ticats won 25-23 before 27,775 fans. (CP Wirephoto)

Mistakes Tell Story

Mustangs, Gaels Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mistakes told the story in two Ontario - Quebec Intercollegiate Athletic Association football games Saturday.

University of Western Ontario Mustangs suffered a four-touchdown performance by Gerry Sternberg and a comeback drive by University of Toronto Blues for a 36-35 victory in London, Ont. The result gave Western undisputed possession of first place and left the Blues tied for second with Queen's University Golden Gaels.

The Gaels took advantage of errors to hand McGill Redmen their second loss in as many starts, 8-0, in Montreal.

"I thought we were in control all the way, but every time we made a mistake we got into trouble," Western coach John Metras said after the game, which he described as the most exciting in his 31 years in the OQIAA football conference.

PENALTIES COSTLY

"We made foolish mistakes and took foolish penalties that cost us the game," Mooney said. McGill was penalized 10 times for 121 yards before 5,000 rain-drenched fans.

A McGill fumble by Marty Bolger on his own 36-yard line set up the only touchdown. Heino Lilles of Queen's scoring the five plays later and John Clark converting. Queen's remaining point came early in the fourth quarter when Don Taylor was rouged on Larry Fergason's 28-yard punt.

Minor Baseball

ANCASTER, Ont. (CP)—Ancaster defeated Fort Erie 7-4 Sunday to win the Ontario Baseball Association Juvenile A best-of-three championship 2-1.

WELLAND (CP) — Sandwich West of Windsor captured the Ontario Senior Amateur Baseball Association Major A tyke championship here Sunday when they defeated Welland 8-5 on a two-game sweep in the best-of-three final series.

Windsor won the opening game 7-3 a week ago in Windsor.

Sheffield Retains Lead

LONDON (Reuters) — Sheffield United, scoring at the expense of Northampton Town, which still isn't out of trouble, kept its one-point lead at the top of the First Division in English League soccer Saturday.

United won with a goal by left back Ken Mallender who ran through from the halfway line to put the ball past an advancing goalkeeper 10 minutes after the start.

Luckless Northampton, whose six points have come from drawn games, slumped to the bottom of the table as Blackburn Rovers scored a shock 4-1 away win over Burnley, which was challenging for the leadership. Blackburn started its revival during the week with a 2-2 away draw with Everton. It now has six points from 11 games.

Sheffield United has 17 points from 12 games, but cannot afford to ease up. Its success Saturday was due mainly to a stout defence against a team which has not had much success in front of goal.

United has a one-point lead over Arsenal, 2-1 home winner over another London team, Fulham. Arsenal scored a goal in each half through Jon Sammels and Joe Baker. Fulham's goal came from Terry Dyson in the first half.

Arsenal manager, Billy Wright, former England and Wolverhampton captain, came under fire from a number of stockholders at a meeting last week, but the position of the club now should silence some of his critics.

One point behind Arsenal is Leeds, West Bromwich Albion and Stoke City. Leeds played a goalless draw away to Sheffield Wednesday, West Bromwich won at home 4-1 against Sunderland and Stoke also had a home win, 1-0 over Leicester City.

At the bottom of the First Division table, Northampton has six points, Blackburn has the same number of points but a better goal average.

Parsons Defeat Sport Club

Belleville Parsons defeated the German Sport Club 2-0 at Kingston on Saturday. Parsons now meet the Kingston Crussders, needing another win to go into the District League finals.

The first half was dominated by Parsons, but play was hampered by the heavy mud and slippery conditions of the field.

With the wind and rain against them in the second half, Parsons fought hard to keep their shooters off. Sport clubhit the Parsons crossbar twice, and only strong goalkeeping by Herb Moeller preserved his shut out.

Belleville Parsons will play Crusaders on Saturday, in Kingston, kick off at 4.00 p.m.

Win Four Road Races

GUELPH (CP)—Toronto Athletes won four of six open events in the annual running of the Guelph Thanksgiving Day road races here Monday.

Doug Ellis, Also of Toronto, ran the featured 10-mile cross country event in 60 minutes, considerably short of the meet record of 52:39 held by Bruce Kidd of Toronto.

In the 10-mile walk, the winner was Felix Capella of Toronto with a time of 1:17:32.2. Second was John Argo of Mattawa, Ont.

Abigail Hoffman of Toronto took the girls' half-mile event in 2:15.1.

In The Dressing Rooms

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Manager Walter Alston beamed with pleasure over his Los Angeles Dodgers' 7-0 victory against Minnesota Twins in the fifth game of the World Series Monday but reminded one and all: "We still have the sixth game to play at Minnesota."

The manager said Claude Osteen is still his starting pitcher when the series resumes Wednesday, but he flatly declined to discuss the prospects for the seventh game if it is necessary.

Mildly curious, Alston asked if any of the newspaper men knew who Sam Mele would pitch for the Twins Wednesday. He was told the decision might be made after practice in Minneapolis today.

"They won't tell us who they'll pitch in the sixth game, and you want me to tell you about ours in the seventh," Alston said good humoredly.

How about Sandy Koufax' efforts?

"Yes. I thought this was a Koufax game. He had good stuff. I felt he might have tired a little in the eighth and ninth innings."

DOESN'T RAP DAVIS

Alston had no criticism whatever on the play by Willie Davis on Harmon Killebrew's soft fly ball into shallow centre field. He said:

"Willie gave it a good try. It was a tough play. Yes, he might have misjudged it a little."

Alston applauded the over-all defensive play and named in particular Maury Wills.

He singled out Maury's brilliant catch on Don Nossek's sharp blow behind second base and his flip to Dick Tracewski at second which doubled Frank Quilfel for the final out of the game.

Squared Series

Drysdale, Osteen Had Five Hitters

LOS ANGELES (CP)—Claude Osteen and Don Drysdale, two of Los Angeles Dodgers "big three" pitchers, each turned in a five-hitter during the weekend as the Dodgers took two World Series games from Minnesota Twins.

Osteen was on the mound in the Dodgers 4-0 victory Saturday. Drysdale pitched the National League champions to a 7-2 victory in Sunday's game, as Los Angeles rebounded from two defeats by the American League Twins.

Osteen, a former American League left-hander, who never lost to the Twins in his days with Washington Senators, ran his won-lost record to 4-0 against the Twins.

The Dodgers took the Saturday game by ganging up on Camilio Pascual for two runs in the fourth inning on a single by John Roseboro with the bases loaded. A single by Willie Davis, followed by a double from Lou Johnson, gave Los Angeles a third run in the fifth. Pascual was taken out for a pinch-hitter in the sixth.

DRYSDALE DOUBLES

The Dodgers ripped into Pascual and Merritt for 10 hits, five of them doubles.

Drysdale kept the Twins in check in Sunday game, striking out 11. He allowed only twice, giving up home runs to Harmon Killebrew and Tony Oliva.

Jim Grant, who conquered the Dodgers in the first game, was sent to the showers in the sixth inning of the Sunday encounter when the Dodgers broke the game open with three runs.

Grant walked Jim Gilliam, opening the inning. Gilliam raced to third on a single by Davis, who took second on Oliva's long throw.

THREW POORLY

Both scored on Ron Fairly's booming single through the drawn-in infield. Fairly took second on Jim Hall's so-bounce throw to the plate and scored the third run when reliever Al Worthington fielded Lou Johnson's bunt single and threw poorly to first.

The Dodgers' first run came in the first inning when Maury Wills reached first when Grant failed to cover. He stole second, then went to third when Davis reached first on his bouncer to Don Mincher, who couldn't make up his mind whether to run or throw to first. Wills scored on Fairly's force play.

Wes Parker beat out a drag bunt in the second, stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. He scored when Frank Quilfel failed to come up with Rozeboro's grounder. Lou Johnson's home run in the eighth, with Jetty Bill Pleis pitching, closed out the Dodger scoring.

Chandler Stars For Packers

By the time the game was over, San Francisco 49ers weren't sure which they liked less—Don Chandler kicking the ball or Don Chandler running sour.

Kicking is what the 10-year National Football League veteran gets paid to do for Green Bay Packers, who hired him from New York Giants during the off-season because Paul Hornung's booting had gone sour.

Chargers Wallop Bills

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

The emergence of John Hadl, the resurgent Western Division of San Diego Chargers as a standout pro quarterback and the disappearance of Buffalo Bills' passing attack has helped swing the balance of power in the American Football League back to the West.

Hadl, a fixture in San Diego's explosive backfield for the first time in his four-year AFL career, shocked Buffalo's defending champions with three touchdown passes Sunday as the Chargers stampeded the injury-plagued Bills 34-3.

By snapping Buffalo's four-game winning streak, the 1963 champs held their slim lead in the eighth, with Jetty Bill Pleis pitching, closed out the Dodger scoring.

from his punt formation on a fourth-and-nine situation in the opening quarter and galloped 27 yards to set up the opening touchdown in Green Bay's 27-10 victory.

He stuck to kicking for the rest of the afternoon, contributing two field goals and a 30-yard punt, the longest in modern professional football history.

Elsewhere in the NFL Sunday, Baltimore Colts whacked Detroit Lions 31-7, Chicago Bears thumped Los Angeles Rams 31-6, St. Louis Cardinals walloped Washington Redskins 37-16 and Philadelphia Eagles downed Dallas Cowboys 35-24. Saturday night, Minnesota Vikings walloped New York 40-14 and Cleveland Browns just got past Pittsburgh Steelers 24-19.

Campbell Tells OHA Dinner

Pros, Amateurs Should March Together

TORONTO (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Saturday that the NHL and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association should rejoin their efforts to restore Canada's prestige in international hockey.

Campbell was speaking before 500 guests at the anniversary dinner in Ontario Hockey Association, a branch of the CAHA.

"It would be a bad thing for hockey if we can't march down the road together," said Campbell.

Delegates at the CAHA annual meeting in Victoria last May voted to seek an end to the current agreement with the NHL. The CAHA wants a universal draft of players and an end to professional sponsorship of amateur teams. However, two years notice must be given to end the agreement and the NHL at the time would not agree to termination.

Campbell said Saturday it would not be possible for the NHL to survive without associations like the OHA and CAHA. He promised that the NHL would do all it could to help the amateurs.

George Wardrope, Ontario justice minister, was the guest speaker and pointed out that the OHA was founded in the old Queen's Hotel, Hawever, located on the present site of the Royal York Hotel where Saturday's dinner was held. The minister is a former president of the Thunder Bay Hockey Association.

Frank Buckland of Peterborough, executive OHA president and now treasurer of the association, also received a gold stick award.

Move To Head Of Class

Hot Rangers Turn Back Bruins, Leafs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If hockey champions were declared on Thanksgiving Day, New York Rangers would be a happy club.

The Rangers, who have missed the playoffs three years running, are currently the hottest club in the National Hockey League. Unfortunately, they don't start playing for keeps for another 11 days.

But in the current series of pre - season exhibition games, the Rangers have won four of their six against NHL opponents and six of eight over-all. Montreal Canadiens, the only club with a better over-all record, are unbeaten in eight starts but have faced only their minor-league farm club.

The Rangers moved to the head of the class during the holiday weekend, defeating Boston Bruins 6-3 Saturday night at Kingston, Ont., and downing Toronto Maple Leafs 5-2 in New York Monday.

The defeat, following a 3-0 setback at the hands of Chicago Black Hawks, evened the Leafs' pre-season record at 3-3 against their NHL playmates. The Blackhawks have two wins, a loss and a tie. Detroit Red Wings are 1-1-1 and the Bruins have three losses in three starts.

WHIP ACES

Canadiens completed an eight-day stand Saturday night by whipping Boston Bruins of the American League 7-4. The Bruins were held to a 1-1 tie Sunday by Rochester Americans, the AHL champions.

The Rangers followed a similar pattern in their three victories, spotting their opponents an early lead and finishing strongly.

Johnny McKenzie, a newcomer from Chicago, scored twice in both the third and third-period surge against the Bruins, who had led 2-0 at the first intermission. Ted Taylor, Bill Hicke, Mike McMahon and Gary Peters were the other Ranger marksmen while Ron Stewart, Reg Fleming and Don Awrey replied for Boston.

Against the Leafs, the Rangers trailed early as Pete Stemkowski and Ron Douglas scored twice within three minutes. Rod Gilbert and Lou Angotti evened the count before the period ended and John Brenzeman put them ahead with the first of two goals in the second. Phil Goyette completed their scoring.

The Rangers reduced their goaltending contingent to two by shipping Cesare Maniago to Baltimore Clippers of the AHL, keeping rookie Ed Giacomin and veteran Don Simmons.

Bobby Hull beat regular net-minder Johnny Bower for the first two Chicago goals against the Leafs and Doug Mohns scored the third against rookie Gary Smith, who replaced Bower in the third period.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painfully. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinkage) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly relieves injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

Ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Keen Freight, owned by Ed Arthur of Otterville, Ont., and Dr. G. K. Boyce of London, Ont., won the featured $1,500 invitation pace Monday night at Garden City Raceway.

Keen Freight came from fourth position in the stretch to win by a neck over Margie Hanover and combined for a $18.80 quinella.

On Saturday, Betsy Herbert took the $3,000 Joseph Brand Stakes for her fifth stakes victory of the season. She defeated Danny Song A. and Sis Herbert and returned $4.20 for the win.

BATAVIA, N.Y. (CP)—Crystal Newport, owned by Jay D. Van Hall of Rochester, N.Y., captured the $1,700 trot at Batavia Downs Monday night as she trotted the mile in 2:07.4, equalling her best time of the season.

In winning his third of 13 trips this season, the nine-year-old gelding returned $10 and was clocked in at 2:08, fastest mile of the night.

Saturday, Ra Ra Putney owned by Del Insley of Three Rivers, Que., captured the featured $1,300 invitation pace. Jack Keen drove the three-year-old colt to a head victory over Away Kid, with Ebony Grattan S. third.

Ra Ra Putney paced the mile in 2:11 2-5, the fastest trip of the night over the sloppy track. He paid $15.90.

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Castleton Farm's Dartmouth, reserved only at the pace until the top of the stretch, moved out to win the $30,000 Roosevelt trot at 1½ miles Monday night at Roosevelt Raceway.

Dartmouth stepped the three turns of the oval in the modest time of 3:10 1-5 to win by three quarters of a length over Lord Gordon. Two lengths back in third money came Myra.

Dartmouth paid $2.80, $2.20 and $2.20. Lord Gordon returned $3.00 and $2.20 and Myra showed for $2.20.

Moscow Music Hall Playing To Sell-outs

Moscow Music Hall, which comes to O'Keefe Centre for this week only, has already established itself as a "hit" in Montreal where, on its first North American engagement, it has been playing to sell-out houses.

"A remarkable show," said the Montreal Star, adding that "it has class."

"It is really first class," agreed the Montreal Gazette.

"Neither circus, revue, ballet, folklore, choir nor operetta, and without question all these things in one," said Le Devoir, "a delightful cocktail."

Brought to Canada by Canadian Concerts and Artists Inc., the revue is now embarking on a cross country tour which will take it to the West Coast. It was assembled for the first time last year and exported to Paris where it played to a huge success that, after a tour of France, Switzerland and Belgium, it returned for a run of several months. This, however, is the first time it has appeared in this part of the Western World.

Moscow Music Hall combines the traditional Russian folk circus and the Moiseyev Dancers plus many other theatrical arts into a completely different kind of entertainment which can be enjoyed by the whole family. It will be seen nightly at O'Keefe Centre at 8.30 p.m., with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday at 2 p.m.

"MAJOR DUNDEE" EXCITING ROMANTIC ACTION PACKED STORY

Pure adventure, brawling excitement and lusty action — along with some superb character delineation — battle can be found in the Columbia Picture, "Major Dundee," which opened yesterday at the Belle Theatre. The excitement is in the cast and Wide Screen.

Charlton Heston plays the title role, that of a Union Army officer who commands a company of renegades and deserters on a desperate mission through the great South West. Also topping the stellar cast is Richard Harris, the brilliant Irish star of "This Sporting Life," as a Confederate captain who is sent on a mission of command of the expedition and who is determined, once that mission is completed, to kill the hard-bitten major.

Also part of the desperate crew are Jim Hutton, as an army lieutenant who tries to keep his sense of humor in the middle of battle and sudden death; James Coburn, as a one-armed Indian scout; Michael Anderson, Jr., as a baby faced bugler who learns from his fellows how to kill and kiss; Senor Wences, as a knife throwing Mexican sergeant; Brock Peters, as the leader of six Negroes who volunteer to join the company even though its personnel includes Confederate soldiers (some eager to fight Union soldiers than they are to fight Indians, and lovely Senta Berger, as the widow of a Mexican doctor.

"Major Dundee" is a powerful story, magnificently brought to the screen by players and technicians who — to judge merely from what is presented on the screen, worked long and arduously to cover the beauty and frustrations of the time.

Bulldogs Defeat Rifles

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Rifles fell further behind Philadelphia Bulldogs in the Eastern Conference of the Continental Football League Sunday night.

The Rifles lost 20-21 to Norfolk Neptunes who moved into a second-place tie with the Rifles by virtue of the victory. Both teams have 6-3 records while Philadelphia, at 6-2, is one game ahead of Wheeling Ironmen Saturday night, has an 8-1 mark.

The Rifles staged a rally in the fourth quarter before 14,118 Norfolk fans in an effort to stop the Neptunes from winning their fifth in a row. Two fourth-quarter touchdowns moved the Rifles within five points, but Joe Hightower squelched the rally by intercepting a pass with just over two minutes to go. Hightower kicked three field goals, the last with 55 seconds left, to put the game out of Toronto's reach.

Andy Williams Had Mishap But Sequence Not Retaped

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Andy Williams stepped off his stool in mid-show.

NBC's weekly Andy Williams Show Monday night is taped, usually several weeks before we see it on our screens. It would have been fairly easy to have re-taped the sequence with guest Bob Hope in which Andy lost his balance and dropped momentarily out of sight. They did not choose to re-tape, however.

We've been watching singers and guest stars climb up on high stools at least once in each variety show ever since Dave Garroway started the whole thing in Chicago.

A pair of high stools, set in classic center, has come to mean that it is time for the star and his guest to engage in some intimate, casually - written and well-rehearsed sprightlie leading up to a song.

The Williams show, incidentally remains one of the most handsome color programs, but after a couple of seasons the predictable format could do with a little revision.

The first national ratings of the new television season, released Monday by the A. C. Nielsen company for CBS' Lucy Show in sixth place. Thus it appears that the popularity of the redhead comedienne is established with the departure of Lucille Ball's long-time co-star, Vivian Vance.

Monday night's episode, despite a neat scene in a supermarket, was not the happiest romp in which Lucy has been involved. By now the new premise of the show has been thoroughly established. Lucy has moved to an apartment in California and the children have been sent away to school. But Lucy seemed pretty much alone in a half hour in which she was trying to persuade a bachelor neighbor to take her to a party. It was all broad comedy—Lucy with her heel caught, Lucy trying to banana cream pie in a washing machine with the laundry, Lucy in a too-tight dress trying to hide under a table. She is still the best comedienne in the television business but the shows seemed to move faster and smoother when she was surrounded by her old Desilu cast, or maybe it was just an off night.

Those Nielsen ratings, covering the two-week period ending Sept. 26, has the three most popular programs of last season still on the top of the list—NBC's Bonanza, ABC's Batwitched and CBS' Gomer Pyle. Four new programs made the top 13—CBS' Hogan's Heroes and Green Acres and ABC's Man from U.N.C.L.E. and Peyton Place.

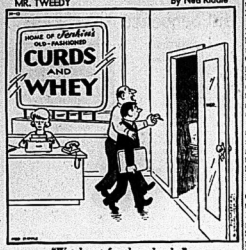
Underdogs Come Through

Esks Stun Lions; Bombers Nip Saskys

MR. TWEEDY by Ned Riddle



"Watch out for the cobwebs."

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The downtrodden Edmonton Eskimos stunned British Columbia Lions 14-12 Saturday night to complicate the Grey Cup champions' battle for a playoff berth. Then Winnipeg Blue Bombers nipped Saskatchewan Roughriders 21-20 Monday to take a three-point edge in second place over the Riders and Lions.

Both the Bombers and Eskimos missed the playoffs last season—and only a miracle will get the Esks in this time. But they needed the B.C. and Saskatchewan defeats to make the miracle possible.

The weekend results, plus Calgary Stampeders' 36-21 victory over Montreal Alouettes Monday in an interlocking game at Montreal, left the Stamps in first place, four points ahead of Winnipeg. The Riders and Lions follow with a three-point edge over Edmonton, B.C. has four games left, the others three.

There were no surprises in Saskatchewan performances in Winnipeg before 30,285 fans. Bomber coach Bud Grant consulted his crystal ball last Thursday and accurately forecast three touchdowns by the Riders, to be scored by Hugh Campbell and George Reed.

Palmer Won Ryder

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Arnold Palmer smashed a No. 3 wood 250 yards on the last hole of the Royal Birkdale course Saturday and converted it into an eagle that destroyed Great Britain in the 1965 Ryder Cup championship.

The Latrobe, Pa., veteran sank Peter Butler of England with that shot and it was the match that put the 36-year-old trophy again out of reach of the best British golf professionals.

The Americans, who now have won the Ryder Cup 13 times in 16 tries, went into the last 16 singles matches with a narrow 9-7 lead compiled in Thursday and Friday's foursome play.

They won five matches out of eight singles Saturday morning, lost two and halved one. Then in bright afternoon sun, they clobbered the 7,037-yard, par-73 Birkdale links to win another five matches while the British won but three.

The final score was U.S. 19½; Great Britain, 12½.

Carleton Still Unbeaten

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Carleton University Ravens of Ottawa kept their undefeated record intact in the Ontario Intercollegiate Football Conference Saturday.

The Ravens got two touchdowns by Dave Dakou, one on a 65-yard run, to defeat Waterloo Lutheran University Golden Hawks for their third victory in as many outings. The loss was the Hawks' second in three games.

In other Saturday contests, University of Ottawa Gee Gees defeated McMaster University Marauders 20-10, University of Waterloo Warriors scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter to down Royal Military College 14-0 on a muddy field in Waterloo, Ont., and Loyola College Warriors defeated University of Guelph Redmen 17-0 in another mud bath in Montreal.

Rangers-Generals Tie

Hawks Edge Red Wings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Catharines Black Hawks got even with Hamilton Red Wings and Oshawa Generals scored a disputed goal to tie Kitchener Rangers in a pair of weekend games in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The Hawks, playing their first home game of the season Sunday night, defeated Hamilton Red Wings 4-3 before 1,901 fans. The victory atoned for a 6-4 loss St. Catharines suffered at the hands of the Wings last Thursday night in Hamilton.

The Rangers, who finished out of the playoffs the last two seasons, lost a 5-4 lead Saturday night on Oshawa when Barry Wilkins scored with one second left for a 5-5 tie.

However, two clocks at the Oshawa auditorium showed time was up and Kitchener officials said after the game they will protest.

PULLED GOALIE

The Hawks fell behind 2-1 in the first period of their game, but moved ahead 4-3 in the third and survived Hamilton's efforts at tying the score when Red Wing coach Rudy Pilous pulled his goaltender with one minute and 20 seconds to go. The Wings forced five faceoffs in the St. Catharines zone but couldn't score.

The Generals had better luck by pulling their goalie with 25 seconds remaining and a Kitchener player in the penalty box. Other Oshawa marksmen were Bobby Orr, who scored twice and added a pair of assists, Bob Black and Wayne Cashman. Kitchener goals were scored by Jim Krulicki with two, Bruce Reier, Bill Hway and John Beechey.

No Chance To Carry Out Tragic Will

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A hastily-scribbled note "to whomever discovers me after death" closed Dorothy Dandridge's last will and testament.

It was to be filed for probate Monday in Superior Court, a tragic document of a tragic life that ended last Sept. 8 of rare internal causes.

William Spivak, her lawyer, casts the will one of the most unusual he has ever seen in perfectly legal. It reads:

"In case of my death—to whomever discovers it—don't remove anything I have concealed, gown or other (crossed out) underwear. Cremate me right away—if I have anything money, furniture give to my mother Ruby Dandridge. She will know what to do. Dorothy Dandridge."

The beautiful Negro actress-singer wrote the note last May 21 and turned it over to her longtime manager, East Mills, with these words:

"Keep it in Earl, because I know you will be the one who discovers me."

Mills was the one.

Mills couldn't carry out the immediate cremation note. He had little to leave to her mother, also an actress.

"Dorothy was bankrupt," said Mills.

Real Caouette Fires Guns at Liberal Party

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP)—Creditrliste Leader Real Caouette concentrated his fire on the Liberal party during the weekend as he carried his election campaign through three southern Quebec constituencies.

In Asbestos Sunday night, he reiterated his statement that the Liberal party was "unbalanced by the underworld," and criticized the recent decision by Justice Minister Favreau to refuse a Liberal candidates.

"To nurse the party back to health, Lesage has picked a team of musketeers — Pelletier, Marchand and Trudeau," he said.

"But one can't make silk purses out of rotten apples. Don't worry, before long they will be rotten too."

He was referring to Gerard Pelletier, former editor of Montreal Le Devoir; Jean Marchand, former Labor leader; and Pierre Trudeau, former professor of Laval.

The Creditiste leader addressed crowds of more than 700 persons in a packed hall in Victoriaville earlier Sunday, and a similar crowd at Sorel in Lac Megantic Saturday night.

In Lac Megantic, he suggested that the federal government should grant allowances to help individuals purchase health insurance under private plans.

Individuals thus could choose their own hospitals, doctors and drug suppliers under a system that would cost less than a government medicare plan.

Diefenbaker Aims Attack At Liberals

By STEWART MacLEOD
OTTAWA (CP) — Launching the Mounting one of his strongest attacks of the campaign, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker on Monday night flayed Prime Minister Pearson's Liberal government with an 80-minute assault on unity, crime, agriculture and trade.

"Race against race, province against province — those are the elements being followed by," Mr. Diefenbaker, who had spent the day visiting ridings in and from Regina, saved his heaviest fire of the night for Liberal agriculture policies, with special aim at Liberal candidate Hazen Argue, a former New Democratic Party member who is contesting the Assiniboia seat against Conservative Lawrence Gagnon.

Cheered by the most receptive audience of his western tour, Mr. Diefenbaker bitterly charged the government with deception, incompetence and indifference in its agriculture policy.

The government, he said, lost 40,000,000 bushels of wheat sales because of incompetence, made no effort to get railway transportation in moving grain and then cut prices by 18 to 20 cents a bushel.

LEADING TWO OF CANADAS

Broadening his attack, the Conservative leader said Mr. Pearson and Mr. Favreau must amend the constitution, the country would face balkanization.

The formula, originally devised by Prime Minister Pulton and later amended by Guy Favreau, would change the British North America Act to allow the Canadian constitution to be amended in Canada. Mr. Pulton and Mr. Favreau are former justice ministers, Mr. Fulton a Conservative and Mr. Favreau a Liberal.

Furthermore, Mr. Diefenbaker said, the Liberals are moving to change the basis of citizenship for those who are not of the English or French race.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the government report about communism when it negotiated Canada-U.S. auto agreement and other trade agreements was after the Conservative leader persistently demanded it.

In a speech delivered earlier Monday, Mr. Diefenbaker said he would like to see all the government files on communist cases and all the files concerning organized crime in Canada, and he would like to see scholarly anxious to discover why it took the federal justice department two months to reply to a letter from the chairman of the Ontario crime commission.

MISS ALASKA DIES

UNION CARBIDE

TEXTILE PRODUCTION SUPERVISOR FOR FIBRES PLANT

Union Carbide Canada Limited has an immediate opening for an experienced technically trained supervisor for their new yarns production facilities at Arnprior, Ontario.

The position requires two to five years recent experience in the manufacture of textile yarns, preferably in the field of melt-spun continuous fibres.

The successful candidate's primary responsibilities will centre in the spinning, drawtwisting and yarn finishing operations. Technical and/or university training is a prerequisite.

Gambling Tough Way To Live

MONTE CARLO (Reuters)—Gambling is a harder way to earn a living than manual labor, says Auguste Bernard, secretary-general of Monte Carlo Casino.

Bernard says professional gamblers expend more nervous energy at the gaming tables than men who work as ditch diggers, truck drivers or office employees.

"If gamblers worked half as hard at some regular profession, they could earn a comfortable livelihood," he says.

On the other hand, the croupiers who control the gambling earn salaries equivalent to those of men in well-paid posts in industry, banking or business.

Many people attracted by the element of chance apply for jobs as croupiers. But the Monte Carlo Casino screens applicants as carefully as the government investigates candidates for posts in the foreign service.

The first iron rule is that croupiers must not gamble. The men who control the gaming tables in the world's most famous casino are disqualified if they show any taste for betting in their private lives—even on race horses or by buying a lottery ticket.

The new symbol for hydro in Ontario was among topics discussed at the annual meeting of District 1, Ontario Municipal Electric Association at Picton last week. Delegates included, from left: Gerald B. Hyde, Bellville; E. F. Armstrong, Oshawa; M. R. McIntyre, Prescott. The new symbol has already been adopted by Ontario Hydro and a number of municipal utilities in the province. OMEA is a province-wide association of elected hydro commissioners which works closely with Ontario Hydro in directing the province's public power enterprise. District 1 takes in Eastern Ontario.

Commonwealth Problems Worry Leaders At UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Two Commonwealth problems—Rhodesia and Kashmir—dominated the United Nations Tuesday as delegates from around the world put their heads together in conference rooms and corridors in a massive effort to find solutions.

The latest major issue to descend on the world organization is Rhodesia's threat to carry out a unilateral declaration of independence and this came at a time when the UN still was trying to keep the uneasy truce over Kashmir between India and Pakistan.

The General Assembly quickly adopted a resolution, sponsored by 40 Afro - Asian countries, calling on Britain to do all that is necessary to prevent Rhodesia, ruled by a small white minority, from declaring an immature independence.

The resolution was passed 109 to 2 Tuesday, a day after a draft version had been approved by the UN's trusteeship committee when talks on the question of Rhodesian independence had broken down in London.

Only South Africa, Rhodesia's neighbor to the south, and Portugal voted against the resolution. Britain did not participate in the voting because she considers the Rhodesian question is her sole problem.

CANADA APPROVED

Canada joined such countries as the United States and the Soviet Union in supporting the resolution while France, though expressing its dislike for the Rhodesian racial policy, abstained on grounds that the UN should not interfere in the domestic affairs of states.

"My government have received various comforting assurance from the United Nations in the question of Rhodesia," said Roger Lacoste, a member of the British delegation to the UN.

FIRST CALL with Bowlers

"There's your Canada -U.S. auto pact saving."

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Prime Minister Ian Smith met with his cabinet for three hours today but declined to say later whether they had reached any decision on the explosive issue of Rhodesian independence.

After joking with reporters and photographers outside the cabinet room, he told them: "You might just as well go home."

The cabinet meeting followed an unexpected appeal Tuesday night by British Prime Minister Harold Wilson for Smith to accept a new initiative to break the deadlock by receiving a mission of Commonwealth leaders.

Informed observers here believe the self-governing African colony ruled by a white minority government will declare independence unilaterally now that Britain has refused to grant it, but that no date will be set. British refuses to grant independence until the majority Negro population is given a greater say in government.

Smith returned from London Tuesday to a hero's welcome at Salisbury's airport and said it was "an even bet" that Rhodesia would be independent by Christmas.

The cabinet was likely to consider the surprise proposal by Britain for Smith to agree to as attempt by Commonwealth prime ministers to break the independence deadlock.

It was also sure to take into account the increasingly strenuous opposition from Rhodesian business and industrial leaders to a unilateral declaration of independence.

Word of Britain's new proposal was contained in a personal message from Prime Minister Wilson which British High Commissioner John Johnston delivered to Smith's home Tuesday night.

Britain learned of Wilson's call for a Commonwealth mission on Rhodesia in a television address by the British premier.

Wilson said he pressed Smith, if he continued to reject independence on Britain's terms, to agree to a new Commonwealth initiative—"to a mission of senior Commonwealth prime ministers representing all the prime ministers and presidents and peoples of the Commonwealth to see if agreement can be reached. . . ."

Britain has refused Rhodesia independence until it provides for eventual rule by the country's Negro majority. It also has said it would be rebellion if Smith declares the country's independence unilaterally.

Tshombe Is Ousted In Congo

Leopoldville Radio said Kimba, 39, had accepted the call to form a new administration.

Kimba served for three years as foreign minister under Tshombe during the latter's secession of Katanga province from the Congo.

FORCED OUT

The president said he had forced the resignation of the Tshombe government over its objections.

Bigger War Threatened By Pakistan Says Shastri

NEW DELHI (AP) — Indian Prime Minister Shastri has warned his army and people Pakistan is threatening "wider conflagration and a bigger war."

He also pointedly expressed his belief the United States will see what he calls the realities of the sub-continent's tension and not give Pakistan any more arms aid.

Shastri made these statements during a visit Tuesday to the western front where he spoke to Indian soldiers who fought Pakistani units in the 22-day conflict that ostensibly ended with the ceasefire agreement Sept. 23.

The Indian government in a special statement charged Pakistan with 231 ceasefire violations, which it said "contain seeds of escalation."

Foreign Minister Swaran Singh meanwhile told the UN General Assembly that Pakistan is an aggressor which has "sinister connection" with China.

Shastri spoke of widespread bitterness in India over American shipments of arms to Pakistan—which India says gave Pakistan the capability of launching aggression.

He said American-made Pattion tanks and Sabre jets supplied Pakistan for thwarting Communist aggression were turned instead against India.

Election Battle Warms Up As Leaders Take Hustings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Pearson made his first campaign appearance in Quebec and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker commented on the medical care issue for the first time Tuesday.

Nominations closed in 21 remote ridings with 73 candidates in the running. New allegations came to light in the affair of the "Social Credit six." All in all, the election battle was warming up.

Mr. Diefenbaker told 1,000 persons in Medicine Hat, the government proposal to pay $14 per capita to the provinces to help finance universal medical insurance plans was "brought in without consideration and thrust on the doorstep of the provinces."

The proposal had been hastily put together like the original Canada Pension Plan. He said a Conservative government would implement medical care, but "without misrepresentation or bureaucracy."

Addressing a crowd of 1,200 in Calgary, New Democratic Leader Douglas called Prime Minister Pearson incapable of a public compulsory medical care plan. He challenged the government to deny that it has dropped its earlier insistence on compulsion and government-run features.

Social Credit Leader Thompson told a press conference in Toronto his party will support a voluntary health care plan, but will fight Canada's "drift to socialism."

In Regina, Immigration Minister Nicholson asked for a liberal majority in the Commons to ensure that medical insurance is put into effect by July 1, 1967.

Health Minister LaMarsh said in Toronto the Liberals advocate universal coverage, not because they desire socialism, but because many persons cannot afford to join private insurance plans.

She said means tests would not work in operating a medical care plan. There was no way of determining who needed public assistance and who didn't.

Mr. Pearson told a crowd of 1,000 in Quebec City the vital point in his government's record is that it has "given real meaning to the federal concept and has fostered the growth of our two cultures."

He drew his biggest ovation at a conference to the adoption of the maple leaf flag.

Speaking mainly in French, he said he is confident that French-Canadians desire "a full and positive part" in shaping the destiny of Canada.

Earlier in the day, Mr. Pearson had a 45-minute talk with Premier Jean Lesage, who again stressed that he will not participate in the federal campaign but wished his former cabinet colleague, "good luck, Mike."

Mr. Lesage said the talks cov-

New Road Program Planned

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A 20-year highway development program costing $100,000,000 was unveiled by Highways Minister C. S. MacNaughton Tuesday night to representatives of about 75 Western Ontario municipalities.

The projected program, the result of a two-year study encompassing 18 cities and 25 main counties and parts of Huron, Perth and Oxford, is one of 19 surveys that eventually will span the entire province.

Similar ones already have been completed in the Niagara and Ottawa regions.

—Construction of 401 - type, controlled - access freeways between London and Sarnia and London and St. Thomas;

—A new-time and mile-a-minute highway between London and Stratford;

—A multi-lane, controlled access arterial route from 401 just west of highway east-ward bypassing St. Thomas and Aylmer generally following highway 3;

—Development of a major link between the London-Sarnia freeway using the existing Middlesex county road s

First Government Move Made Against Indonesia Communists

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) The Indonesian government has made its first move against the country's Communist party, arms of whose members were believed to have been involved in the Oct. 1 attempted anti-government coup, Radio Malaysia said today.

The radio said government transmitters in Jakarta broadcast an order banning one Communist youth group and suspending another, along with 15 institutions of higher learning.

The reports followed outbreaks of anti-Communist violence Tuesday in Jakarta in which a Communist crowd attacked the houses of Indonesia's second- and third-most-important Communists, dragging out the furniture and burning it.

The incident was the latest in a campaign by Moslems, with tacit army support, to destroy Communists' homes and business establishments.

Since the party's headquarters was ransacked and burned down Friday, the premises of the Communist youth, women's, cultural and other organizations in the capital have been attacked and damaged. The house of party chairman D. N. Aidit, also was ransacked.

Tuesday, Radio Jakarta said President Sukarno had given 90 per cent crushed and its leader, Lt.-Col. Untung, captured.

The radio quoted Foreign Minister Subandrio as saying the president believed recent events would not weaken Indonesia but on the contrary would "strengthen our resolution and unity and solidarity."

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Washington Post says that U.S. officials have what they consider incontrovertible proof that President Sukarno was in league with the Indonesian Communist party (PKI) in the recent coup attempt.

The post says officials here now know that the PKI commandos were called out Sept. 28, two days before the attempted overthrow. At that time, the Post says, the commandos joined with Lt. - Col. Untung of Sukarno's bodyguard in an attempt to assassinate the top leadership of the army.

The post says there now is evidence that the plotters knew the exact whereabouts of each officer. Six of the seven top army leaders were slain during the uprising and Gen. Abdul Haris Nasution, the defence minister, escaped with wounds.

The Post says information concerning Sukarno's link to the Communist plot has come from confessions of men deeply involved in the affair.

British Conservatives Confer With Rhodesia Revolt Broken

BRIGHTON, England (Reuters—The annual four-day conference of the opposition Conservative party opened here today with party leader Edward Heath set for a major campaign to consolidate his position.

The campaign was underpinned by Heath's confidence that the biggest threat to his authority—a right wing revolt over the government's Rhodesian independence issue — has been averted.

The 49-year-old Conservative chief broke with tradition by arranging to make a speech on the first day of the conference and to attend all debates. Party leaders have previously made an appearance only on the last day of the parley.

Apart from today's speech—stressing the new policy thinking outlined by the party last week—Heath also will make the traditional survey of domestic and foreign policies at Saturday's final session.

But before then, the 4,000 delegates will hear the debate on Rhodesia, based on a special emergency resolution to be put forward by the party executive.

This decision was made Monday in a bid to avert a major split in the party's policy toward Rhodesia threatened by the Marquess of Salisbury, 72-year-old elder statesman of the party.

Lord Salisbury announced last week he would try to put forward a resolution implicitly critical of the Conservative leadership's support of the Labor government's handling of the explosive independence issue.

This could have caused a major split in the party and thus harmed its standing with the electorate at a critical time.

The party's national executive ruled Tuesday the influential Lord Salisbury's attempt to put forward a resolution was against party rules.

Instead, a special resolution presented by the executive itself will be debated Friday, with the main speeches coming from former prime minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home, now foreign affairs spokesman, and Lord Salisbury, party spokesman on Commonwealth affairs.

Lord Salisbury's emergency resolution would have condemned any move by the Rhodesian government to seize independence unilaterally — but also would have strongly opposed the use of any kind of sanctions against it.

The Rhodesia issue has caused emotional overtones for the Conservative party since many of its supporters have traditional family—as well as financial—ties with the white settlers.

Former Director Charged

TORONTO (CP)—A former Ontario Securities Commission director, whose arrest was ordered Tuesday on a charge concerning trading in 1966 of shares of Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd., was expected to surrender himself into custody today, police say.

John Campbell, 51, was charged Tuesday with committing a breach of trust during erratic trading in Windfall shares in May and July of last year. At that time the stock jumped to $3.60 from 36 cents on wild rumors, then collapsed overnight to 80 cents.

Attorney - General Arthur Wishart, who announced the charge against Campbell, also said Tuesday that a third fraud charge has been lodged jointly against George and Viola MacMillan.

A veteran mining team, Mr. and Mrs. MacMillan were president and promoter respectively of Windfall. They also face two fraud charges lodged courtesy by the prime minister to inform the Queen, as head of the Commonwealth, of the proposal for mediation by Commonwealth leaders.

Wilson said he made the proposal in a message to Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, who returned to Salisbury Tuesday after the collapse of weeklong talks with British leaders in London.

Wilson said he urged Smith, if he continued to reject independence on Britain's terms, to agree to a new Commonwealth initiative by a mission of senior Commonwealth premiers, representing all the prime ministers, presidents and peoples of the Commonwealth, to see if agreement can be reached.

Wilson did not name the prime ministers he had in mind but from other sources learned he sent confidential diplomatic cables to the Commonwealth leaders during the last few days in which he proposed that four prime ministers be chosen—those from Australia, Ceylon, Nigeria and Zambia. In one of the cables Wilson expressed doubt that Smith would accept this proposal, but it was worth a try.

To Visit Queen At Balmoral

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Wilson flew to Scotland for a meeting with the Queen today, barely 12 hours after he proposed a Commonwealth summit mission to avert the nightmare of race war in Rhodesia.

An announcement from 10 Downing Street that Wilson will visit the Queen at Balmoral did not specify the subject of his talks with the monarch.

Some sources speculated that he might be planning to call a snap general election in an attempt to bolster his two-seat over-all working majority in Parliament.

Sources close to the government discounted the election talks but said they could not be outright.

Wilson in a televised speech carried by radio to the 21 Commonwealth countries, except Rhodesia, warned Tuesday night that the threat by the self - governing colony's white minority rulers to break away from Britain "may be dangerous not only for Rhodesia but for a far greater area of Africa."

PERIL MAY WIDEN

The peril "may extend even wider and involve the whole world," he said.

Following the broadcast, it would be normal constitutional practice for the prime minister to inform the Queen, as head of the Commonwealth, of the proposal for mediation by Commonwealth leaders.

Wilson said he made the proposal in a message to Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, who returned to Salisbury Tuesday after the collapse of week-long talks with British leaders in London.

Wilson said he urged Smith, if he continued to reject independence on Britain's terms, to agree to a new Commonwealth initiative by a mission of senior Commonwealth premiers, representing all the prime ministers, presidents and peoples of the Commonwealth, to see if agreement can be reached.

Absence of Criminal Cases Credit to County -- Judge

Absence of any criminal cases was a credit to Hastings County, Mr. Justice J. W. Brooke said at the opening of the County Supreme Court Assizes in Belleville yesterday.

Across Ontario criminal court lists are long and the cases numerous, noted His Lordship after Crown Attorney John Pringle had presented him the traditional white gloves.

"So, it is a tribute to the standard of morality in this county . . . that there are no criminal cases to be tried."

However, His Lordship had an unusually long list of civil cases to hear -- including 38 automobile accident suits and 25 divorces.

Before settling down to individual cases, Justice Brooke despatched the seven - man grand jury to investigate conditions at the county jail, home for the aged, Belleville General Hospital, a retarded children's home at Plainfield and a Children's Aid shelter in Belleville.

He told the petit and grand jurors, who thronged the courtroom waiting to be chosen for duty, that they may have been first dismayed at being summoned.

"However I speak with confidence when I tell you it is unlikely that you will be called upon to perform a more important public duty."

The significance of the jury system, said the judge, was "that the administration of justice, which is the cornerstone of our civilization, is in the hands of the people."

In a democracy such as Canada, the rule of law prevails only by legislation in harmony with the desires of the citizens.

ORDERLY CAREFUL SURVEY

"It is nonetheless important that our good laws be well administered," warned His Lordship.

"Good laws with bad administration will still produce chaos and we see this from time to time in other places."

He ordered the grand jury to carefully survey each county institution before reporting back to the court.

"You must be thorough and you must be fair," he told the jurors. "Do not condemn or criticize any man on rumors or unwarranted or unfounded complaints. Your voice here as a grand jury is hard to answer . . . so do not be unfair."

There was only one slight departure from tradition as the Assizes opened.

Yesterday the first juror so questioned startled court officials by declaring instead: "God Save the Queen."

SPUD RIVALS BATTLE

FUNTINGTON, England (CP) Sussex gardener Thomas Cooke claimed the British record for potato growing when he produced 556 pounds from just six plants. Only three days later George Brooks, of Tankersley, Yorkshire, announced he grew 606 pounds from six plants.

Two Children Run Into Paths of Cars

They were followed by an appeal to parents from the police safety division to exercise as much supervision as possible over children on city streets.

On East Dundas Street five-year-old Steven Adams, 81 Church Street, suffered cuts when struck by a car driven by Annabelle Docter, 39 Bertram Boulevard.

And three-year-old Paul Soules, 29 Octavia, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital for observation after he was hit by a car driven by John Hazull, 19 Maple Drive.

In both incidents, say police, the children ran in front of the cars and the drivers were unable to avoid a collision.

Quinte Kiwanis Club Sponsors Sports Show

Featuring outdoor sporting equipment as all kinds, with special displays by antique guns and rifles and a demonstration of archery equipment by the Belleville Archery Club the second annual fall sportsmen's show by the Quinte Kiwanis Club is being staged at the Belleville Armouries this week.

The show will open at six o'clock Thursday evening and will run through until Saturday evening.

Local marinas will have boats and snow equipment on display, while there will also be displays by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests and by the RCAF who will demonstrate survival equipment.

Retarded Assoc. Members Will Appear on TV

Mrs. Orval H. May of R. R. 2 Picton (formerly of Centenary and Belleville) will appear on CKWS television on Thursday, October 14, along with other members of the executive of the Prince Edward Association for the Mentally Retarded. Members of the group will be interviewed on Claire Leonard's "Almanac" program at 2:30 p.m.

Break Off Talks To Settle Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiations to settle a wildcat strike were broken off Tuesday after noon by representatives of the Motor Transport Industrial Relations Bureau and representatives of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (Ind.)

A teamster spokesman said the representatives of the transport bureau, which represents 85 trucking companies, would not negotiate with the union until all the wildcat strikers are back on the job.

A transport bureau spokesman said the teamster representatives withdrew from the meeting.

The union spokesman said at least 2,000 men were back to work and said only 1,000 remained out. The worker wanted their work week reduced to 40 hours from 48 without pay, and a salary cut from the current $2 an hour.

Ken MacDougall, president of local 938 and chairman of the teamster's negotiating committee, has applied to the federal department of labor for appointments with a request to waive conciliation proceedings, the union spokesman said.

He said if the request is granted, the union would be in a legal strike position after seven days.

STARTED OCT. 3

The unauthorized walkouts which started Oct. 3 paralyzed truck yards at Windsor, Hamilton, Oshawa, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Kitchener, Waterloo, Guelph, Brantford, Sarnia, Owen Sound, Orillia, Peterborough, Oakville and Brantford.

A spokesman for the transport bureau said the "trucking companies intend to continue to seek co - operation in principle providing there is a withdrawal of pickets and a return to work."

In St. Catharines, L. Albert Marinelli, business agent for teamster local 879, said the union has signed contracts with Gibson Cartage of St. Catharines and Constable Transport of Thorold.

Terms of the two-year agreements were not released. They included a clause providing for retention of the contract if negotiation with other companies provide less or a boost if they provide more.

In Windsor, wildcat strikers have agreed to return to work pending the outcome of contract negotiations between the union and the motor bureau.

Only employees of one firm, Inter-City Truck Lines, declined to follow the advice of their leadership Sunday to return to their jobs. About 600 truckers in this area had been affected by the strike.

Y's Activities

The very young, namely boys and girls who are four and five years old and the not-so-very-old youth members have come into their stride at the Belleville Family YMCA.

The specific short courses are being offered to these people and they both being on Monday evening. The purpose of the Tiny Tots with mothers program is to teach preschool children how to behave and therefore give the children more confidence in the water. The program which will run for ten twice a week on Mondays and Thursdays from 2.30 to 3.15 p.m. will be taught by Mrs. Nancy Jackson. Mrs. Jackson has much experience since she was in charge of such a class in the Brandon YMCA, Brandon, Manitoba. Boys and girls must be 45 inches in height.

Another Junior and Senior YMCA Lifesaving Classes will be taught by Mr. Ron Chapman, a lifesaver aquatic instructor to most youth members. Mr. Chapman recently achieved his Bronze Medallion award. For this award, one must have twenty-five lifesaving skills and should be 14 years old. The ten lessons course continues every Monday from 9.00 to 10 p.m. at the YMCA. Candidates for the 14 years old for Junior and 17 years old for Senior Lifesaving.

Both short courses a fee is charged and both courses start on Monday, Oct. 18th.

Do register now either by telephone or a personal visit to the "Y."

—Partial elimination from the provincial highways system of highway 2 and 3 between Sarnia and Stratford-81 between Stratford and Brantford, part of highway 2 between Thamesford and Woodstock, highway 59 from 2 through Glencoe.

Highway officials said the program is divided into three stages according to priorities. Among the projects listed are urban freeway linking London and St. Thomas at Highbury Avenue.

The London-Sarnia freeway proposed along a new route south of highway 22 is in the second phase of the program. Cost of that project alone was estimated at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 and it was expected that the new road eventually would carry more traffic than 401 west of London.

73 Candidates Now Officially Nominated

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seventy-three candidates were nominated officially for the Oct. 25 constituencies, two weeks ahead of hundreds of other contenders, for the Nov. 8 general election.

John Diefenbaker, in Prince Albert, Sask., was one of them and that was no surprise. Fred Atkinson, in British Columbia's Cariboo, was another and that was.

With 27 days remaining before voting day, 464 candidates are in the field. The 1963 record total of 1,021 is not expected to be reached this election.

In the over-all national total, the Liberals lead with 261 candidates—they have four Quebec constituencies to fill—followed by the Progressive Conservatives with 241. The New Democratic Party has 205, Social Credit 62, Creditiste 7, Communist nine and assorted independents 22.

In the 31 constituencies—acte, tered from Newfoundland to the Yukon — where nominations were held Tuesday, the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives each fielded candidates in all ridings. The New Democrats nominated 16 and Social Credit 12. Two independents and an independent Liberal rounded out the total, four more than in 1963.

OTHERS OCT. 25

Nominations in the 21 constituencies are held two weeks ahead of the rest of the country to facilitate delivery of election supplies. Nominations in the other 362—two of which elect two members each—will be held Monday, Oct. 25.

Progressive Conservative Leader Diefenbaker will be opposed in Prince Albert by 40 other candidates, including Leonore Andrews, a Liberal; Peter Kardosh, NDP, and Roy Daschebuk, Social Credit. Mr. Diefenbaker, first elected in Prince Albert in 1953, was returned in 1963 with a plurality of 9,131 votes.

In the Cariboo, what Mr. Atkinson termed "a little local skirmish" was cleared away when he was nominated for the NDP. He was the "reluctant candidate" of a month ago who was nominated at a convention in Prince George Sept. 12 but next day said he would not run. He changed his mind.

Transport Minister Pickersgill was nominated in Newfoundland's Bonavista - Twillingate. He first was elected from there in 1953.

Missing Hunter Walks Out of Dense Bush

MINDEN, Ont. (CP) — Andrew Morrish, 22, a Pickering, Ont., hunter missing for three days in dense bush country, walked out of the area Tuesday and met provincial police at Brady's Lake, 10 miles west of here.

The search started Monday night after Mr. Morrish became separated from his companions, Richard Ingram, 24, of Don Mills and Harry Davies of Toronto.

More than 50 police, forestry officials and civilians searched a bushland near this town about 40 miles northeast of Orillia.

Reduce Charge To Impairment, Fine Is $112

TRENTON — Whether Guy A. Sullivan of Trenton was in a state of "high impairment" or "low intoxication," on Aug. 12 when he tried to park his seven foot Mercedes Benz into a six-foot parking space on Dundas Street West, was a moot point argued in Trenton court yesterday.

Mr. Sullivan had everyone on his side after the evidence was brought out, and the magistrate Mr. C. Wills reduced the charge to "impaired driving" with the blessing of acting Crown Attorney, John Lennox. Sullivan was fined $100 and ordered to pay court costs of $12.

Magistrate Wills agreed with defence attorney, William Weston, that "some perfectly sober drivers try to park their cars in too small a space," with particular reference to members of the fire service.

Ronald Lloyd, Arthur Lyall, Terrence Lyall and Brian Amodeo pleaded guilty to the theft of ten cases of Labatt beer bottles from the 6-RD mess on Dundas St. after they had attended church.

"They had got one spirit and were after some more," quipped Mr. Lennox.

Magistrate Wills was worried about the youths being able to pay a fine, pay rent for a modest apartment and eat, all on money gained at part time jobs. They were each fined $10 plus $3 costs.

Lloyd, also charged with the theft of a fire extinguisher, will discuss with probation officer Dennis Atkins, whether his car should be sold for him to pay the $25 and $6.50 costs on the last two counts. He received a year's suspended sentence on the tire theft charge.

"The car is the root of all evil, in this case," said the magistrate.

PAYS $150 FINE

Ernest Smith Anderson of Murphy Street, pleaded guilty to making a false statement to police on August 22 when he told two officers he had bought the bottles of wine from Cecil Belnap of Marmora St.

In court last week Anderson swore under oath that he spoke to the police had been false, and that he had bought the wine from a man he met on the street, who was carrying the bottles in a knapsack.

Yesterday he was fined $150 for making the false statement.

Frederick Arnold Dainard pleaded self defence when he was ter to a charge of assaulting James Brunton in front of the Quinte Hotel on the evening of October 8 When X-rayed at the hospital, Brunton was found to be suffering from a broken ankle. He also had a cut on the side of his mouth. Court evidence revealed Brunton had asked the accused to "step outside," and after declining a blow to Brunton's chin, Dainard had walked away and left him lying on the sidewalk. Dainard was fined $25.

Delay Decision To Buy Canoe For Scouts

TRENTON — At a meeting of the Kiwanis - sponsored No. 6 Boy Scout Group at the committee last week, the committee members voted to delay a decision on ways and means to buy the boys a canoe until more can be learned about safety operation, supervision needed and other details.

The provincial Scout Council has asked that dues be paid as soon as possible. The registration fee of $1.50 per boy, Scout and Scout will be paid by the committee and money given in July and refunded to the committee. The Group Committee will pay all leaders' dues.

Talks and discussion were held on Trenton streets on the evening of Oct. 15 and morning of Oct. 16 selling apples, and Nov. 6 was set as the date for a salvage drive. Bottles, egg cartons, coat hangers, baskets and newspapers will be picked up. E. Blande is to have a map of the area to be covered drawn up and A. Crews will prepare notices for the salvage drive.

The minutes of the meeting was read by A. Cunnell and the treasurer's report by E. Jones.

IN MEMORIAM

DAVIDSON — In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather, Arthur Davidson, who passed away October 13, 1963.

Beautiful memories are treasured.

Of happy days when we were together.

Sadly missed by daughter Ellen and son-in-law Charles Bonnell.

ROSEBACK — In loving memory of a dear mother, Raymond Roseback, who passed away October 13, 1960.

A beautiful memory dearer than gold,

Of a mother whose worth can be told.

Alone unseen he stands by our side

And whispers don't grieve, death is kind.

Deep in our hearts a memory we find.

One we loved dearly and never forget.

Sadly missed by brother Bill, Elizabeth and family.

Italian Reds Miss Togliatti

By JAMES M. LONG

ROME (AP)—One year after the death of Palmiro Togliatti, the Italian Communist party has failed to prove that a three-way troika will work as well as the strong boss.

Togliatti built the party into a force that won 25 per cent of the votes in free Italian elections.

Bickering over party leadership and future policy has spread through Italian Communism's 24,000 cells. It resulted in an unprecedented failure to reach unanimous accord at a central committee policy meeting this summer, and promises to boil over into an open fight for control at the national congress in December.

After Togliatti was given a Roman funeral before the massed red flags of 1,000,000 of his party members, his chief lieutenant Luigi Longo, 65, was elected provisional chairman.

Longo is an old-time revolutionary but is never able to rise to the brilliant oratory of Togliatti.

Longo said from the day he took office that no one could fill Togliatti's job. A provisional period of collective or shared leadership began.

Longo is party chairman. Pietro Ingrao, 48, lawyer and parliamentary expert, is head of the party's group in the Chamber of Deputies. Giorgio Amendola Pajetta, 53, has taken over as director of the ideological weekly magazine, Rinascita.

Togliatti held all three jobs alone.

Still another faction shaped up under Giorgio Amendola, 57, proponent of an Italian "road" with the socialists which much of the party has favored.

Whatever the outcome, the Communist party cannot look forward confidently to the future as it has shown in national elections since the war. Local and regional elections in Togliatti's death have been seesaw affairs with the Communists showing gains in some and suffering unusual losses in others.

Full Gospel Tabernacle Dedicated

FRANKFORD — October 10th, at 2.45 p.m. Sunday afternoon, a dedication service was held to officially open the enlarged and renovated Full Gospel Tabernacle in Frankford Ont.

Rev. R. A. Bombay, Eastern Ontario district superintendent from Belleville was guest speaker for the occasion.

On the north side of the church an addition has been built which provides one-third more seating capacity than the original church.

The new front is made entirely of angel stone. Both entrance and foyer have been altered.

Amber, green, red and blue stained glass windows have been installed throughout the church. The auditorium floor, aisle, and platform are covered by wall to wall carpeting.

The platform and steps and altar are enlarged and altered. Panelling gives a warm, solid beauty. A new ceiling was put in the auditorium.

The church now has three floors. The basement will be used for classrooms, a double foyer and two offices, including a pastor's study.

The Full Gospel Tabernacle was established 20 years ago this month by Saturday of Rev. C. McElhoes. Since that time, the congregation has grown. Rev. Fred Spring is the present pastor.

Rev. R. A. Bombay brought a challenging message and gave the dedicatory prayer. Ray Moran, Reeve of the village brought greetings from the village council. The Belleville Aires Quartet" from Oshawa gave several numbers. Rev. C. McElhoes of Brockville established the Full Gospel Tabernacle Church 20 years ago, spoke words of appreciation and rejoicing for God's faithfulness, to the Frankford Assembly. The service closed in prayer.

Jap Industry Suffers From Long Recession

By TAKESHI SATYO

TOKYO (Reuters) — Twenty years after the fall of World War, the Japanese economy has reached a crossroads because continued growth requires a pause to put its house in order.

Japanese industries, which rose on the ruins of war, have successfully built giant plants with ultra-modern equipment.

Japan now is the largest shipbuilder and camera producer in the world. She is the second largest output producer of radio and television sets and synthetic textiles, and comes third after the United States and Russia in steel output and oil refining capacity.

In the process, the Japanese people have considerably improved their standard of living. Labor unions have helped industrial workers to win substantial wage increases year after year. Modernization of equipment has improved productivity while peasants-turned-industrial workers as a result of land reform have expanded their rice crops under an official price support system.

The question that policy-makers in Tokyo now have to face, however, is how to operate the expanded national economy efficiently.

In the early 1950's, the Japanese economy has expanded rapidly, fairly easily and smoothly, as noted previously. The usual pattern has been for a boom period to be followed by a slump when payments crisis which was then solved with a credit squeeze.

New trends have now appeared, coinciding with the leveling off of exports as the bulk of Japanese imports.

MARKET DIPPED

While the economic growth continued, the stock market steadily declined from a peak in 1961 and has been in the doldrums since early 1964, despite large amounts of funds pumped in by the Bank of Japan.

Since the beginning of 1965, a series of business failures and financial difficulties has occurred in the industrial and securities sectors of the economy.

Reduction of the bank rate and easing of credit supply, which used to be the most effective weapons to encourage business, have failed to produce the desired reaction. Business confidence has been badly shaken.

Officials, businessmen and economists have been divided as to how they should combat the recession.

One group maintains that the root of the present trouble is over-production, which in turn can be blamed on excessive capital outlays made during the past several years for plants and equipment.

"The best way out, they declare, is to cut production, reduce supply and let the prices of products recover.

The other group, consisting mainly of industrialists and traders, argues that industries should be allowed to continue to expand production to reduce unit cost instead of curtailing output and running the danger of raising production costs beyond the break-even points.

Nothing to Do But Rest And Listen to This Chorus

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks a retired man gets tired of hearing:

"Gee, how I envy you—Nothing to do the rest of your life but take it easy."

"Having a husband under my feet all day long makes me nervous. Sometimes I wish you were still on the job."

"Remember, you're not a kid any more."

"I don't see why you have to lose your temper. All I said was you'd better move your rocking chair because you are wearing a rut in the front porch."

"Herman, you retired too soon. The rumor around the office is that the boss is going to start giving a big annual Christmas bonus this year."

"Herman, you're not doing anything. Come out here and help me finish the dishes."

"Now you need is a good constructive hobby to help pass the time—something like stamp collecting or bird watching."

"Don't tell me you're going to waste another afternoon watching a baseball game on television. I'll tell you the score. I can't see what you see in them. They all look alike to me."

"Dad, you're not doing anything. Why don't you come over and take care of your grandkids while Myrtle and I spend the day at the races?"

"Wake up, Herman. If you take too long a nap now, you won't be able to get a wink of sleep tonight."

"You know I'd be glad to cook it for you—but the doctor says you shouldn't eat it."

"You're not doing anything. Herman. Why don't you take the dog for a walk? It'll do you both good."

"Gosh, Herman, this is your first visit back to the office since you left, isn't it? You have no idea how much we miss you. I know the boss would love to see you, but right now he is up to a terribly important conference. I'll tell him you were here."

"You're not doing anything, Herman. How about going out in the back yard and raking up the leaves?"

Russia Can Teach Canada Co-operative Federalism

By LESLIE MILLIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada may have something to learn about effective co-operative federalism from Russia, a University of B.C. professor thinks.

Prof. Aram Ohanjanian, who lectures a course on Peoples of the U.S.S.R., UBC's department of Slavonic studies, is heading for the Soviet Union later this year to take a look.

Canada, like the U.S.S.R., incorporates a number of nationalities, he said in an interview, but has not been able to deal successfully with them.

"There is nothing in the U.S.S.R. like the separatist movement in French Canada," he said.

Prof. Ohanjanian credits Soviet success in welding many national states into an effective union to two things: a strong and an immediate improvement in conditions.

A relatively weak Communist central government after the 1917 revolution was able to hold the nationalities together because it offered these things, he said.

Canada was born in a different atmosphere, and now has problems, he said.

Prof. Ohanjanian's views are not shared by all Slavists, but he is relying at least partly on personal experience — he was born an Armenian, and thus grew up as a minority in the U.S.S.R. national minority.

He believes the U.S.S.R. has handled the question properly.

"National minorities in the U.S.S.R. are encouraged to speaking their own languages and preserve their own cultural," he said.

Most observers agree—contrary to Prof. Ohanjanian's views—that at least one minority has been systematically harassed: the Jews.

Prof. Cecil Bryner, a colleague of Prof. Ohanjanian's in UBC's Slavonic studies department, suggests the Tartars have also been victims.

He points to frequent denunciations in official Soviet periodicals on "bourgeois nationalism" as an indication that purifying separatist movements may exist.

Historians have noted that Nazi Germany was able to recruit an army in the Ukraine to fight against the U.S.S.R. during the Second World War.

Moshe Decter, writing in Parteiga Affairs, has described Soviet policy towards Jews as "spiritual strangulation," and their future as "precarious."

An article by Solomon Schwartz in Current History says there is only one Yiddish newspaper in the Soviet Union, a two-page paper publishing 1,000 copies three times a week.

Still, small ethnic minorities, the Maris and Yakuts (about 500,000 and 600,000 respectively), have a total of 49 newspapers, Mr. Decter said.

Prof. Ohanjanian argues that national minorities can look at such figures as Stalin, a Georgian in Peking's Bridge of Heaven district, the Chinese capital's main popular amusement area for three centuries.

In most of the small rickety shacks and booths, acrobats, conjurers, jugglers, clowns, musicians and traditional storytellers play to capacity crowds with performances which have changed little over the years.

But one small stage is regularly dedicated to a youthful reciter clicking a wooden rattle and wearing a false nose as he tells stories of Chairman Mao's comic tale of woe and defeat beginning: "I am an American spy sent by the devil me to Korea and Viet Nam."

He is followed by girl singers, like him in ordinary plain slacks and shirt. She sings what sounds like a typical sheltered Chinese girl's love song —but the words recount the deeds of Vietnamese guerrillas or contemporary heroes of Communist China.

At weekends, hundreds of Chinese join the network of narrow, unpaved, dusty lanes and alleys which surround the closely packed entertainment booths, stores and bazaars. Even on working days, the district is always busy.

Wedged between one of the capital's largest hotels and the main boulevard leading south from the walled former Imperial Palace district through the poorer "Chinese city," the district takes its name from a Taoist temple which no longer exists.

It is near both the Temple of Heaven, where Chinese emperors prayed every year for good harvests, and the place known as Tsai Shih Kou, where criminals used to be beheaded.

Some of them earned their penalties in the Bridge of Heaven district itself, where for many years as the haunt of thieves and pimps and often the scene of street fights.

LBJ Continues His Fashion Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's recovery from major surgery continued in routine fashion today.

He awoke at 7:15 a.m. EDT and had breakfast of toast, chipped beef, tea and orange juice—more solid than he has had since he was operated.

The operation for removal of the president's gall bladder and a kidney stone took place six days ago. Thus Johnson is about half way through the 10- to 14-day period of hospital care the physicians expected.

Dr. Ormond Culp, Mayo clinic surgeon, was first of the 10-man Johnson medical team to leave. Culp removed the kidney stone.

Viet Nam War New Theme on Peking Stage

Ottawa Couple Are Hunting African Cat Lost on 401 Here

Has anyone in the immediate Belleville area seen a white two-year-old African house cat answering to the name of "Pufu"?

If anyone has, they can earn themselves a $25 reward by calling a young Ottawa couple who value the cat greatly as a family pet.

The young couple, Mr. and Mrs. John Baigent who recently returned from Africa following a teaching engagement in Ghana, lost the cat on Thanksgiving Day along 401 highway a mile west of the city. With Thanksgiving restaurants in Canada for different than that in tropical Ghana Mr. and Mrs. Baigent are worried about the cat's health.

The cat is described as female, slightly smaller than the average Canadian house cat, and mostly white with grey striped patches on its head and back and tail.

Mr. and Mrs. Baigent live at 420 Parkdale Ave. Ottawa, Telephone 728-7049.

Opportunists Called Vote Grills States

Lee Grills, Progressive Conservative candidate for Hastings South in the upcoming Federal Election, said this election has been called "by a group of political opportunists, not for the good of the country, but because they feel it is advantageous to their party."

Speaking at the regular weekly meeting of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, Mr. Grills said: "These are the same people who at the last election, attempted to destroy the credit of our country for political gain.

"You remember the Diefenbaker? This is the same dollar — worth 93½ cents — that has brought us prosperity by assisting our exports and putting thousands of our people to work."

Speaking of the Liberal Party he said, "These are the people who now ask you to give them a majority government. These are the people who were unwilling to publicly denounce corruption in their ranks. Are they likely to give you a more honest picture with more members?

"My platform and that of my party is based on honesty and dedicated service to Canada and Canada. We stand for a united Canada in which all provinces have an equal place in the sun.

"There will be no individual bargaining between the Federal Government and any individual Province.

BELLEVILLE HELPED

"In 1960 the Technical and Vocational Training Assistance Act was passed by a Conservative government. You were able to use money for the benefit of this here in Belleville, with the technical and commercial facilities being added to the Quinte Secondary School, Moira Secondary School, Ontario Vocational Centre and now, the new Centennial Secondary.

"Each year represents one of six programs developed under that act. Vocational guidance, pre-employment training, apprenticeship programs, retraining of the unemployed and training immigrants in industry to upgrade their employees were some of the other items developed under Canada and Canada under this act.

"The Progressive Conservative Party will take measures to establish a National Power Grid which will be part of our policy to preserve our water resources for Canada's needs, conserve our natural resources and increased assistance for conservation areas.

"In agriculture, our program includes policies to maintain and expand our exports through trade negotiations and extension of export credit.

"Farm credit will be extended to young farmers to establish and modernize their farms.

"The Progressive Conservative government will provide through N.H.A., mortgages on older properties that the owner may have to move from one municipality to another.

WOULD REMOVE TAX

"The party believes in the reduction of taxes so that our economy may expand. The 11 per cent manufacturers' sales tax on building materials and industrial machinery would be the first to go.

"As we hope to do business with the Communist bloc we said, "we must permit them to do business with us. It has always been Progressive Conservative policy to encourage Canadians to invest in Canada, but at the same time, we do not wish to discourage others from investing in our country.

"The Government of the last two and one - half years has not passed one major piece of legislation to improve the competitive situation of Canada in world trade.

"I urge you to vote Progressive Conservative. Only with honest government will we restore confidence in the Government."

In other business at the meeting, Graham Brown of the Quinte Kiwanis Club asked the Belleville Kiwanis for moral support in the promotion of the annual Outdoor Sports Show, slated for the Belleville Armories this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Hunting and fishing films will be one of the major attractions at the show, along with samples of the latest equipment and the presence of experts to explain their use.

HIGH WYCOMBE, England (CP)—A local resident of this Buckinghamshire town was granted a rebate on his local taxes. The house is 14 yards from the railway line and every passing train has to sound its whistle because of a nearby traffic crossing.

Piece of Wood Pierces Head Of Passenger

Mrs. Winnifred Green, 23-year-old Shannonville woman is resting comfortably in Kingston General Hospital today after having a piece of wood from a mailbox post removed from her head.

Mrs. Green was a passenger in a car driven by Carl Rogers of Shannonville, which about midnight last night struck a mailbox post on No. 2 Highway, about two and a half miles east of the city. A piece of wood from the post pierced Mrs. Green's head.

Following the accident Mr. Rogers drove the injured woman to Belleville hospital, where a City Ambulance was called to take the patient to Kingston.

As Mr. Rogers' damaged car was standing at the emergency entrance at the Belleville hospital 14 gallons of gasoline leaked from the damaged tank and firemen were called with a pumper truck to flush the gasoline away.

Montreal-Toronto Run Will Have Five New CN Trains

MONTREAL (CP)—The CNR announced Tuesday that it will post five new trains on the Montreal-Toronto run as of Oct. 31, including one which will cover the 335 miles in four hours, 30 minutes.

Passenger trains called the Rapido will bolt down the tracks during the afternoon at an average speed of 67 miles an hour, leaving each city at 4.45 p.m. and arriving at 9.44 p.m. it will be the fastest passenger train in North America, the CNR announcement said.

The Rapido will make two stops to change crews — none for passengers.

The present afternoon pool train with the CPR takes six hours and 15 minutes for the run. The pool agreement ends Oct. 30.

Three other trains will come into service daily Oct. 31, in addition to one which will operate in peak travel periods such as Christmas and Easter.

There will be a second afternoon train called the Bonaventure, to leave Montreal and Toronto at 4:30 and make stop at Dorval, Cornwall, Brockville, Kingston, Belleville, Port Hope, Oshawa and Danforth. The run will take five hours and 30 minutes.

In the mornings, the Lakeshore will run in each direction on a staggered basis at two and 15 minutes, stopping at Dorval, Cornwall, Prescott, Brockville, King s t on, Belleville, Trenton Junction, Cobourg, Oshawa and Danforth.

A slower overnight train called Cavalier will leave from each city shortly before midnight, arriving in Belleville at 7:30 next morning and in Montreal at 8 a.m.

Lower Section Of Seaway to Close Dec. 3

OTTAWA (CP)—The St. Lawrence Seaway authority today announced Dec. 3 as the formal closing date for the Montreal-Lake Ontario section of the seaway.

However, the section will be kept open on a day-to-day basis if weather is favorable beyond that date.

Closing date of the seaway has been Nov. 30—usually extended—since the seaway was opened in 1959.

The authority announced Nov. 30 as the closing date for the locks at Montreal well before that.

"St. Lambert lock normally is the first to freeze, as was the case last year, resulting in several ocean vessels being forced to winter in the Great Lakes," the authority warned.

The authority announced Nov. 30 as the closing date "to allow for ice build-up."

Both Hum Opoots and Piupiu Signify Skunk in Chinook

By LESLIE MILLIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hum opoots or piupiu—in Chinook it all feans skunk.

Hum is the Chinook word for stink. Opoots, delicately translated, means hindquarters.

Chinook was the trade jargon used by white men and West Coast Indians in British Columbia's pioneer days.

Taking its name from the Chinook Indians of the Columbia Valley, it was made up of French, English and Indian words.

Linguistics experts describe it as a "crude means of communication," but it could be marvelously expressive.

Its simplicity is charming, and its logic unanswerable.

Heebee house is a reasonable description for a saloon, and when you leave it, you're hull lum—drunk, from hull of rum.

Opitsah is the word for stink, and thus we have opitsah yakha sliths—friend of the knife—meaning fork. And in Chinook, lick and sweetheart mean the safe thing.

From the English word smoke comes the Chinook smuke, and from that came stick smuke, meaning a bow and arrow.

VANKS ARE BOSTONS

Oleman is the Chinook way of saying woman, and Englishmen are King George men, and Americans are Bostons.

A versatile word, and one still found in the speech of British Columbians, is chuck, or water.

It shows up in skookum (big) chuck, meaning a rapids; sail chuck, meaning the ocean; and piah (fire) chuck, or whisky.

Skookum is another word still in B. C., and the Chinook word for Indian—Siwash—is used, but considered derogatory.

Chinook words of French origin include la-kahb for table, ie-sook for sugar, la-gome for glue, and la-shaw for chair.

Other Chinook words came from the sea, and the summer pukpuk for fistfight, and pohmeaning to blow.

Sick is the same word in both languages, but in Chinook it appears in such combinations as ole sick (cigar), tumtum (heart) sick, meaning jealous, and piah (fire) sick, meaning venereal disease.

The Chinook dictionary, reprinted for tourist shops by a Vancouver bookseller from an 1899 edition, includes a reminder that Chinook was also a language of religion.

Mr. Lesage's Plea

Quebec Premier Lesage told an Ontario-Quebec newspaper editors' seminar in Toronto last week that the press in every province should carry more news of other Canadian provinces.

"Maybe we can create an organization to permit observers in Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria."

The Canadian Press, of course, already provides such an organization for the dissemination of news and information of national interest, but it may well be that the people of Quebec would like to have more detailed news of what goes on, say in Vancouver Island—as Mr. Lesage suggested—and vice-versa.

The theme of greater understanding between Quebec and the rest of Canada probably occupies the thoughts of Pacific coast Canadians less than most. Here in Ontario it has greater urgency, although both Ontarians and the people of Quebec tend to be a little pig-headed about the whole issue, as for example when the former ask, "what do they want anyway?" Or when Quebecers display a sort of Gallic arrogance in the company of their Anglo-Saxon confreres from Ontario.

There is a need for more understanding and tolerance of each others point of view. Bilingualism must be fostered as well as contacts between members of the two founding races. Already, a useful start has been made with exchange visits between high school students of both provinces.

Sukarno's Troubles

President Sukarno of Indonesia is still at the head of affairs in his country, although there is evidence that cracks are beginning to appear in his regime.

He is reported to have told his cabinet he disapproves of the army's campaign against the communist party for its alleged involvement in the abortive coup which resulted in the slaying of six army generals.

Sukarno is walking a tightrope. If he succeeds in holding the support of the communist party—the largest one outside the Soviet bloc —at the expense of the army, he could find himself in trouble with the latter.

The army itself is equipped with arms acquired from the communist countries and paid for with funds that Indonesia can ill afford. Meanwhile the sprawling nation made up of islands of the former Dutch East Indies remains impoverished, its economic development hamstrung while Sukarno pursues his dreams of expansion in Malaysia.

Out of Fashion

Banditry in the old-fashioned sense, as it relates to bands of roving marauders or brigands, is a rare thing nowadays. The closest approximation to a bandit in western society is the bank robber, but as a way of life, where bands of lawless men rob, murder and pillage, banditry is not a problem here.

South America is less fortunate. In the sub-continent banditry is rife, particularly in Colombia where for years police and military have been engaged in hunting down terrorists.

From all accounts, it is a slow business, for the bandits are elusive and skilful as the communist guerrillas in Viet Nam. A report from Bogota, however, says that one of Colombia's most notorius bandits, Telmo (Scissors) Alirio Fernandez was shot dead in an encounter with army and police units in the town of Chaparral.

It is easy to imagine the scene; it could have been like something out of "High Noon," when Scissors came to town and went down fighting, and the word would spread quickly that he was dead and no longer would terrorize the area.

Highway Developments

Ontario Highways Minister Charles MacNaughton's announcement of a major road development program in Eastern Ontario over the next 20 years, including a four-lane freeway between Ottawa and Brockville, is timely.

It comes hard on the heels of the official opening of the extension of Highway 81 just across the International Bridge here in New York and is indicative of the growth expected in traffic volume in the years ahead. In fact, the Ottawa-Brockville link is said to be part of a co-ordinated plan with New York State.

The controlled access freeway will follow Highway 16 to Kemptville, then swing southwest through Grenville county into Elizabethtown township and link with Highway 401 east of Brockville. Construction is expected to commence in 1971 following completion of a freeway between Quebec and Ottawa.

The larger scale of the new world means one planet simply is not enough for a really good-sized war.—George Nelson, a New York-industrial designer, on the advance of technology.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

October 12th, 1945

While London in general knew that the crown jewels of England had been evacuated from the city and their guards in the Tower of London drawn into essential war services, only the King and Queen and a scant half-dozen other persons knew that the treasures were buried approximately four stories down, under Windsor Castle.

Windsor is 22 miles from London, on an ancient ford in the Thames River. The British crown jewels were secreted in a passage-way running underground from the old dungeon below the Round Tower to Windsor Forest. The secret passage offered an exit into the forest, originally 120 miles across.

The jewels include the famous Koh-i-noor diamond and three four Cullinans, the latter cut from the same hunk of "rough" — the biggest diamond ever mined and originally valued at $750,000,000. The four stones, weighing a total of 1,005 carats, are back in London, but the bank of England has given them temporary quarters, their former apartment in the Tower still showing the marks of the Nazi rocket attack.

30 YEARS AGO

Mrs. Harry A. Cook of Regina, Sask., is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. S. Tice and her brother, Mayor Geo. O. Tice, West Bridge Street.

Mr. John W. Carmichael was home from Queen's University to spend the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Carmichael.

The Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, was the special preacher at the 60th anniversary service in Grace United Church, Trenton, Sunday evening.

Mr. Austin Walsh of the Dominion Bank staff, Toronto, was home to spend the weekend with his parents Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Walsh.

40 YEARS AGO

October 12th, 1925

The cost of educating a high school student in Belleville last year was $97.83 and while a public school pupil the cost was about a third of this amount, it being $31.94. These figures are culled struck from figures furnished by Mr. W. Jeffers Diamond, the treasurer of the Board of Education. The figure for the high school was 1,193 pupils on 405 students, and the public school figure was $79,810.88 with average attendance of 1761 pupils, the total cost for all schools here was $119,432.27 for 2166 students.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith of Canniton, celebrated on October 10, the 50th anniversary of their wedding. They were married in Belleville on Oct. 10th, 1875. Mr. Smith has been in the employ of the distillery at Corbyville for 33 years. Many friends extend congratulations and good wishes to them on the anniversary day.

The new bridge over Cambridge will open on October 15th. The birds are said to be numerous in this district and many sports are getting ready to go after them.

The Rev. S. C. Moore was in Toronto this week attending a special meeting in connection with the Methodist Church.

The Rev. G. M. Measham of Toronto, whose father was postmaster here for many years, is spending a few days in town.

Mr. Earl McCoy was home from Queen's University, Kingston, to spend the weekend.

Welfare Costs

St. Catharines Standard

While welfare in today's complex society needs a powerful engine, it also needs a good set of brakes. This fact is brought to mind by a Morgan Guaranty Survey report which shows that Canada Government is already spending over $47 billion a year on welfare. The report notes: "From all signs now visible, that figure is only a way station on a continuing upward march.

"It is fair to ask," the article states, "indeed, eventually it will be necessary to ask — whether there are limits beyond which the expansion can proceed only at the risk of seriously disrupting society's economic incentives." The same question can be asked in Canada relative to pending welfare measures.

Winter Clothing Problem for Boy

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I would like to point out how difficult it is to buy certain articles of clothing in Belleville stores.

Today we went into a large store to equip our 11-year-old son with winter clothing and rain wear.

Well, we came out emptyhanded because the hats and raincoats were not his size and the one sweater of the buttonless was not practical.

It seems that when you pick up the newspaper, lots of goods are advertised but when you go to a store to buy a common item of clothing it is a different matter.

This is a common occurrence to us which prompts me to write about the matter.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oct. 14, 1965 . . .

The destruction of the two-centuries-old order of Knights Templars began 658 years ago tonight — in 1307 — when the members in Paris, including the grand master, were arrested. The Templars had become independent and powerful in financial, military and religious matters, all of which accounted for their suppression. Under torture, many of the members confessed to horrible blasphemies and crimes, which in the eyes of the public served merely to justify the use of torture to find and purify such wickedness. The leaders of the order were burned at the stake in 1314.

First World War.

Fifty years ago today — in 1915 — British troops attacked again near Hulluch and recaptured positions in the Hohenzollern Redoubt; eight people were killed in a Zeppelin raid on London.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today — in 1940 — Princess Elizabeth made her first broadcast, addressed to the children of the world; Commander J. W. R. Roy of Montreal was appointed to command the replacement for HMCS Fraser, lost off Boulogne; Russian army units moved up to the limit of the zone annexed from Romania.

To Your Good Health
Instruction Is Required In Breathing Exercises

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: You have written that breathing exercise fit from the lung power that re is any. but just try to describe it on paper — even with drawings.

It's about the same with three breathing exercises.

Yet they are important because, although they can't cure emphysema, they can help people get the most possible benefit from the lung power that remains.

With emphysema, don't be unduly depressed by the term "no cure." There's no cure for old age, either, but if we use all that is known on the subject we can make longevity happier and can extend it. We can stay old longer, if you want to put it that way. And I, personally, do.

* * *

Now in my own home city the Tuberculosis and Health Society (which like so many others is interested in good breathing, too) has established breathing classes so people with emphysema can learn exercises that will do them some real good. I hope we will soon have such classes all over the country.

As things are now, either ask your doctor to show you, or have him refer you to somebody who can, or perhaps best of all for something like this, call the TB Society, or whatever exact name it may be using in your city, and see whether such classes have been started.

I might even go so far as to suggest that you pay the dollar or two a year to become a member of your local society, because those dues are the source of revenue to organize such classes. You help not only yourself but others as well.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: My son's development is so unusual that I am led to believe it involves some form of physical malfunctioning. He is 18, yet barely into puberty. Is something like this attributable to a glandular deficiency, and if so can anything be done? — John N.

Yes sir. By 18 a boy should have well-developed "secondary sex characteristics," as we call them — deepening voice, hair and beard growth, and all the rest.

Glandular deficiencies can and do inhibit normal development. And yes, treatm e nt is possible, but it is essential to determine what part of the endocrine (glandular) system is blocking the boy's progress toward maturing.

Discuss this with your physician, or consult an endocrinologist (a physician who specializes in glandular disorders).

* * *

Emphysema can be controlled. To learn how to live with this serious lung disease, write to Dr. Molner, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., requesting a copy of the booklet, "How to Control Emphysema," enclosing a long, self-addressed stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Law Officer Acquitted

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

It is a generally accepted truth that nations, as well as individuals, should not try to tell other nations how to run their affairs until the affairs of the nation offering the advice are in perfect order.

This, of course, would mean that the advice would never be offered, which in most cases would be to everybody's advantage. But racial troubles which continue to disturb and sometimes disrupt life in the United States come in this category.

But on occasion the temptation is too strong — or the result to the intelligence is too brutal. The acquittal of a law officer in Alabama of murdering shot and killed a civil rights worker from the northern states is all this, and more.

Not only is it just the kind of propaganda the enemies of the West are so glad to have it is unsettling to near neighbors like Canadians.

It undermines the validity of the U.S. claim to be democratic, to police, patrol and perpetuates a condition which must be rooted out if the United States is to lose the basic legal safeguards.

It has no possible justification, despite the jury of 12 white southerners, and in fact helps justify the Negro extremists who on occasion give their own lawless answer.

Strictly Personal
Chicago Puts Roads Before Parks

What is happening in Chicago should be a warning to residents of other cities in the nation. Chicago is sacrificing its parks to its roadways, placing traffic above people.

In the last few years, there has been a slow but definite return to the city from the suburbs. Many families are beginning to realize that a city can offer advantages in living that outweigh suburban benefits.

One of the glories of Chicago is its beautiful lake-front, with parks and beaches easily accessible. Now the highway engineers have begun to defoliate these areas in order to straighten and widen the boulevards to accomodate more cars in the rush hours.

If this trend continues, if the engineers are allowed to put utility ahead of beauty and leisure, then the decay of the city as a place to live is assured. Families will move back from the suburbs will be discouraged by the lack of parks and parkways, the shrinking of beaches and the intrusion of more heavy traffic into the residential areas for a narrow strip of sand.

The modern city — through greed, lack of foresight and carelessness — has already become dangerously eroded. Its lack of planning, its failure to provide stability, its indifference to a tolerable conditions (except when federal funds are forthcoming) have driven the higher income groups farther and farther into the suburbs.

Tens of millions have been spent on expressways to enable these suburban people to enter and leave the city expeditiously; and the more roads, the more traffic; the easier to get into the city, the easier to get out. Those steam shovels on the expressways are digging the citys' own graves.

Cities were made for living in, not just working in. They should be places of charm and beauty. But if the neighborhoods run down, then the schools deteriorate in quality, and when this happens no amount of highways or bigger highways can prevent masses of families moving out to the suburbs.

The highway engineers are creating interesting traffic flow. But more important is "people flow.'. Who wants millions of cars moving into the city each day, when an equal amount of people move out every evening? And when the city has been ensured that the suburbs cannot survive for very long, either financially or physically.

Disaster in Nova Scotia!

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

If the traveller might reasonably expect to find anything in Nova Scotia, it would surely be well cooked and attractively presented fish — of all the kinds with which this province is so richly blessed.

But does he find it?

Last week, in an eastern Nova Scotia resort restaurant, we were so misguided as to order what was described on the menu as the "special seafood plate," graced in addition by the name of the resort. It was composed as follows:

Item: One slab of gelatinous halibut.

Item: Some few flakes of cod so cooked that the most charitable comparison was with blotting paper.

Item: One oily chunk of canned tuna.

Item: Four sardines of Norwegian origin.

This unappetizing mess was lavishly supported on a bed of lettuce, a large portion of which was smothered by the usual apology for a potato salad — diced cold potatoes slathered in commercial mayonnaise — and garnished with carrot rolls, tomatoes, slabs of other cruder cucumber, not so much sliced as chunked, and canned asparagus spears.

It was accompanied, ironically enough, by what was the only epicurean touch of the whole plate — a small paper container of a really excellent homemade mayonnaise.

This kind of thing is at once a disgrace to Nova Scotia's fish resources, and an insult to the palate of the traveller, be he tourist or native. We boast of our lobster and our scallops, but where were they? We have also bumbler but not less appetizing products of the sea — cod, not marinated herring or smoked mackerel have been used? What about the ordinary, but delicious haddock?

It can be done, and reasonably. We have often enjoyed in many places excellent dishes of the varied fish for which Nova Scotia is justly famed, both hot and cold.

But that fact merely adds our irritation that any m a restaurant in this province should be so ill-advised as to foist on us such a monstrously second - rate collation of what should be our highest epicurean delight — fish.

Dim View of Men and Sex

Brantford Expositor

"All men are lecherous, egotistical swine," declare 20 girl students at England's Sheffield University. They have formed a society for girls who oppose pre-marital sex, and will offer moral support by telephoning any sister who weakens in the cause. But what if there is no phone handy? And if a girl is firm-minded enough to break away and still-for moral support, does she need it?

These girls will be very unusual creatures if they do not think of wiping out men, for since "all men" are lechers, each will marry a lecher because, so they say, there is no other kind of man. On their view, sex with a lecher before marriage is wrong, but the same thing after marriage is right.

Why such frightening mindless young things are allowed to clutter a seat of higher learning is a matter for wonder. Lack of the biological and more of the logical would improve their thinking.

Employers Like Adaptability

Charlottetown Guardian

A recently issued pamphlet from the Department of Labor records the views of 50 of Canada's leading employers — representing manufacturing, banking, insurance, civil service, transportation and utilities — on the question of their preference for hiring graduates with secondary school education. There is nothing very new in the reasons given for this preference, but they cannot too frequently be repeated, especially at the opening of another school term when they may provide a useful impetus to youthful attention.

One of the chief qualities these employers look for in an employee, it is noted, is the ability to adapt oneself to new skills and ideas and master new problems. A person who leaves school is not necessarily educated in this potential, but from the point of view of the employer he has not proven that he possesses it.

In personal selections, by far the most accurate indication of future performance is past performance, and the graduate without stands a better than average chance of being a company drop-out. For that reason many companies stated they preferred not to hire school drop-outs, unless of course there were reasons for special consideration.

Some employers emphasized that graduates, usually older and more mature, were more likely to think for themselves and to use their initiative. This helped to reduce the cost and time involved in training.

Finally, the simple matter of supply and demand was also given serious consideration. The greater availability of specialized job applicants, and the decreasing number of non-specialized jobs, means that employers can afford to be more selective in their hiring.

The young person who carries with him a secondary school certificate has found brings to his first job more maturity, judgment, and potential for future advancement. The boy or girl who leaves school early usually requires more time on the job or further training at night school.

It goes without saying that many exceptions are even wider for those who obtain more advanced education and training at a university or an institute of technology and all those young men and women who are able to do so should take advantage of such training.

It's a long time now since Samuel Johnson complained to his friend Boswell, that "the moral disease of the present generation is a desire for study." Every age may be sadly suffered from this ailment, but surely in this age were the advantages of youthful study more apparent, or the obstacles harder to overcome if the opportunity for such study is neglected.

Mr. Pearson toured two shipyards in Lauzon near Quebec and was questioned closely by workers and officials about last February's suspension of the 35-per - cent shipbuilding subsidy program.

He replied that the results of a policy review will be announced shortly after the Nov. 8 election. The government would do whatever it could to keep the yards operating.

The prime minister flew to Toronto Tuesday night and was driving today to Guelph for a reception and Orillia for an evening rally. He returns to Ottawa Thursday.

WILL PUBLISH BOOK

While Mr. Pearson was visiting Quebec, Quebec - Montmorency independent candidate Guy Marcoux said he will publish his book about L'Affaire des Six late this week or early next week.

The Toronto Star quoted him as saying that John Doyle, multi-millionaire mining magnate convicted of illegal stock promotion in the U.S., and Moise Darabaner, Quebec businessman facing fraud and arson charges, worked behind the scenes after the 1962 election to get six Social Credit MPs (now Creditiste candidates) to pledge their support to the Liberals.

Mr. Diefenbaker charged in Medicine Hat the Liberals appear willing to divert precious water into the United States. A Conservative government would safeguard "this vital resource" for Canada.

He accused the Pearson government of disrupting national unity and the prime minister of turning his back on the past.

"They chiselled and whittled away at the powers of the federal government . . . by deals under the table. They've given to the provinces the right to make treaties."

The Conservative chieftain was continuing his westward whistle-stop trip today, stopping in Lethbridge for an evening rally.

Mr. Thompson announced his party's 10-point program at a press conference in Toronto. His group would support whichever party formed the government and he saw no reason why a minority government could not serve a full five-year term.

FIELD 100 CANDIDATES

Social Credit MPs would oppose the federal government's tendency to invade provincial fields. He said the party will field about 100 candidates compared with 224 in the 1963 election.

The Social Credit platform calls for increased federal aid to universities and technical schools, a department of federal-provincial affairs and tax cuts for resource companies.

Mr. Thompson also urged the government to publish a white paper on internal and external security. The public must be shown that crime and espionage are under better control than it now appears, he said.

After the press conference, he flew to Calgary to begin a swing through Bow River and Acadia federal-provincial affairs and tax travel in a trailer caravan.

Mr. Douglas said the NDP favors marketing boards to assure fair prices to farmers. The farmer was the forgotten man in the economy. Today the NDP leader was speaking in Dauphin, Man., and Yorkton, Sask.

preciation of his duties and responsibilities."

Mr. Justice Kelly also said in the royal commission report that Campbell's relationship with Viola MacMillan and his dealings in Windfall stock "constitute the most shocking incident revealed before this commission."

Campbell borrowed 5,000 shares of Windfall from Mrs. MacMillan to cover a short position taken in the stock by his wife.

At public hearings by the commission, Campbell said that he and his wife made about $29,000 profit from trading Windfall shares.

Mr. Wishart said the charge against Campbell was lodged under the section of the criminal code which makes it an offence for any official who, in connection with the duties of his office, commits fraud or a breach of trust.

The section under which the additional charges against the MacMillans were placed concerns fraudulent manipulation of stock exchange transactions.

Cobourg Youth Shot to Death Accidentally

COBOURG, Ont. (CP)—Donald Milton Ford, an 18-year-old high school student, was shot to death accidentally Tuesday night at his home, police reported.

The youth and his brother, Lloyd, were examining a shotgun when it discharged, police said.

Cobourg is 35 miles east of Oshawa.

To Visit Queen

Wilson had in mind that Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies of Australia would lead the mission and Menzies is reported to have replied that he would be willing to undertake the job if it had the backing of all the Commonwealth leaders.

The British premier warned that a unilateral declaration of independence could start a chain reaction in Africa of which no one could see the end.

DOOR STILL OPEN

He stressed that Britain was prepared to go on talking with Smith to work out a program for early independence "based on guaranteed progress toward majority rule" by Rhodesia's 4,000,000 Negroes.

Britain has threatened an economic boycott, joined by other nations, to isolate Rhodesia if it declares independence.

Wilson said he had consulted with all Commonwealth government chiefs before making the proposal.

The prime minister said Smith and his colleagues face the prospect of communal rioting between the 250,000 Rhodesian whites and the Negro majority. Wilson said he could not believe that the whites would take action "which must destroy the very harmony they seek . . ."

There was no immediate reply to the proposal from Salisbury, but Smith said earlier Tuesday it was "an even bet" that Rhodesia would be independent under white rule by Christmas.

Commonwealth

nations that Britain will not grant Rhodesia independence until an arrangement can be worked out ensuring Rhodesia's 4,000,000 blacks of rights equal to those being enjoyed by the country's 225,000 white settlers.

Prime Minister Ian Smith of the self-governing colony returned from the fruitless talks in London and told his supporters in Salisbury that Rhodesia will be independent by Christmas.

But many African delegates saw the adoption of the UN resolution as a significant obstacle to this.

Such a declaration would immediately put the matter into the hands of the 15-nation Security Council and could precipitate a dangerous situation in much of the African continent where Rhodesia would stand isolated, with the exception of racist South Africa.

NO RECOGNITION

Arthur Goldberg, U.S. ambassador to the UN, warned that the United States will not recognize a rebellious regime if Rhodesia declares her independence without Britain's good wishes.

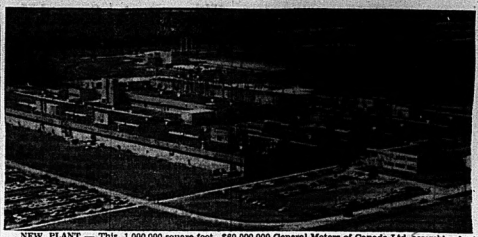
And while the Rhodesian question dominated much of the delegates' work, Foreign Minister Sardar Swaran Singh of India brought up the Indian-Pakistani dispute during an address before the assembly.

Singh told the delegates that there was a "sinister connection between the aggression" of Pakistan against India and Chinese action on the Indian - Chinese border.

"Our own experience in the last few months from two powerful neighbors has shown us that there still is a strong urge in these two countries to take recourse to arms," the Indian foreign affairs minister stated.

"Twice in the last six months, my country and my people have faced blatant and adventurist aggression from Pakistan," said Singh. "During the same period we have faced ultimatums and serious threats of aggression from the People's Republic of China." Then he added:

"It is clearly established . . . that there was a sinister connection between the aggression of one and the ultimatums of the other."



NEW PLANT — This 1,000,000-square-foot, $60,000,000 General Motors of Canada Ltd. assembly plant 20 miles north of Montreal was opened Tuesday by Quebec Premier Jean Lesage. A total of 800 persons are now employed at the plant and this will increase to 1,100 by mid-November. (CP Wirephoto)

Patients Under Anesthesia Can Still Hear Says Doctor

CHICAGO (AP)—A San Francisco gynecologist said Tuesday that patients under anesthesia can hear what's being said around them, and that it can and does affect their recovery.

"If you speak at all, speak positively," Dr. David Cheek told an audience of doctors during the meeting of the American Society of Clinical Hypnosis.

"Not only can they hear what the surgeon says, but they are likely to misunderstand and become frightened," Dr. Cheek said.

He urged doctors to speak with less candor while operating, saying that recent research shows that anesthesia does not limit the patient's ability to hear.

Dr. Cheek said that since anesthetics suspend a patient's ability to think rationally, the patient may be highly susceptible to frightening suggestions.

He also said that emotional storms under anesthesia could increase blood clotting. If a clot should enter the heart during surgery, Dr. Cheek said, it could kill the patient.

Story of CNIB Founder, E. A. Baker, Is Told in Book

By DON HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

On a Belgian First World War battlefield in 1916 Maj. Charles D. Hill, commander of the 28th Canadian Battalion, told Lieut. Edwin Albert Baker:

"The spirit of a chap like you would electrify a petrified snail."

A few days later, near Kemmel Hill, Lieut. Baker was blinded by a sniper's bullet.

The next 50 years proved over and over that Maj. Hill had correctly sized up the young officer.

The life story of the man who helped found the Canadian National Institute for the Blind and directed its operations for half a century is told by Marjorie Wilkins Campbell in No Compromise (McClelland and Stewart).

Blinded at 22 at a time when he was looking forward to promising future as an electrical engineer, E. A. Baker was depressed at first. But while recuperating in a London hospital he resolved to devote his life to helping other handicapped persons.

He learned to read Braille, type and play the piano. Back in Canada the next year, he got a job as a typist with Ontario Hydro in Toronto.

Later he joined a small group of Toronto businessmen interested in setting up some kind of an institute to help the war-blinded, and two years after his own repatriation the CNIB was operating in rented quarters in mid-town Toronto. He served as honorary secretary and later managing director.

RETIRED IN 1964

One of the book's anecdotes relates that he refused to charge the diapers of his first-born because "a blind man should realize there are some things it is not practical for him to do."

The fact is, however, that as a result of his inspiration and example and the work of the CNIB, the number of things it is impractical for the blind to do has been dramatically reduced.

His own personal interests include carpentry and metal work, and Miss Campbell discovered that he even took up fencing while recuperating in hospital in England.

Col. Baker's reputation is by no means confined to Canada. He was the first president of the World Council for the Welfare of the Blind, a post he held continuously from 1951 to 1964 when he retired to Collins Bay, Ont., near Kingston, from CNIB headquarters.

But the headquarters staff know him well and they have reserved an office for him, just in case he decides climbing apple trees at 72 takes more out of him than he bargained for.

Miss Campbell spent six weeks taping Col. Baker's reminiscences and spent five months interviewing persons in Europe who have known him over the years. What impressed her most in her research was that she never once found anyone who would say anything critical of him—a man without enemies.

Ian Smith of Rhodesia Subtle Politician and Plays Cards Close to His Vest

By GRANVILLE J. WATTS

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Ian Smith of Rhodesia has one thing in his favor while negotiating with the British government in London. He appeared almost more British than his hosts in his manner, dress.

Although born in Rhodesia, Smith is the son of a Scottish butcher and he was a Second World War hero as a fighter pilot in the Royal Air Force.

In appearance Smith, six feet tall, cool, dogged and seldom smiling looked at home in Whitehall.

"We found him very British," said a government official at the end of the abortive London talks on Rhodesian independence. "We all had a friendly cup of tea afterwards."

The only thing out of place in Smith's otherwise British appearance is his accent, a twang redolent of the wide - open spaces of Rhodesia.

NEVER TIPS HAND

Smith, 64, is a difficult man to assess. He can be a subtle politician and he plays his cards close to his chest.

Part of his poker-face look is due to a skin-grafting operation for injuries suffered when he was shot down in the war.

Smith is Rhodesia's first home-born prime minister since the central African colony achieved internal self-government in 1923. His father came from Scotland as a pioneer white emigrant to Rhodesia in 1898.

Smith was born April 8, 1919, at Selukwe, a small farming and mining town. He took an economics degree at Rhodes University in South Africa and enlisted in the RAF in 1941.

He was twice shot down as a Spitfire fighter pilot, first in the North Africa campaign and later over Italy. The second time, after bailing out, he joined Italian partisans and fought the Germans for five months before rejoining the invading Allies in France.

Back in Rhodesia after the war, Smith became a farmer. He still owns a 4,500-acre farm and a 6,000-acre cattle ranch. He also took an interest in politics.

WAS POOR SPEAKER

In 1948 he was elected to the Southern Rhodesian Parliament. But he was a poor speaker and came to prominence only when, in 1961, he walked out as whip of Prime Minister Sir Roy Welensky's Federal party.

Smith was protesting against a new constitution that he felt favored the Negro majority.

With other dissidents, he formed the Rhodesian Front party and it swept to power in 1962. British-born Winston Field became prime minister.

In 1964, Smith replaced Field as prime minister. The 1961 constitution, which ensures white minority rule for an indefinite period, ironically became the cornerstone of his racial policies.

Since then he has repeatedly said that "if we ever have an African majority in this country, we shall have failed in our policy of trying to make a place for the white man."

MANY STRONG TIES

The links between Smith and South Africa are numerous.

Apart from his education there, he married a South African girl, Janet. One of his three children, a 21 - year - old daughter, is a student in South Africa.

And Smith has refused in the past to rule out the possibility of one day resorting to a policy of apartheid, South Africa's racial segregation policy.

"No African (Negro) rule in my lifetime," he once said. "The white man is the master of Rhodesia, has built it and intends to keep it."

A head-on collision with the British government, committed to ensuring ultimate self-rule for the country's 3,800,000 Negroes, was inevitable.

Millionaire farmer Hoss Lilford, who is recognized in Rhodesia as the power behind the Rhodesian Front and Kingmaker, told the party when he advocated Smith as the man to succeed Winston Field: "This man has steel in him."

SELDOM BENDS

Steel has shown in all Smith's political dealings, both within the Front and in international affairs.

It was much in evidence at the last Rhodesian Front congress when party extremists, whose campaign to push Smith into a unilateral declaration of independence had failed miserably in private session, were baying for blood during a debate on a proposed multi-racial teaching hospital in Salisbury.

Smith, with a two - minute verbal spanking in "irresponsible," not only silenced the critics but forced public withdrawal of a hostile motion.

In his spare time, Smith can be seen at plays, at the circus (like Sir Roy Welensky, he loves circuses) and at sporting occasions.

In London Saturday he abandoned everything to watch a rugby match in the London suburb of Twickenham, home of the sport.

He has a daughter, 21, and two sons, 18 and 20. His wife Janet says he is no heavy-handed father laying down the law.

QUIET AT HOME

Said Mrs. Smith: "We all have our own ideas but the ideas of each one are respected. Everyone is able to speak here and will listen to each other. I have never heard Ian swear or seen him lose his temper. He is a very quiet man, not at all a showman, but morally fearless.

"He has been called dour and domineering, and this is all completely wrong. He's a very reasonable man, with a tremendous sense of humor . . . "

Mrs. Smith is a loyal wife. Smith's opponents will go on calling him dour and domineering for a long time yet.

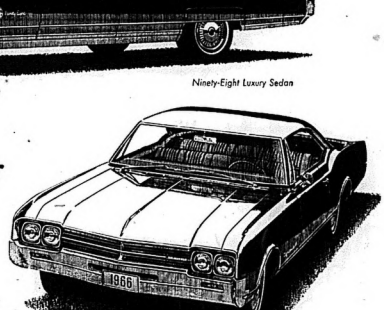
Cutlass Holiday Coupe

Ninety-Eight Luxury Sedan



Dynamic 88 Holiday Coupe

These are the other new Oldsmobiles for 1966...they're luxurious, elegant, exciting, powerful, appealing. And all those things.

They're new. You don't know them yet. But they bring you the best possible references. They're all Oldsmobiles. Which is to say that they're extra-special. Extra-powerful, extra-luxurious, extra-smooth. Improved Rocket engines, teamed with smooth Turbo Hydra-Matic transmissions, are available on all full-sized Oldsmobiles. They offer you new interiors, new style seats and carpeting. And you can get familiar Olds luxuries like air conditioning or totally new features like Automatic Level Control that lets you load 500 pounds of load into the trunk and still ride the way you did empty.

Including, and this is a real revolution, if we do say so ourselves, including today's only full-size front-wheel-drive car. The Toronado. There's never, ever, been one like the Toronado. A 425-cubic-inch Toronado engine pours the power through a re-designed Turbo Hydra-Matic Drive, right to the front wheels. Toronado performs and steers and holds the road like nothing you ever tried before. It's an Oldsmobile. You'll pick out the family likeness right away. We hope you'll take the time to come in and see the new Oldsmobiles, soon.

They're very nice cars and very, very new.

Thanksgiving Services Held In Churches

CAMPBELLFORD — In spite of inclement weather, Thanksgiving services in Campbellford churches were well attended.

Many visitors joined the congregation of the Campbellford Baptist Church at both morning and evening services. The pastor, Rev. B. J. Vanderveen, preached at both services. Both junior and [illegible] choirs joined in the ministry of song. Soloist was Mrs. William Whittaker. Duet parts were taken by Miss Beryl Nicholas and Mrs. William Whittaker. An instrumental duet was given by Mrs. James Richardson and Miss Beryl Nicholas.

In St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church the Thanksgiving theme was "Perspective". The Rev. E. A. Toombs said a standard is needed so that foreshadow and misfortune can be seen in the proper prospective. In the perspective of the cross, it is evident that "to whom much is given much shall be required".

The soloist was Mrs. A. R. Linton of Toronto.

ST. JOHN'S UNITED CHURCH

In St. John's United Church, Rev. D. M. Smith chose as his subject "The Attitude of Gratitude". Soloist for the occasion was Mr. Wayne Symonds. Centennial celebrations for St. John's begin on Sunday, October 17. In the morning the guest minister will be Rev. Kingsley Joblin and in the evening Rev. H. B. Neal, D.D., a former minister will speak.

In Christ Church Anglican, Rev. O. Barrow welcomed the visitors, especially the sons and daughters home for Thanksgiving. Speaker for the service was Rt. M. Gaddard, B.A., L. Th., incumbent of the parish of Apsley. Special music was given by the choir under the direction of Mrs. D. Nicholson.

SPECIAL DECORATIONS

In all the churches special decorations featured the Thanksgiving theme. Fruits and vegetables were displayed in abundance. St. Andrew's Presbyterian was worthy of special mention. Presenting the altar was a large open Bible on a pedestal. In front of the Bible were the elements of communion, beneath these were the fruits and vegetables of the harvest. The idea presented was "that our thanks should be first for the open Bible and the service of communion and secondly for the lesser material things of life.

MR. AND MRS. WAYNE N. GARRISON

Garrison – Chard

Rev. H. M. Beach officiated at the recent wedding ceremony in Frankford United Church, when Marie Gail Chard, daughter in Mr. and Mrs. Murray Chard, Frankford, R.R. 2 was united in marriage to Wayne Noel Garrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Garrison, Corbyville, Ontario.

Traditional wedding music was provided by organist Mrs. Sid Martin who also accompanied the soloist Mrs. Anne Warren in two appropriate selections.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of organza, highlighted with lace appliques. A floor length train of organza and Chantilly lace flowed from the shoulders of the dress. She wore a rhinestone tiara from which flowed a nylon veil and carried a single long stemmed rose.

Miss Pat Evans as maid of honor wore a floor length gown of gold peau de soie enhanced with a lace cummerbund, and matching headpiece. The bridesmaids Miss Jean Chard, sister of the bride and Mrs. Gloria Rits were identically dressed to the maid of honor, but in moss green peau de soie. All attendants carried bouquets of white and gold tinted 'mums. Little Miss Janet Chard, sister of the bride as flower girl wore a white nylon over taffeta dress and carried a basket of yellow and white 'mums. The ringbearer was Master Brian Chard, cousin of the bride who carried the rings on a white satin edged with lace pillow.

Mr. Arnold Rite of Whitby attended the bridegroom and Mr. Richard Garrison of Corbyville and Mr. Floyd Vanvelkenburg of Belleville were the ushers.

For the reception at Rose Lowery Hall, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a beige dress with matching jacket, brown accessories and a corsage of bronze 'mums. The bridegroom's mother assisted and wore a light double knit three-piece dress with black accessories and a corsage of light blue tinted 'mums.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls and points west the bride chose a dark grey tweed suit, red shoes and purse and black hat and a corsage of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrison will reside at 72 Lewis Street, Apt. 2, Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS G. OLIVER

Oliver – Pryde

Elizabeth Penelope Pryde, daughter of Major John M. M. Pryde and Mrs. Pryde of Camp Picton, and Thomas Gary Oliver, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Oliver of Belleville, were united in marriage by Padre McClintock at St. Barbara's Chapel, Camp Picton, on Saturday, October 2, 1965, at 2.30 p.m. Mrs. John Hayter played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white peau de soie cut with Empire lines, loose sleeves and stand-up collar and a chapel train with an organza float falling from the shoulders. Her long lace veil was held with a small wreath of roses, and she carried red roses and lily-of-the-valley.

The maid of honor, Miss Patricia Scrymgeour and the bridesmaids, Miss Daphne Arnaud and Mrs. Karen Norval, were dressed alike in floor length gowns of deep turquoise peau-de-soie with matching blue wedding ring head bands and carried bouquets of miniature yellow 'mums. The flower girls, the Misses Bonnie and Gwennie Pettigrew were dressed in floor length white dotted Swiss frocks with blue peau de soie sashes and wedding ring hair bands. They carried bas kets of mixed flowers.

Mr. Gordon Cameron attended the bridegroom and Mr. William Pringle and Mr. David Pryde ushered the guests.

At the reception held in the Officers' Mess, Camp Picton, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a green dress with matching three-quarter length coat of lace, brown accessories and a feerage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother assisted, dressed in a sapphire blue knit suit with beige accessories and a corsage of bronze 'mums.

For her wedding trip to the United States the bride chose a blue and chartreuse tweed suit with chartreuse and brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

On their return the couple will live at 23 Chatham St.

WEDDING

POLMANTER — LUCAS

A quiet wedding was solemnized recently in College Hill United Church, Belleville when Shirley Elizabeth Lucas of Hamilton (formerly of Belleville), daughter of Mrs. Eldon Salisbury of Belleville and the late Mr. E. Salisbury was united in marriage to George Norman Polmanter of Hamilton, (formerly of Belleville) son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Polmanter of Belleville.

Rev. Roy E. Vessey, minister of the church officiated before a background of colorful 'mums and carnations.

For the wedding the bride was dressed in a street length fawn brocade dress with matching hat and veil, brown accessories and a corsage of carnations and 'mums.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Marion Gushie as matron of honor who wore a sand colored dress with matching coat, brown accessories and a bronze corsage.

Mr. Peter Gushie was groomsman.

A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Brockhurst, Earl Street, Belleville where the bride's mother Mrs. Eldon Salisbury received the guests wearing a floral silk dress, navy accessories and a corsage of 'mums.

Mr. and Mrs. Polmanter spent a few days in this area previous to their return to Hamilton where they will reside.

Church Groups

ST. JOHN W.A.

MADOC — The meeting of the St. John the Baptist W.A. was held in the new Anglican rectory. President Velma Carman was in the chair. Mrs. K. I. Thompson read the scripture lesson and led in the devotions with emphasis on missionaries in India and Pakistan.

Mrs. Mickey Delange read a paper on the work in the Diocese of Moosonee.

It was decided to have an electric stove installed in the kitchen of the parish hall.

As the last mid-day luncheon proved a great success, another luncheon will be held on October 28th. A rummage sale will be held this Saturday.

Members of the branch plan to attend the annual W.A. meeting, held this year at St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD J. LABELLE

Labelle – Angelo

Rose Marie Angelo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Angelo of Trenton and Richard Joseph Labelle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emile Labelle of Belleville, were united in marriage by the Rev. J. A. Appleton in St. Peter-in-Chains Church, Trenton, recently.

Mrs. Marie Rose, organist, accompanied the soloist, Mr. W. Long.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white peau de soie, trimmed with lace and highlighted with a chapel train. Her shoulder length veil was caught to a pillbox headpiece and she carried a crescent bouquet of roses.

Miss Jane Scaletta, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Pat Scaleta and Miss Rosina Scaletta, both cousins of the bride, and Miss Sumanne Baker. They were dressed alike in floor length gowns of blue peau de soie with matching headdresses and carried bouquets of white 'mums. The flower girls, Cheryl Angelo, Labelle, niece of the bridegroom, wore white eleyet cotton dresses with matching head bands, and carried white and blue tinted 'mums.

Mr. James Wesly Fox was the groomsman and the bridegroom's brothers, Mr. Leo Labelle and Mr. Gerald Labelle and his cousin, Mr. Mike Dunley, were ushers.

The reception held at Batawa Recreation Centre, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a beige brocade dress with beige and black accessories and a red rose corsage. The bridegroom's mother assisted, in a turquoise lace over taffeta dress with white and black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Labelle will live at 161-A Albert Street, Belleville.

HOUSES NEED SPRUCING

Dear Susanna: Are you ready for the super wife instead of merely a good one? We all know every good wife does her best to supply the basics of better living — attractive well balanced meals and a smooth-running home front so hubby won't be any more harassed and harried than he already is when he arrives home from work — but the super wife goes even further.

She encourages him to partake of some of the beauty secrets she has worked out over the years for keeping her face young, supple and (relatively) lineless.

In my own case, at first as a gag, I encouraged my husband to work some of my moisturizing cream into his skin at night like I did. He went along as a bit of a joke, but the improvement in the texture and feel of his skin was so startling to him that he soon graduated to using a colorless, greaseless daytime moisturizer as well.

Not only will you be thrilled at how you have helped his appearance, but the type of quiet appreciation you'll receive for your thoughtfulness is not easily come by and is certainly worth going after. — "Well Rewarded"

Too true! So don't keep those wonderful lubricating miracle creams to yourself, girls, it's face is showing signs of the grind too, you know! And if you really aspire to be Queen for a Day, just produce a little of that instant, liquid, wrinkle-eraser under his eyes the next time he's been conducting an all-night sales meeting with the boys and has an early morning date with the boss! — Susanna

SIMMER DOWN

Dear Susanna: In addition to such obvious solutions as opening a window, a quick cool-off assist for your kitchen after a session of baking is to place a large roast pan full of ice cold water in the oven. — Liza

Women's Institutes

SIDNEY SOUTH W.I.

The members of Sidney South Women's Institute were guests of Mrs. Douglas Plumpton for their October meeting on Wednesday evening. Mrs. S. E. Bailey of the Bell Telephone staff attended this meeting and showed a film entitled "The Changing Years" with her interesting commentary. The film is a fine history of the changing way of life since the 1800's. Mrs. G. Sills, while thanking Mrs. Bakay, stated that many of the scenes shown were well remembered by the audience.

During the business period, conducted by Mrs. Douglas Reid, president, a bulletin from the marketing board was read, asking that the consuming public be told that there will be a surplus of eggs and fowl for the homemakers to use this fall.

Mrs. Gerald Grills and Mrs. Fred Meens were appointed to serve tea at the open house at Hastings Manor.

Mrs. W. T. Shortt, public relations officer, stressed the objectives of the Women's Institute. They are: to help women acquire sound and approved practices for greater home efficiency; to help discover, stimulate and develop leaders; to help develop a more abundant life in our communities and a deeper appreciation of the things near at hand and to help develop better, happier and more useful citizens.

Mrs. Plumpton, with her cohostesses Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Aikens and Mrs. Meens, served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Sargent on November 10, with the district president, Mrs. Leslie Finkle, invited to make her annual visit.

Collection Sold for $371,715

NEW YORK (AP) — The jewel collection of the late cosmetic queen, Helena Rubinstein, a tiny, fragile woman who wore large and exotic gems, was sold at public auction Tuesday for $371,715.

Retailers, rather than private collectors, unexpectedly bought the bulk of Madame Rubinstein's colorful collection.

David R. Balogh, of Miami Beach, Fla., representing a syndicate of five retailers, said his group purchased nearly $200,000 of the emerald, ruby, topaz and diamond jewelry.

The most expensive single item among the 187 auctioned was a 70-carat blue sapphire ring purchased by Boston wholesaler S. Sidney de Long for $33,000.

Amy Fisher, of Mademoiselle Magazine, carried off the cheapest souvenir of Madame Rubinstein—a gold and enamel compact, for $85.

Church Groups

CHRIST CHURCH PARISH GUILD

The regular monthly meeting of Christ Church Parish Guild was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Parish Hall.

The business portion of the meeting was in charge of president Mrs. J. M. Cousins, and included reports from various committees. A letter from the church wardens was read outlining needed repairs for the rectory and a meeting will be arranged with members of the Guild and the wardens regarding these matters. A donation will be sent to Camp Hyanto, from the Guild. Thanks were extended to those who looked after the wedding reception in September. The Guild was invited to provide some part of the entertainment for "Variety Night" which will be sponsored by the Chi Rho. Corporate Communion for members will be on Wednesday morning, November 10th. An auction sale will be held at the November meeting and it is hoped that a large amount of members and friends will be present.

Mrs. Horace Wright presented a timely and thoughtful devotional based on "Sanctification Through Silence," stating that "there is too much talk and too little stillness in our worship today."

While the members enjoyed a cup of tea provided by the hostesses, Mrs. W. J. Hinchey and Mrs. G. H. Dimest, they were shown slides taken at the Centennial Tea and at the June meeting and other scenic shots. They also enjoyed hearing a tape sent from Tasmania by Reverend J. H. Smith, former curate of Christ Church.

U.C.W. Meetings

SHANNONVILLE U.C.W.

SHANNONVILLE — The meeting of Shannonville UCW was held in the church hall on Wednesday night with an attendance of 16. The president chaired the meeting.

Group leader Mrs. William Ross took the service of Thanksgiving. Mrs. Ina Westcott read the Scripture and Mrs. K. Juby gave a reading.

A business period followed. Next meeting will be held in the church hall on November 3rd.

A potluck dinner and quilting will be held in the church hall on October 27th.

Turkeys May Be Higher At Christmas

OTTAWA (CP)—Turkey may be more expensive this Christmas than last, the federal agriculture department said Tuesday in its monthly food outlook bulletin.

The price rise results from unusually early marketing, the bulletin said. Until Christmas, turkeys should be in good supply. Up to August of this year, production had increased 20 per cent, and will continue to rise.

The supply of broiler chickens will probably drop. But a drop in prices also is expected since broilers will be competing with turkeys.

The price of beef and pork can be expected to remain firm, in spite of a possible seasonal decline.

Egg production is low at this time of year, and prices can be expected to rise above those of last year by a few cents.

Home and School News

GLEN MILLER

GLEN MILLER — The Glen Miller Home and School Association held the first meeting of the season last Wednesday night with a good attendance. Nominations and elections were held with Mr. J. Bigney taking over the president's position, Mrs. F. Ferguson was elected vice-president; Mrs. K. Noel, secretary; Mrs. W. Dube, treasurer, Mrs. M. Johnston, lunch, and Mr. E. Defauque, program.

Volunteers have been found for donations of cookies and a cold drink for the children who arrive at the school Friday evening, October 29, with their gift boxes of pennies for UNICEF. It is hoped to have movies for the children.

Mr. Refausse introduced the new grade 1 teacher, Mrs. C. King.

After the general meeting the parents met with the teachers in the classrooms. Teachers are: Mrs. C. King, grades 1 and 2; Mrs. M. Sine, grade 2; Mr. E. Refausse, grades 6, 7, and 8.

Budget Just Way to Stop Many Leaks

EDMONTON (CP)—A budget does not necessarily mean a person has to give up things he needs or wants.

"It's just a way of stopping leaks," says James Barber, manager of Consumer Credit Counselling Services Ltd.

"Every family has different needs and desires" so the first thing to do when trying to save money is to watch carefully for a few months to see where it goes.

Then a target can be drawn up for spending in several basic categories, such as food, shelter, clothing, transportation, recreation, and house and personal expenses.

Every budget should be simple and flexible, says Mr. Barber, and it should leave something over for savings.

Budget amounts are approximate, he observes. If you go over the entertainment limit one month, that doesn't mean you're not allowed to go to the theatre next month.

"It's when you worry about spending $23.30 on food instead of $25 that it's doomed to failure."

Knowing your own expenses and having a budget is essential before buying anything on credit, Mr. Barber says. People have money problems when they don't know how much they can afford.

"The important thing is to live within an income until it can be bettered."

CAUSES MOST DEATHS

About half of all deaths nowadays are related to degenerative diseases of the blood, possibly caused by bad diet and exercise.

REQUEST RELISH RECIPES

You are after me for ways of making relish-type pickles from the vegetables that are in plentiful supply now. Specifically you are asking for more cucumber relishes, corn relish and the old favorite Piccalilli. I aim to please. The first recipe is new — Cucumber Marmalade — and is economical and easy for amateurs.

Dinner Menu by Mary Moore

WEDNESDAY

Oven Beef Stew (see Tuesday) on Split Tea Biscuits; Relish Tray; Chutney, Pickled Beets, Spiced Crabapples; Deep Plum Pie; Cheddar Cheese; Coffee.

CUCUMBER MARMALADE:

2 cups chopped or ground cucumbers, 4 cups sugar, 1/3 cup lemon juice — fresh, 2 tablespoons grated lemon rind fresh, ¼ bottle liquid fruit pectin.

Into large saucepan measure the cucumbers, sugar, lemon juice and rind. Stir over high heat and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in pectin at once. Skim off foam and stir for 5 minutes. Pour into sterile jam jars — about 6 medium-size — and cover with clean paraffin, adding a second coating when first is set.

CORN RELISH:

6 cups whole kernel corn, fresh, 1 cup ground green peppers (2), 1 cup ground sweet red peppers (2), 1 cup ground celery, 1 1/3 cups ground onion, 1¼ cups brown sugar, packed, 1 tablespoon mustard seed, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 tablespoon celery seed, 1 tablespoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon turmeric, 3 cups vinegar.

Parboil corn 5 minutes, chill in cold water, cut kernels from cobs. Grind peppers, celery and onions through coarse blade of food chopper. Drain off all excess liquid after measuring. Add to corn in large saucepan along with all remaining ingredients. Simmer for 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Pack into sterile jars and seal.

PICCALILLI (green tomatoes and sweet peppers):

6 cups ground green tomatoes, drained, 2 cups ground green peppers (4) drained, 2 cups ground sweet red peppers (4) drained, 2½ cups vinegar, 2½ cup sugar, 2½ tablespoons salt, 3 tablespoons mixed pickling spices, 1¼ cups vinegar (2nd amount).

Grind vegetables through medium blade of food chopper and drain well before measuring. In large saucepan combine and add the 2½ cups vinegar, heat to boiling, then simmer 30 minutes, stirring frequently. Drain well, and discard liquid. To the drained vegetables add the sugar, salt, spices (tied in bag) and the 1¼ cups vinegar. Heat to boiling and simmer 3 minutes. At once pack into sterile jars and seal. (Yield — about 3 pints.)

TOAST IN OATS

Successful Living

Problem to Keep All Friendships Platonic

DEAR DORIS: My husband has the attitude that there is no difference between men and women; they fall in the category of people, and he should be free to be friends with men and women.

Recently he went sailing with a girl as he could not find a fellow to go with him. I can not swim and believe it is unwise to go until I can. When I stated my ideas about the girl, he could not understand why I would not approve.

He admits that when we were courting he would not have done this. If my feelings are going to be hurt he will not repeat the incident, but he will become anti-social because of it. I do not want him to feel as if he is in a straight-jacket. — WHO IS RIGHT?

DORIS CLARE

DEAR WHO: I enjoy the idea that women are people. Particularly in the realm of careers I would support it.

Trouble is, that in the area of sociability and play, individual pairing off leaves room for sex to rear its head. We still have trouble keeping man-woman companionship platonic. And people do seem to talk!

But if we object to such association, what do we put in their place? The one way you could show you care about his fun would be to sign up for a course in swimming right away, and learn about sailing too. Be in that boat with him every time he pushes off.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am interested in writing poems for songs; but do not know where or how to submit them.

I am a widow with four children trying to help my husband along. Financial difficulties seem to be our only setback. After reading some of the letters you receive I guess we're pretty lucky at that. — SONG WRITER.

DEAR SONG WRITER: It seems the going is tough for the poet who wants to set his creation to music. There are publishers who will do this sort of thing, but they usually want to be paid for their efforts — with little promise of any return.

Getting a song published doesn't mean a thing. Nobody is going to buy a song unless they hear it — and so what you need is someone to perform it. This is the hard part.

A reliable publisher I consulted puts it this way: "I always tell people to go on writing songs for their own enjoyment, but don't count on it and don't spend too much money on it. Their odds are much better at the race track!"

My leaflet on "Part Time Work" may have a more promising suggestion or two, so I will send it to you (and to anyone else writing in for it and enclosing ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am a 15-year-old girl. This Christmas I would like to buy a gift for my hairdresser. He is a Dutchman. Could you please tell me what kind of gift I should get?

I was thinking of getting matching cuff links with a tie clip. Do you think I'm being awfully forward? — CURLY.

DEAR CURLY: Forward? I'm afraid so. Unless he is also your boy friend and takes you on dates.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: Neither I nor my fiance wants a large wedding, but my mother is insisting that I invite every single relative. I'd rather just have my brothers and sisters and leave room for more friends. I can't afford to have too many, and neither can my parents, really. We are sharing the cost. — IN DOUBT.

* * *

DEAR IN DOUBT: Weddings are family affairs; not a young person's private party. Aunt Mary and Uncle Bill knew and cared about you when you were still in your mother's arms; and seeing you married will be a lovely event for them. Something to remember.

Refer to stretch a point and include all the relatives, especially since your mother cares so much and is footing many of the bills. It's the occasion of a lifetime . . . we hope!

* * *

DEAR DORIS: Read your column every day and think it's wonderful. I am 17 years of age and have been going out with this guy for about three years. But the trouble is we go together for a while then break up for about two or three weeks.

Then before we know it I have his ring again. I have had his ring several times and right now he is planning on giving me his black onyx. When we are together we both seem happy. He says he hates to leave me, and when we are broke up he never takes another girl out, although I go out with other boys.

Really, Doris, I think a lot of this guy, but I don't want to be hurt or hurt him. Do you think there is any hope for us? — CONFUSED TEEN-AGER.

* * *

DEAR CONFUSED: Hope? Sure! But not if you black out every time a ring turns up. I'd suggest you take note of what's happening and begin being responsible for your actions.

Wouldn't it be just ducky if you were to find a wedding ring on your finger "before you knew it!"

* * *

(Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

CLUB 4-H NOTES

RIVER VALLEY DREAMERS

STIRLING — Mrs. Gerald Brooks and Mrs. Roy Irven are in charge of the 4-H Girls Club sponsored by River Valley Women's Institute.

The first meeting was held at River Valley School recently with the officers elected as follows: president, Judy Bush, secretary, floating; treasurer, Judy Donohoe and publicity Joyce Carr.

The group chose their record book cover which is to have a color scheme of pale blue and the club name will be the River Valley Dreamers.

All the meetings will be held at the school. At this time the leaders pointed out to the group good rules for entertaining. This included a friendly welcome, good furniture arrangement, neat, useful, comfortable and pleasing color. Floral arrangements add to the beauty of the room. The club members should always remember to introduce their company to all members of their family.

The demonstration part of the meeting centred around various floral arrangements and the girls were to carry out this theme in their home assignment.

SECOND MEET

At the second meeting the president Judy Bush opened the meeting and Joyce Carr read her report and the girls displayed their hostess file.

Mrs. Brooks gave a vivid description along the theme of preparing for a guest and of good behavior when a guest is in another's home.

The demonstration dealt with the correct procedure of packing a weekend bag. The group spent some time writing thank-you notes and these will be placed in their record books.

IVANHOE I-V-ETTES

IVANHOE — The second meeting of the Ivanhoe I-v-ettes was held at the home of Mrs. Harry Benson on Saturday.

Mrs. Ted Pollock gave the home assignments. Mrs. Leavesley demonstrated flower arrangements and made seven bouquets. These consisted of flowers, fruit, grasses and weeds and were most attractive. Mrs. Leavesley was thanked by Irene Pollock.

The Experts Say

Pointed Toes and Slim Heels Are No Longer Fashionable

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP) — Look at your shoes. If they're sharply pointed with thick, slim heels you're out of style.

They have an oval toe, a set-back heel, sprout an eyelet or perhaps a high-riding strap or buckle you're in step.

If the toes are shaved and squarish and the heels low and thick you're avant garde.

This is the fashion picture from experts on Canadian and European shoes. Shorter skirts and textured nylons have accelerated the shift away from the needlepoint toe, they say.

"We're moving into the wider toe and the thicker heel but we're doing it through evolution, not revolution," says Beth Hammond of the Shoe Information Bureau, which represents 20 per cent of the Canadian shoe industry. "We don't want to imitate every shoe in a woman's closet."

Mrs. Hammond says the better-dressed Canadian woman won't wear a pointed toe this season unless it's late day. "Even then it will be a medium toe and not the old pointed toe."

"We haven't bought any high heels for the last three seasons and we have no demand for them," says Max Berlinsky, president of Betty Shoes Inc. "The heavy look is very big. Even in dressy shoes."

UP TO DATE

He concedes, however, that his clientele is not necessarily representative of Canadian women generally. "Our customers read the fashion magazines. We cater to the woman who likes to be first."

Not everyone agrees that the new styles are attractive. Some experts feel the chunky look emanating from Italy and Fashion is dictating the "ugly stil ity's not ladylike.

Fashion is dictatin the "ugly look," says Seymour Lubin of French Shoes Ltd. of Montreal. "But fashion is not always in good taste."

Morty Bronstein, president of Brown's Shoe Shops, says their most popular heel is about two inches. And customers have accepted the wider flat toes.

"In Europe toes are going still wider but they are not accepted on a large scale, even in Montreal."

The shoe people seem to agree that the French are still leading the way in shoe styling. But this doesn't mean you have to buy shoes made in Europe to be in fashion.

"The newest shoe styles are available in Canadian shoes, and Canadian leathers are among the finest in the world in color and quality," says Mrs. Hammond. "Today Canadian shoe manufacturers and retailers travel everywhere for ideas and adapt them to the Canadian market."

IMPORTS MODIFIED

Even imported shoes are likely to be modified for the Canadian market. The dealers here say they buy their European shoes directly from factories in Italy, France and Spain, but not from samples. Changes are suggested in color, the leather or the patterns before they are ordered for sale in Canada.

Asked what the differences are between European-inspired Canadian shoes and European-made shoes that are being adapted to the Canadian market, Mrs. Hammond says:

"Canadian shoes fit better than European shoes. In 95 per cent of the world's nations, shoes are available in only one width and a few sizes but Canadian manufacturers make shoes in nearly 300 different sizes and widths."

The dealers in European imports agree that Canadian shoes fit better but say their customers are more interested in fashion than fit.

"The Canadian shoe is the better one if you are looking for comfort," says Richard Rosenstein, advertising manager of Mayfair Shoe Salon Inc. "The Canadian shoe is designed for the Canadian foot."

But retailers here say they often solve the problem of fit by having the shoes made up in Europe in Canadian sizes and lasts. They maintain the end product is then superior because cheaper labor makes hand craftsmanship and intricate detailing possible at lower prices.

Everyone agreed that the most popular heights in winter boots will be mid-calf or below-calf. The taller boot will still be around—this year with elasticized topliners to keep it closer to the leg. Some will show spat effects, two texture combinations, the quilted look, fake fur or novelty prints.

ROUND TOE REVIVAL—The pointed look is out in the latest fashions in women's shoes. New style trends dictate rounded toes and lower, thicker heels for both dress and casual wear. These Canadian-made casual shoes are (left) a low-cut sandal with double instep straps in pale yellow leather and a variation with a four-eyelet ghillie tie in oyster and black. The experts say Canadian-made shoes offer a much-wider range in sizes and widths than European imports. (CP Photo)

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 3

Most baby-care experts advise against propping the bottle for the baby's feeding. Apart from the warmth, comfort and security you give your baby when you hold him, there are rather nice benefits for you. Feeding time gives your on-the-go body a chance to relax, your feet a rest. Above all, you achieve a special "oneness" with your baby, reward enough for any mother.

* * *

Warming thought. If baby's a dawdler, one of those knitted jackets will help keep the bottle warm longer.

Solid comfort. When your baby is ready for solid food, a world of flavour and nutrition await him (or her) in over sixty wonderful Gerber Strained Foods. Succulent meats and meat dinners. Garden-good vegetables. Tempting fruits and cereal-fruit combinations. Delightful dinners. Delectable desserts. How's-the-baby-pleasing variety! Each Gerber Strained Food is packed in sparkling glass—for your convenience in refrigerating unused portions.

All Gerber Foods are "custom-cooked" for your baby's skin. Each food requires its own special cooking time and temperature to help preserve its precious food values—its colour and flavour as well. For your baby's eating pleasure, Gerber Strained Foods are nice and smooth in texture.

* * *

Serving plans. (1) If you've a two-story house, you'll save many a step by keeping a supply of diapers both upstairs and down. (2) Folding a day's supply of diapers at one time simplifies and speeds the pin-up job.

* * *

Why vitamin C? Doctors specify this vitamin early in infant diet because mother's milk or cow's milk may not provide enough vitamin C (ascorbic acid), a factor in sound gums and other body tissues. Gerber Orange-Apple Drink has added vitamin C, bringing the vitamin level up to that of Gerber Orange Juice, a good natural source. Refreshing in flavour, Gerber Orange-Apple Drink brings smiles at breakfast, lunch or snack-time. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

District Pres. Pays Official Visit to W.I.

RIVER VALLEY — Mrs. S. McIntosh entertained River Valley Women's Institute on Thursday afternoon with 21 members and five visitors in attendance. Mrs. Norma Rosebush and Mrs. Charles Wilson arranged the program and the former presided.

Selections on health were read by Mrs. Roy Bush, Mrs. Percy Usman and Mrs. Vernon Harry. A paper on health, prepared by Mrs. Wilson and read by Mrs. Gerald Brooks, outlined the value of diet, proper rest, fresh air and sunshine.

The hostess played several organ selections.

DISTRICT PRESIDENT SPEAKS

Mrs. Ernest Carr introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Leslie Finkle, president of Hastings West district. She gave a brief history of the Institute organization from its beginnings in February 1897 at Stoney Creek. She said members should accept the challenge of belonging to a worthwhile organization of countrywomen when they join the branch institute. Mrs. Finkle also mentioned the value of good program planning and the responsibilities of each convener.

The convener thanked the speaker and presented her with a gift.

The business resumed with reports given by Mrs. E. Carr and Mrs. J. R. Donohoe.

The province of Alberta was discussed by Mrs. Vernon Harry, Mrs. Roy Tucker and Mrs. Roy Irven. Books, maps, pictures and items of interest were displayed, which gave a glimpse of agriculture and national parks.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen, public relations officer, and the Mrs. Elizabeth Rand of Nova Scotia had been re-elected vice-president of the A.C.W.W. at their recent conference in Dublin, Ireland. As friendship secretary, she read a letter from Mrs. E. Coombs of Abbots Leigh in England.

Mrs. Roy Bush and Mrs. George Heasman spoke briefly on the Tweedsmuir history book.

ADULT COLLEGE DESCRIBED

Mrs. Roy Tucker gave a descriptive account of the college in Ireland for adult education. Since 1954, courses have been held all year round. In 1964, the Girl Guides held a ten-day world conference for leaders with 60 people from different parts of the world present.

Mrs. Claude Tucker and Mrs. Fred McDonell expressed their thanks.

The next meeting will be held on November 4 at the home of Mrs. Ed Heasman and will be centred around the Tweedsmuir history.

An invitation was read to Wellman's W.I. in Hastings North District on the occasion of their 60th anniversary on November 17. Another invitation was received from Seymour East W.I. in Northumberland East District to their annual tea and bazaar on Oct. 16. The Trent Valley Area convention will be held in the Club Canara, Belleville, on Nov. 25 and 26.

The Institute members are entertaining Hastings County Historical Society on Monday evening, October 18, at River Valley school house. Members were asked for suggestions on observing Canada's centennial in 1967.

Mrs. Gerald Brooks spoke briefly on 4-H Club work. There are nine girls enrolled in the new class.

After the lunch committee served refreshments, Mrs. Brooks thanked all who had contributed to the successful afternoon.

Small Boat Exodus Begins From Cuba to Florida Ports

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—The small boat exodus of Cuban refugees sailing across the Florida Straits moved into high gear today.

U.S. Coast Guard patrol ships, tripled in number since the first little exile boats began crossing the choppy Gulf Stream last week, were towing disabled craft, carrying seasick refugees and chasing reports that more boats were on the way.

Dozens of other small boats were in Cuban ports taking on refugees or were heading for Cuba.

The coast guard cutter Cape Darby brought 39 seasick refugees into Key West Tuesday night after four- and five-foot waves threatened to swamp their boats. Most of them were elderly. Some children were aboard also.

The coast guard said it had stopped and warned at least 40 boats leaving the Florida coast that the trip was illegal. Few turned back.

A U.S. welfare department official in Washington estimated that 42,500 refugees will come to Florida before the end of next June.

SEEK SYSTEM

The United States is still negotiating with the Cuban government for a system of orderly movement of exiles.

Meantime, Cuban officials have set up elaborate facilities at Camp Camaroca to handle the refugees.

"There are 12 large buildings and quite a few small ones," reported Jack Batz, shipper of a 44-foot boat, in a marine telephone conversation with The Miami Herald from Camaroca.

"Cuban officials have given us anything we wanted. There has been no harassment. Everything is being handled diplomatically.

Associated Press Correspondent Isaac M. Flores reported from Havana that the average Cuban and foreign observers there have a wide variety of speculative explanations for Prime Minister Fidel Castro's decision to permit the exodus.

Castro said he wanted to reunite Cuban families divided between the United States and Cuba and to demonstrate that the U.S. government and not his regime was responsible for cutting off the refugee traffic earlier.

Explanations advanced by various quarters in Havana include that Castro wants to get rid of dissatisfied elements which does little but put a strain on the Cuban economy, that he is seeking to break the blockade imposed by the Organization of American States, and that he is seeking a propaganda victory.

HIT BY ARTHRITIS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Arthritis costs the U.S. economy more than $1,000,000,000 a year and cripples more in low - income families than in other groups, the U.S. public health service reports. There are estimated 13,000,000 Americans with arthritis.

Officials Tour Crowe Valley Watershed

MARMORA — Reeves and councillors of twelve municipalities in this area, with their wives, enjoyed a bus tour on Thursday which covered the Crowe Valley Watershed. The touring group stopped for lunch at White Pine Lodge at Laudish Lake, west of Bancroft, concluded the day's events with dinner at the Havelock Hotel.

Walter Steenburgh, chairman of the Crowe Valley Conservation Authority, introduced the executive of the CVCA and welcomed the 70 councillors and wives present.

The guest speaker, Mr. T. R. Hilliard, Deputy Minister of Energy and Resources for Ontario, gave his impression of conservation authorities and their place and work in the future. He congratulated the executive for having organized a conservation authority in this area.

"A generation ago," he said "in this province, in Canada, and the U.S.A., there was concern about conservation, but at that time it was soil conservation—the preservation of our soil so that we could fill our stomachs. Today conservation means much more and I think there are many, many people who realize that the conservation of our total natural resources, can be made to work for the benefit of all."

NEW CONSERVATION POLICIES

"The water management program of the conservation authorities has picked up steam and is going ahead beyond our best expectation", Mr. Hilliard continued, "What we see planned under a small reservoir program only 18 months old is a program that is four or five times greater than any undertaken so far. Many things must be done by regions and the conservation authority is a body which has been operating for 20 years in this way. The select committee on conservation authorities set up by the Ontario Government this spring will make a report to the government in the next few months to bring about a new policy and programs that will aid conservation authorities again."

Also addressing the group briefly were the secretary-treasurer of the CVCA, Hamill Cook and Reeves William Shannon of Marmora and E. J. Leeson of Havelock. Mr. Granville Meikle-John, chairman of the educational committee of the CVCA, reports, thanked Mr. Hilliard for his enlightening address.

Ann Landers

Alcoholic Must First Admit His Illness

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read another letter in your column from someone taking you apart because you spoke out against liquor. May I add my two cent's worth?

I teach school in a metropolitan area. Last year I bought shoes for one little tyke who came to school in the dead of winter wearing sneakers with holes in them — and no socks. The boy's father spends most of his pay cheque in the taverns. I went to their home to see the mother and discovered that she is an alcoholic, too.

This is just one youngster, Ann. I could tell you about dozens. For the past 20 years I've seen children come to school ill-clothed, under-fed, nervous and exhausted because they get no sleep. Drunk parents often fight all night long.

ANN LANDERS

I know alcoholism is an illness and you know it, but why doesn't the alcoholic know it? Why must his family pay such a terrible price? — PENN.

DEAR PENN: A characteristic of the alcoholic is his inability to admit it. He will often lie, dissemble and make endless excuses for his drinking. But he won't admit it's a problem. This is why it is useless to threaten or plead with a lush to quit drinking. No one can help him until he is ready to admit that his drinking is out of control. And then he must help himself.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last year my husband decided to retire at the age of 62. Clem said he wanted to get out of the rat-race and live quietly.

Two months of quiet living drove him nuts and me, too. Clem was under my feet all day and behind me in the kitchen telling me how to cook. When we had a chance to buy a four-family flat I was very happy.

After two weeks Clem fired the maintenance man because he wasn't doing anything." Clem said he could handle the job in two hours a day.

Well, I wound up "handling the job" and it was five jobs in one — janitor, plumber, electrician, gardener and TV repairman. Clem is never around when I need him. He plays pinochle with the firemen down the block, goes bowling, to the movies, the ball games and yesterday he bought a skateboard.

I've lost 8 pounds and am on nerve pills. When I complain he says I'm a nag. Help, please. — NUTTY HILDA.

DEAR HILDA: If you continue to do five jobs plus your own work while your husband plays cards and scoots around on a skateboard then you are nutty.

Tell Clem you have your work to do and that the apartment chores are his. Keep track of the phone calls from tenants who need service. Hand the list to Clem and say nothing. When he learns you won't do it — he will.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a woman in my 20's who recently accepted a position travelling for a stationery firm. I love to work but feel inadequate socially.

Several men have invited me to dinner. Is it proper for a man to come to my hotel room to pick me up or should we meet in the lobby? Should we say good night in the lobby or should we see me to my door?

A Memphis man insists on coming to my room. It makes me uncomfortable. I told him how I felt and he said, "It's cornball to meet and say goodnight in the lobby." Is it? — SMALL TOWNER.

DEAR S.: The lobby is the front door of your home. Your hotel room is your bedroom. If you were home would you allow a man to see you to your bedroom door?

Tell the Memphis masher to pick up the house phone and give you a call when he arrives. That's what it's for. And lobby farewells eliminate nocturnal debates.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Son of Gov.-General Vanier Running Hostels for Retarded

By PETER BUCKLEY

TROSLY - BREUIL, France (CP)—The boy they call "Le Rossignol" — The Nightingale — shouted a French pop song as he dried the dinner dishes.

"Je suis a toi pour la vie," went the refrain, "I am yours for life."

He would never understand how appropriate the song was.

The boy's real name is Pierrot. Stocky and homely, with thick glasses and a constant grin, Pierrot is in his early 20s. But he has the mental age and carefree disposition of a child.

Pierrot is mentally retarded. An orphan, he had been shunted until recently from one great, grey French mental institution to another.

The pilgrimage is over now. He has a home "pour la vie" with Jean Vanier, 37-year-old son of Canada's Governor-General.

"They are here for life and we must take the long view," Vanier said as he showed a visitor around the hostel he is organising for the mentally retarded in this ancient northern French village.

'MOST ACCEPT THEM'

"Civilization hasn't learned to accept its mentally retarded. The tendency is to hide away those with the problem, to shut these people behind four metres of stone. Instead, we must accept them and learn to live with them.

"And there is a reward for this. These people can teach us much because of their simplicity and astounding generosity. We (at the hostel) are not here to educate them, but to love them and to learn from them."

"Love" is a frequent word in the Vanier vocabulary, a key-stone in the almost unique environment he has created for his hostel.

The attempt to color all relationships with Christian affection forms a tangible background to the sound, the movement and the touch of the hostel —especially the touch.

Beyond the usual frequent handshakes of rural Europe, there is a constant reaching out by the retarded boys for their guardians and fellow retarded, a search for the reassurance of physical presence.

The boys touch continuously— hands, arms, shoulders, or just a friendly sleeve. The physical touch seems to help overcome the barriers to mental contact. It also speaks movingly about both past lovelessness and present security.

Trosly-Breuil is a curious end to a lengthy pilgrimage for Jean Francois Paul Vanier, second youngest of Governor-General Vanier's five children.

Tall, thin and round-shouldered, he has the long face and prominent nose of the Vaniers. His clothes are baggy and worn. Heavy lines circle his mouth and eyes, the result of frequent wide grins and a habit of frowning deeply while he seeks ideas or the words to frame them.

Vanier has been in various times a Royal Canadian Navy officer, resident of a Dominican monastery near Paris, theologian and university professor. It was, he says, a search for purpose.

Now he is owner and director of L'Arche, a small two-storey stone house named after Noah's Ark on the outskirts of Trosly-Breuil, and director of a larger privately - owned - institution called Val Fleuri nearer the centre of town.

Together the two homes care for about 35 retarded boys and girls, between a staff of about 12 men and women. Many are dedicated amateurs working long hours for pocket money and religious idealism.

Helene were friends or acquaintances of Vanier. Others had only heard of him.

One is a shy young woman from India who formerly studied at McGill University; another is a French - Canadian youth. There are two spirited American girls as well as an Italian gardener.

ACCEPTED BY TOWN

The rest of the staff is French. Several recent recruits are from Trosly - Breuil itself—a sign of greater acceptance of the hostel by the village. Vanier notes—and French residents of neighboring towns provide a handful of part - time volunteer aid.

Five of the retarded boys stay at L'Arche with an equal number of staff. Each adult tries to gain the full confidence of one of the boys, a sort of 24-hour-a-day brother or sister to encourage and help the boy. Vanier's role is akin to that of father, supervising and yet continually available for individual attention.

At Val Fleuri, the atmosphere is slightly more institutional. The bulking grey cement building was taken over several years ago by a group of French parents to give their retarded children better care. Vanier became interested through a friend who was a consulting psychiatrist at Val Fleuri.

Vanier moved here a year ago, buying L'Arche with money saved as philosophy teacher at St. Michael's College of the University of Toronto.

Last spring he also took over direction of Val Fleuri, with its great kitchen and common room, its rows of small bedrooms on the upper two storeys, its line of workshops and its gardens.

LIKED BISHOP

Vanier speaks of the boys with studied affection.

"They attach themselves to people irrespective of function —but very respective of love. They don't care who you are, only what kind of person you are."

He tells of a trip to the Roman Catholic shrine at Lourdes when the boys clustered around the Bishop of Lourdes, speaking to him with the familiar-French "tu" instead of the more formal "vous" and neglecting such niceties as the bended knee and kissing of the episcopal ring.

"They liked him and it didn't matter that he was a bishop."

The boys are also generous with themselves, he said, and their frequent singing, however off-key, is their gift to those around them.

The boys come and go almost at will, wandering in pairs or groups down the quiet paved streets of Trosly-Breuil, shaking hands with the blue-smocked housewives and the old men in their berets.

Much of their day is spent in the workshops or garden or at housework. Some assemble and package parlor games, ceramic tiles and other articles sent by small manufacturers. Some do odd jobs or gardening for village residents. Generally the work must be simple for the boys to grasp it, but for many it is their first chance in life to work constructively.

PRACTISE RELIGION

Since the boys and staff are invariably Catholic, there is a Catholic ethic to the hostel. Religious exercises are encouraged.

Vanier insists the boys' work must take second place to the sense of family at the hostel.

"We take in those who are not able to attain full autonomy in society. I think some of them could work outside eventually in farms or homes, perhaps returning to the hostel at night if necessary, but this is not something we expect. . . .

"We are not here to educate them but to love them. Those who have come here primarily to teach have automatically failed."

The reputation of Vanier's hostel and methods is spreading. Every day he receives requests to admit other retarded, he said, but the two homes are filled now.

The French government provides the homes with an operating allowance, but not enough to pay fully for all the staff and not enough to allow expansion. Friends in Canada are attempting to form a society called Les Amis de L'Arche to find friends of the Ark to attract donations.

If they succeed and if enough volunteers come forward to help, Vanier says, he would like to take over a series of houses to be run like L'Arche at Trosly-Breuil. That done, he says, he would begin similar small communities elsewhere in France.

"The problem is enormous. Here we have only a start."

ORGANIZES HOSTELS FOR RETARDED — Jan Vanier, 37-year-old son of Canada's governor-general, Georges Vanier, is organizing hostels for the mentally retarded in the ancient northern French village of Trosly-Breuil. He is owner and director of L'Arche on the outskirts of Trosly-Breuil and director of a larger privately-owned institution called Val Fleuri near the centre of the town. The two homes care for about 35 retarded boys and young men. (CP Photo)

Federal Health Department Ready to Act to Combat Any Radioactivity Threat

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP)—What would happen if there was a serious contamination accident in some Canadian industry using a nuclear reactor or some other source of radioactive material?

It never has happened and the staff at the health department's radiation protection division hope it never does. But if it should they're prepared to give immediate assist ance wherever it is needed.

"We have someone available to answer a phone on a 24-hour basis," Dr. F. M. Bird, chief of the division, said in an interview.

"Then, if necessary, we can seal off a special section of our building to handle any laboratory work."

The division's building in Ottawa has a specially-designed basement section containing four laboratories that have a separate entrance. The semi-isolation of these labs will allow them to handle an emergency without interfering with regular work.

"Our normal research and monitoring work involves low levels of radiation," Dr. Bird added.

These duties include an extensive film monitoring service to check and record radiation dosages received by persons working with sources of radiation. In addition, daily, weekly and monthly checks are made of fallout and contamination levels in the air, in soil, in food products ranging from milk to meat, and in humans.

WOULD GATHER SAMPLES

Safety precautions make the possibility of contamination accidents remote, but accidents can happen.

"Atomic energy centres such as the Chalk River laboratories (Atomic Energy of Canada Limited) are equipped to handle most accidents which might occur within their own plants," Dr. Bird said.

"But there are a lot of radiation sources in use today, in industry, medicine and research, where such capability does not exist.

"If something should happen in one of these places we can send out a team of inspectors to collect samples to be analyzed in our special lab."

Once the extent of the danger was known, steps could then be taken to eliminate it.

Dr. Bird and his staff stress on-the-spot safety, with a series of booklets listing precautions that should be taken in different types of radiation work. Two already are available and a third is expected shortly.

The division also operates one-week courses in radiation protection, bringing radiation safety people—so far, mostly from industry—to its Ottawa facilities for lectures and practical demonstrations.

"We hope to expand these courses in the future and reach a wider range of people. Then they can go back to their jobs and help train others."

The basic job of the division is protection of the radiation worker and the general public, "and this is going to require a lot of research."

In connection with this, the division has two "whole body counters" that can measure the total amount of radioactivity contained by the human body, as opposed to the film badges which measure only the amount of radiation to which a person is exposed from sources outside the body.

"We've been using the equipment to measure the radioactivity of our own staff just to get some comparison figures. Eskimos and other northern residents exposed to higher levels of fallout could be included in this study.

"When this is complete I hope we can start a program checking persons who have probably been subjected to high contamination levels in the past and at the same time see if any biological changes have occurred which could be correlated with these measurements.

"We're still not positive about the maximum dosage a person can endure without danger. We are working with a big safety factor but it is a case of more research being needed to check the recommended safety figures."

Inventor of Hydraulic Giraffe Comes Up With Down-Under

VANCOUVER (CP) — Inventor Ted Trump, whose hydraulic giraffe is in use in many countries, has followed up with a new machine, called the Down-Under, for cleaning up the holds of bulk-carrying ships.

The first Down-Under has been installed in the Cape Breton Miner, a bulk - carrier owned by Upper Lakes Shipping Co. of Toronto and Mr. Trump says it's faster and safer than the old method of lowering men into the holds to clean up.

An engineering graduate of the University of British Columbia, Ted Trump is already known in 75 countries where his giraffe swings men up utility poles and hauls firemen up to the level of the flames.

The Down-Under clamps to the ship's hatch and stretches into the hold like a human arm. Equipped with joints that give its double boom unlimited maneuverability, it scrapes down the sides and roof of the hold with an attached blade.

The machine can be operated from the hatch frame or a cab next to the hatch. Moved from hold to hold by the ship's crane, the Down-Under can be expanded or contracted to fit between the vertical ribs of the hold where bulk cargo gets trapped.

Mr. Trump invented the giraffe in the early 1930s to speed cherry-picking in B.C.'s Okanagan Valley. It was adapted to other uses and the inventor opened a company at Oliver, B.C. Although much of the production work now is contracted out, 40 men are employed at the Oliver plant and another 15 at a branch in Brampton, Ont.

LEADERS NOT AGREED ON AFRICAN UNITY — Immediate African unity is the aim of Ghana's Kwame Nkrumah (right) but other African leaders, while supporting the principle, urge a go-slow policy. Sir Abubakkar Tafawa Balewa (left) says political union is not the most immediate need in Africa. President Kenneth Kuanda — (second from left) — of Zambia (formerly Northern Rhodesia) says the first steps must be small and realistic. Dream of African Unity Swells to Highest Peak In Breast of Nkrumah

Canadian Press reporter Joseph MacSween talked to African leaders on a 20,000-mile tour of the continent. In this story he describes their feelings about Kwame Nkrumah's demands for immediate steps toward a continental government.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

ACCRA (CP)—African unity is a dream that swells greatest in the breast of Ghana's lonely Kwame Nkrumah.

Other African leaders talk about "realism" and "first things first" when asked about Nkrumah's demands for immediate steps toward a continental government.

But Nkrumah's word on unity are unequivocal.

"Our objective is African unity now. There is no time to waste. We must unite or we perish."

The 56-year-old Ghanaian has staked much on the forthcoming annual meeting of the 36-nation Organization of African Unity.

In a furious burst of energy, big building were added to the Accra skyline to accommodate the prime ministers, president and kings.

But the whole project—even the timing of the conference—was beset by difficulties.

Neighboring French - speaking countries have often accused the Nkrumah regime of subversion and even of inspiring assassination attempts. Upper Volta's President Yameogo said in June he had no intention of attending a meeting in "that slaughterhouse" — Accra.

In accordance with an agreement reached at a preparatory conference of foreign ministers, Ghana removed certain foreign political refugees from Accra. Otherwise some heads of government would have refused to come.

CAUSES RESENTMENT

There is also considerable resentment in some African capitals that Ghana, with a population of 7,000,000 and what is frequently called a dictatorial Marxist regime, should aspire to lead the unity movement.

But Ghanaian planners say Nkrumah has always stressed that the leader of his proposed union would be for the people to choose.

Nkrumah has claimed no more than that the meeting scheduled for Oct. 21 will "bring us nearer to the goal of a unified Africa."

But his long-term hopes are mirrored in the preparations the host country is undertaking.

"We have almost completed on the grounds of the State House a magnificent complex of buildings and other facilities required for the OAU conference," Nkrumah reported proudly.

"The residential part of this complex consists of a 12-storey building of 60 self - contained suites carefully arranged to give maximum comfort. There are also an up-to-date conference hall which can contain 1,000 people and a banquet hall capable of seating nearly 2,000 guests near this residence, both of which are linked by a series of covered ways to the residential office.

"This complex of buildings is centrally air - conditioned. On the same grounds provision has been made for a garage which will accommodate up to 40 cars for the heads of state, and a parking area for over 750 cars.

"Two large fountains operated by 72 jets with multi-colored interplay of lights, and rising to a height of 60 feet when fully turned on, have been installed."

POSTPONED MEETING

The meeting was, first scheduled for Sept. 1, but Ghana pleaded for an Oct. 21 opening because construction was incomplete. This caused a clash with the organizers of a long - proposed Afro - Asian conference in Algiers, already postponed to Nov. 5 because of the overthrow of Algeria's president Ahmed Ben Bella.

Ghanaian workers toiled night and day on the gigantic project. Work-gangs did a high-pressure job of beautifying the roadsides between the big welcoming arch near the Accra airport and the conference site.

Consumer goods became scarce because of economically hard-pressed Ghana's austerity program, began to appear in stores, to the delight of housewives, although it was freely predicted they would vanish again after the conference.

There was published speculation that Ghana, which in 1957 began the march of new independent African countries, surely did not mean the lavish new facilities for a single conference but must intend to offer them use a permanent international headquarters.

A government official contacted in an interview that Ghana, in any case, needed a conference site. It would be up to the heads of state to decide whether the OAU, whose secretariat now is based in Ethiopia, the oldest independent African country, would find a permanent home here.

On the broad question of African unity, I found during a swing through Africa fervent support for the principle but was told by two presidents that its effect realism, not idealism and grandiose ideas, must prevail.

BECOMING REALISTIC

"I think we're all becoming realistic," said President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania in an interview at Dar es Salaam, noting that years ago he proposed delaying his country's independence in the hope of forming an East African federation with Kenya and Uganda.

"I was one of the more unrealistic fellows in Africa, saying we shall delay Tanganyika's independence until the others are ready to become independent together. Extremely idealistic about it.

"Kwame Nkrumah is very idealistic about it but I think we're all learning that there is not going to be a magic word: Let there be unity in Africa. It's not going to be that way. We're going to need a lot of patience, a lot of realism and acceptance of the difficulties of independence, sovereignty, the problems inside our countries. The leaders are going to be more and more involved in their internal problems. . . ."

President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia (formerly Northern Rhodesia) declared in a Lusaka interview:

"To talk of African unity when in a good number of cases the roads . . . on the inside of my country do not go to the neighboring country, to talk of African unity when trade and commerce, all these things, transport and communications, have not even been worked out, I think it is not being realistic. This does not mean we should not campaign for it."

TEACH LANGUAGES

Kaunda urged such things as the teaching of French in schools in former British territories, and English in the schools of former French territories, as a realistic step toward understanding and unity.

A Ghanaian official, however, cited almost the same reasons — particularly communications—to support his contention that political union is necessary.

"It is almost easier to fly to Abijan, the capital of our neighboring country, with a message than to send it by cable," he declared, "Because the Ivory Coast was linked with France, the cable has first to go to London, then to Paris, before coming back to Abijan.

"How can such things be remedied without some sort of political organization?"

Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa, prime finister of Nigeria which at 55,000,000 is the most populous of African countries, said on television:

"Our view is that political union of all the African states is not the most immediate need at the time being. We feel the different African nations should get to know themselves more, to understand themselves and to appreciate the different problems confronting each other.

"It is after this is achieved that possibly there might be a more towards political union."

A. A. Nekyon, Uganda's planning minister, told me in Kampala that interference by the great powers—he hit particularly at the United States—is the greatest enemy of African unity.

"It is not a thing of today, or even of tomorrow," he said. "Personally I would want to see it today but realties must be faced. I think that with the way the foreign powers are interfering in Africa, we have no chance of having an all-Africa government tomorrow.

Then might it come?

"I can't estimate because I can't estimate the spirit with which foreign powers will keep on interfering with Africa—this interference is worse now than it was a few years ago."

Only Few Men Bad Says Prison Doctor

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. W. Harry Hills, 62, has one of the biggest medical practices in Canada—all of it behind bars.

Dr. Hills is the senior physician in Toronto's Don Jail.

A University of Toronto graduate, he began his work in prison institutions nearly 35 years ago. He was interested in the type of people he would find and what he could do for them, he says.

"I've seen hundreds of thousands of men and only a few of them have been bad."

Dr. Hills had a private practice for a brief time before he started work at the Burwash Industrial Farm near Sudbury, Ont.

Five years there, then working with the VD control branch in Toronto and later at the Mercer Reformatory for women in this city, followed by 24 years at the Don Jail, have left no time for private practice.

"Oh, I've treated the neighbors wherever I've lived. No fee, of course, because there's no practice."

A few weeks ago he got his first raise in 20 years, increasing his salary to $5,000 from $2,900 a year.

CHECKS EACH PRISONER

Although he works five days a week usually — far longer than the daily four hours stipulated in his contract—and is on call nights, he is not paid as a full-time physician.

He is the only doctor whom thousands of petty criminals, prostitutes, drug addicts and habitual drunks have seen in years.

Many of them he calls his old friends.

Dr. Hills examines every prisoner brought into the jail—as many as 100 a day.

"When I came here in 1941 there were only 200 prisoners in the house. Now there are 600 and the work has increased far out of proportion."

DRESS IS INFORMAL

He is a familiar figure among prisoners and prison staff as he runs up the stairs on his rounds, usually in baggy pants and a white shirt with his tie loosened at the collar.

To the sick he is kindly and solicitous. He has no time for frauds.

His wife prepares the punishment diet fed to prisoners in solitary confinement.

"Not bad," he says. "Sort of a meat loaf. I eat it to reduce."

Interns Request $300 Monthly Minimum Pay

KINGSTON (CP) — The Canadian Association of Medical Students and Interns has recommended that a country-wide minimum monthly payrate of $300 be established for interns.

The association, holdings its annual convention here, passed a resolution calling on provincial governments to take steps to bring about the higher rate.

Delegates were told that a survey of interns across Canada showed they work an average of 115 hours a week. On the basis of rates varying from $150 to $200 a month, this meant that the average intern earned about 35 cents an hour.

The vote among the 24 delegates representing 4,000 medical students and interns, was 22 to 10 in favor of the resolution.

At the closing session of the general council's two-day meeting, delegates said they were concerned about high drop-out rates in medical and pre-medical courses.

A general council member said medical schools should take decisive steps to improve pre - medical counseling" and try to correct individual student weaknesses, particularly academic ones.

ESCAPES IN BUS

BRUNSWICK, West Germany (Reuters) — An East German refugee crashed across the West German border at the wheel of a bus Saturday while Communist guards blazed away with sub-machine-guns. The bus stopped just over a mile later, and the refugee was taken to hospital with leg injuries, police said.

UNITY FOR AFRICA? — The political union of African states will be a major issue at the meeting in Accra this month of the Organization of African Unity. Work has been going on for months in Accra preparing buildings for meetings and living accommodations for representatives of the 36 member nations. Ghana's Kwame Nkrumah is expected to press for immediate unity. Most of the newly-independent nations are members. Other African leaders favor unity in principle but most are urging a go-slow policy. Uganda Is Land of Strange Contrasts Politicians in Uganda dislike being on the losing side so much that there is a danger all parties opposition in the ruling People's Congress will disappear. A Canadian Press reporter who toured Africa describes political and economic conditions in the country.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

KAMPALA (CP) — Off-beat things abound in Uganda.

You find snow virtually at the equator, crowning the peaks of the fabled Mountains of the Moon.

With luck, you can shoot pictures of big game from the top level of an English two-decker bus.

The lush soil produces plenty of food for everyone but the main health problem is malnutrition.

And although Uganda has a Socialist prime minister and four kings, one of whom is also president, it seems to be edging toward a one-party system.

An attractive land that measures one-quarter the size of British Columbia, one-fifth under water and swamp, Uganda is no stranger to divisions, tribal jealousies and local strife. But it has been a comparative oasis of serenity among troubled neighbors since attaining independence in October, 1962.

It escaped the agonies that preceded independence in Kenya because the white population, now totalling 20,000, never comprised a settler group.

There has never been a color bar, although some persons of British stock now complain of "racial discrimination in reverse"—that whites get the dirty end of the stick.

SET UP PROTECTORATE

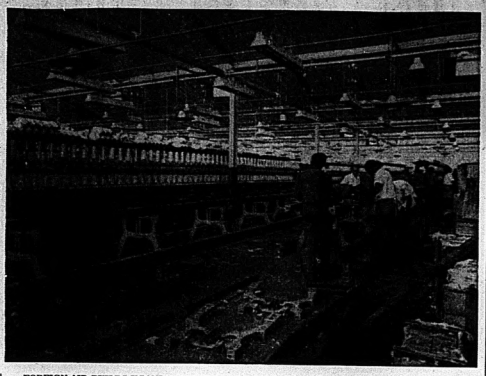
Uganda, admirers say, has always been different. Explorers found highly-organized kingdoms in contrast with the warring tribes of Kenya. The British established here in the 1890s a protectorate, as opposed to the colony in Kenya and this is seen as a reason—psychological or otherwise—for better relations today.

As long as 10 years ago a United Nations study found that the literacy rate here was 40 to 45 per cent higher than any country south of the Sahara except South Africa.

Ignorance, poverty and disease, three ancient enemies, remain, but the 7,030,000 Ugandan in 13 main tribes have been making steady if deliberate progress in the fight against them.

Education officials are quick to acknowledge their debt to mission schools. It was explorer H. M. Stanley (the man who said "Dr. Livingstone, I presume") who first saw the possibilities for preaching the Christian gospel in Uganda.

He wrote a letter to the London Daily Telegraph urging that missionaries be sent. The first Anglican missionaries arrived in 1877 and Roman Catholic White Fathers, whose numbers now include Canadians, reached the area two years later.



FOREIGN AID BUILDS UGANDA COTTON MILL — Africans and Europeans work together to set up a cotton mill in Jinja, Uganda. Canada is helping with aids and skills to help diversify the economy. Uganda is a major producer of cotton and coffee but both are subject to sudden drops in world prices. Another disadvantage is the country's landlocked position in the heart of Africa. (CP Photo)

Yet pre - Christian practices persist and to this day you can buy a bride in Kampala—"place of the impala"—for 700 shillings or so.

You can't be really hungry even in impoverished areas of a land where ant hills grow to eight feet tall and the rich, red earth throws up a vegetation that enables even lazy duffers to pick their living from the trees.

Since Uganda forms a plateau 3,000 or more feet above sea level, it escapes the full blast of equatorial heat and most of the country is deep green practically all year round.

Medical authorities are tackling the cavages of the tsetse fly, the sleeping sickness breeder, malaria and polio. But like main problem, they say, is malnutrition, not because of lack of food but because of unbalanced diet resulting in chronic fatigue.

Canada is helping with aid and skills to diversify the economy of Uganda the biggest coffee producer in the Commonwealth, and also a major producer of cotton and other products subject to sudden drops in world prices.

An economic disadvantage is Uganda's landlocked position at the heart of Africa, with a rail haul of more than 800 miles from Kampala to the nearest seaport, Mombasa, Kenya.

RESIST CHANGE

Perhaps the country's greatest drawback, however, is its dependence on subsistence farming.

M. M. Ngobi, minister of agriculture and co-operatives, explained in an interview how the government extends aid to farmers, including tractors and their mechanization, through co-ops in an effort to change the old-age pattern.

But there is firm resistance to change from the old system of land tenure by which Africans work only two or three acres and often done under the matoke (banana) tree.

"We've increased the per-capita income to £23 from £25 since independence," said Ngobi. "We have 6,000 students in secondary schools now compared with fewer than 1,000 before independence."

Dr. Milton Obote, 40-year-old prime minister, has followed policies that encourage Western industrial development while maintaining a stance of non-alignment between East and West.

Leftist influence may be growing, say some observers, and that may be why Obote this year travelled to Moscow and Peking.

Adeke Nekyon, minister of planning and community development, blamed the United States for Chinese influence in East Africa.

"If all the others kept out like Canada, China won't come," he said. "But if America comes in, directs the cold war, tries to direct Uganda, tries to direct Kenya, tries to direct Tanzania, tries to direct everybody, then why should the Chinese not come?"

RUSSIA HELPS

Uganda has no Chinese technicians, said Nekyon, but he added that there are six Soviet economists in the planning department.

There are reports of dissatisfaction with Obote's leaning, mainly because of flirtations with the Communist world and failure to achieve a federation with Kenya and Tanzania.

But the record of the Uganda People's Congress since independence has been tough on the opposition.

More than 20 opposition members have crossed the floor of the national assembly since the end of 1962, causing one newspaper editor to comment ironically:

"It's a phenomenon of politics here that people don't like being on the losing side."

Even the leader of the opposition became a government minister, and Obote now has a rousing majority in the 90-member assembly.

Some observers say it will be only a matter of time before Uganda goes the way of its East African sister nations, Tanzania and Kenya, and becomes a one - party state.

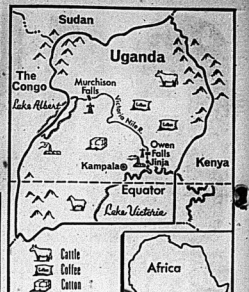
And Obote, while declaring he won't legislate against other parties, admits he would not "regret" their death from "natural causes."

The party named after His Highness of Kabaka (king) Mutesa II of Buganda, hereditary ruler of the largest kingdom in Uganda and president of the country, has been losing adherents to Obote.

Small wonder, then, that the opposition Democratic party, which has no king as titular ruler, also has been losing stalwarts to the governing party.

The federal state includes four autonomous kingdoms, each with its own traditional monarch and regional council, one territory and 11 "administrative districts," all of which add up to a complicated three-tier system that makes Canada's constitutional structure look as simple as A-B-C.

Tomorrow: The struggle . . . against Asian shopkeepers and businessmen.



UGANDA LEADER LOSING OPPOSITION — Dr. Milton Obote, prime minister of Uganda, says he will never legislate against the country's opposition parties, but would not "regret" their deaths from "natural causes." Observers say that opposition members have been crossing the floor to join the government because Ugandans don't like being on the losing side. They add it will be only a matter of time before Uganda becomes a one-party state.—(CP Photo from British Information Services.)

UGANDA MAKING PROGRESS — Since gaining independence in October, 1962, Uganda, a former British protectorate in East Africa has been making steady progress. Although almost on the equator, Uganda's position on a plateau about 3,000 feet above sea level gives it a hot, but bearable climate all year. The country is the largest exporter of coffee in the Commonwealth and is a major producer of cotton. A large part of its population is still nomadic and dependent on live-stock, especially cattle. Industry is increasing, including a Canadian-backed copper smelter at Jinja. On the Victoria Nile hydro-electric stations have been built at Owen's Falls and Murchison Falls. (CP Newsmap)

AFRICAN FARMERS RESIST CHANGE — An African woman uses a primitive hoe to hack the rich, red earth of a small family holding in Uganda. The government is trying to modernize agriculture to break the age-old pattern of subsistence farming but is meeting resistance from African farmers. Large crops grow easily but a major problem is malnutrition caused by an unbalanced diet. (CP Photo)

COLLECTION DAY, THURSDAY

I own a wine cellar
(And we live in an apartment!)

No matter what I whip up for an evening meal, I've a wine on hand to make it mean something. Stew will do—if there's chilled DuBarry Sparkling Vin Rosé on the table. And just taste what Manor Claret can do for hamburgers, Manor Sauterne for fish and chips! And my whole cellar hardly cost the price of a box of good handkerchiefs.

76 Sherry An appetizer wine, most popular in Canada. Serve with hors d'oeuvres, and the soup course.

Manor St. Davids Sauterne Chilled, it does wonders for white meat of any kind—fish, fowl or pork—and salads.

Manor St. Davids Claret Canada's most distinctive "wine of the country". Ideal with steaks, hamburgers, red meat of any kind.

DuBarry Sparkling Vin Rosé An "anytime" wine that's light and tingling on the tongue. Serve before, during and after any meal at all.

Pleasant Gifting Idea

What more pleasant or welcome gift than a cellar of Brights fine Canadian wines? You'll never get a warmer "thank you!".

Says Rhodesian Independence Needed to Restore Confidence And Raise Capital Investment

Premier Ian Smith's demand for immediate independence for white - ruled Rhodesia has been rejected by the British government at meetings in London. The stumbling block was Smith's refusal to accept term recognizing the inevitability of Negro majority rule within the foreseeable future. In this interview with Canadian Press reporter Joseph MacSween, held before the London conference, Smith explains his stand.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

SALISBURY (CP) — Rhodesian independence is necessary to restore confidence and "get our country going," says lantern-jawed Premier Ian Douglas Smith, 46.

"We are satisfied that every day we delay this is a disservice to our country. Everybody is waiting for the finalization of this question before they get on with the development of the country, before they invest their money in the country.

"This applies not only internally but also externally. We've carried out a very exhaustive and intensive investigation into this and we are convinced beyond any shadow of doubt that this is the thing that will bring back confidence and will enable us to get our country going."

That was how Smith replied to a Canadian reporter's question as to why Rhodesia, self-governing since 1923, now recognized a complete break with Britain as an urgent matter.

A man who exudes conviction, Smith spoke with a forthright air in his vast office in Parliament House, where elephant tusks adorn a stairway. Plaster surgery following a wartime plane crash—he was a fighter pilot—adds to his resolute and set expression.

FEDERATION COLLAPSED

Would independence really restore confidence and investment? Smith was asked. Would not people wait to see how independence turned out — whether there might be some trouble or convulsion in the white - supremacist country where there are 4,000,000 Africans and only 220,000 "Europeans?"

"We don't believe so," said the premier. "We believe our record is such that we have managed all along. I mean look at the trouble we have had from people who have been trying to undermine us and who have not succeeded.

"We believe that there would be less chance of them succeeding after independence, not any more, and I think this is shared by all the people who have had experience in Africa. To us the position can only improve."

The surge for independence, accompanied by a lump political swing to the right, grew from the breakup in December, 1963, of the Central African Federation which for ten years linked Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia, now independent Zambia, and Nyasaland, now independent Malawi.

Smith's Rhodesian Front party swept aside all effective white opposition in its rule in an election last May and under the present electoral system—by which in theory a black man could become premier — there are in the 65-seat Parliament 35 so-called African seats, although two are held by non-Africans.

British and Commonwealth insistence that independence be preceded by constitutional guarantees for the African majority brought from Smith his now-famous threat of UDI — unilateral declaration of independence.

SETTLERS WAIT

Elaborating on the reasons for independence, Smith said he encounters people—and "these are good British people"—who want to move here from such African - ruled places as Kenya, Uganda, Zambia and Malawi.

"They speak to us and they say 'this is a lovely country, we would love to stay, but of course we would never do so until we know you had got your independence.'

"You see we are losing out every day, people coming to settle and capital investment and so it is imperative that we finalize this."

Smith confirmed an impression that Rhodesia is drawing closer to South Africa, its neighbor ostracized by much of the world, but subscribing to that country's apartheid, or permanent separation of the races. A non-white could never rule South Africa under existing laws.

But he was noncommittal about whether a sort of white partition is being formed south of the Zambesi River by Rhodesia, South Africa and Portuguese Africa, a bastion against the spread of African nationalism.

"I suppose your guess is as good as mine," said Smith. "At the moment all we are interested in is maintaining civilization here. And we believe that if we let things go we will lose our civilization. But we do not say it would be a white man's civilization. We acknowledge that the black man has his place in this country."

SEES LONG WAIT

To a suggestion that Rhodesian policy is to withhold majority rule from the Africans for as long as possible, the premier replied:

"If 'as long as possible' is associated with the retention of a government in civilized hands, then this is so. We have seen what has happened to countries to the north of us, where power has passed prematurely into the hands of people who are not fit to use it."

Can the period before majority rule be measured in years or decades?

"I do not think so. How long does it take for these people to become civilized? Your guess is as good as mine. I don't think one can start measuring this in years. . . . I believe that if it was to come about in my lifetime that we would have failed in our policy because I cannot see in the short span of my life these people reaching the stage of civilization that we have reached."

How long before African ministers appear in the government?

"It's impossible to say. This depends on when they are prepared to be responsible, to behave and act like ministers. We do not believe we should make a black man a minister just so that we can say we've got a black minister."

TO QUIT COMMONWEALTH

A Rhodesian Front caucus has declared heartily with Smith announced that independence would likely be achieved outside the Commonwealth. Asked if he had weighed the impact of this on a country such as Canada Smith replied:

"We have made it clear on many occasions . . . that as far as the other members of the Commonwealth are concerned we believe we have a lot in common with them and we would be reluctant to break our ties with them.

"But . . . the Commonwealth is getting in the position where the Afro-Asian bloc is becoming the dominant factor . . . and we don't think we have so much in common.

"In fact, I specifically mentioned countries like Tanzania and Ghana, countries which openly espouse communism and moreover countries which we know, we have proof, are training our own people as saboteurs to come back here and subvert the country, to kill people and so on.

"It is the sort of thing I had in mind and of course all my colleagues had in mind when they rejected as this was a mere."

Many world leaders have spoken with dismay of Rhodesia's racial policies. Is it likely that Rhodesia is right and the rest of the world wrong?

"Maybe some of them can't do so but they condemn us in ignorance because they believe, they often associate, our policy with the policy of South Africa, but this is not so.

"Ours is a perfectly fair policy—fair to everybody—and people are judged on merit. We know our parliament here, any African can come in if he wants to. Africans can gain access to the voters' roll.

"As far as our civil service is concerned, we have African doctors and teachers come in and start on exactly the same salary as the Europeans—$2,000 a year and this sort of thing—the Canadian Government would not ask us to push people ahead because they have a black skin.

"This is what some people in the outside world want us to do. We say they (the Africans) can go ahead but we believe they must have the same ability as the Europeans. So I don't think there is this concern in the world, quite frankly."

LOOKS TO SOUTH

"We are not trying to bind ourselves to the obvious, that there are racial differences. I believe there is more racial animosity in certain parts of Britain and many parts of the United States today than there is in Rhodesia."

After stating his belief that Rhodesia is drawing closer to South Africa, the premier added: "We always have very close, very good relations right across the board. We always have been very close. They have been in a tight corner or in friends of ours. Whenever we have been in tight corner or in trouble they have supported us in our help—talking mainly economically now—but you must remember that for 50 years or so, we were fellow members of the Commonwealth."

Some observers say the real reason for Rhodesia's right-ward swing, and its tough line on racial matters, is the economic success enjoyed by South Africa despite world criticism. Smith commented:

"We are satisfied that the political climate is responsible for the resurgence in confidence . . . and that the world wishes to be assured that we are going to maintain standards and that we are not going to be a party to a rapid hand-over to people who are not fit to govern."

CAN RHODESIA BE SURE

Can Rhodesia be sure South Africa would be a loyal ally when their racial policies differ?

"I believe South Africa's policy is that they don't interfere in the internal affairs of other countries and I think South Africa will continue to be the good friends of ours, irrespective of what our internal policies are."

REMAINED A FRIEND

South Africa had remained a good friend of Rhodesia during the years of the Central African Federation when "we turned our backs on South Africa virtually and looked toward the north."

How could South Africa find it possible to support UDI, generally regarded as illegal under the constitution?

The question should be put to South Africa, said Smith, but added:

"This is a controversial thing. I suppose in the strict letter of the law it may be termed unconstitutional, but we believe we can prove . . . promises from the British government to back us this. In the event of somebody not honoring obligations, what do you do about it? I just make a contract which is a legal and binding contract with somebody and he doesn't fulfil it and you take matters into your own hands, is this really illegal action?

The story, said Smith, goes back to 1923 when the British government offered other territories independence or union with South Africa.

"This is tantamount to giving us independence, isn't it? Telling us, make up your own mind in the country."

"So we voted against going in with South Africa—if we had, look where we would have been today."

PREFERRED TO WAIT

Rhodesia decided then to become a self-governing colony which Smith described as a "unique category" in the Commonwealth, leaving London in charge of external affairs.

Britain again offered independence in the aftermath of World War because "they were very impressed with the effort this country had made."

Sir Godfrey Huggins, then premier, thought it was better to wait until the end of the war and subsequently the idea of the Central African Federation was raised, pushing independence into the background.

Huggins announced in 1952: "I have been offered by the British government independence for Rhodesia or federation but you can't have both. You can have one or the other."

The Federation broke up in 1963, Smith recalled, "so we reverted to the British government. All right, now, thanks, we will have the other part of the bargain that you offered us originally."

"Could anything be more logical than that . . . ?

"Oh no, times have changed," they said."

Soviet Union May Publish Dr. Zhivago

By JOHN BEST

MOSCOW (CP)—There is growing possibility that Boris Pasternak's controversial novel Doctor Zhivago will be published in the Soviet Union next year.

Such a development would be immensely significant in the struggle by Soviet intelligentsia for greater freedom of expression.

Pasternak won the Nobel Prize in 1958 for Doctor Zhivago, whose plot is based on the Russian revolution and civil war. However, he was forced to reject the prize under pressure from Nikita Khrushchev who considered the novel anti-Communist.

Pasternak died in 1960 still in official disgrace. His book has been published abroad but never in the U.S.S.R.

Reports that it now may be issued have been going around for several months. Recently they gained new impetus with publication of a large volume of Pasternak's verse, the first to be brought out since the government denounced him seven years ago.

The volume was published in Leningrad and became a collector's item, the limited edition selling out within hours. Another is due to be released shortly by a Moscow publishing house and it is expected to include some verses from Doctor Zhivago originally planned for inclusion in the Leningrad edition.

Release of the two volumes means Pasternak's rehabilitation as a poet, the field in which he gained renown long before turning to fiction.

POEM LAUDED

The magazine Yunost (Youth) recently carried a previously-published Pasternak poem entitled August reflecting the mistery he felt over the events of 1958. A long, laudatory preface was written by novelist Chekovsky, poet and literary critic who was a close friend.

Both underscored relatives of Pasternak, with support from some members of the influential Soviet Writers Union, have been pressing to have publication of the poems followed by publication of the novel.

One report has it that Soviet authorities have given them an undertaking in this effect. The issue still appears in some doubt, with powerful elements in the writers' union and government opposing publication. But many observers believe the pro-Pasternak forces are bound to succeed eventually.

Many have a belief on what they feel to be a gradual loosening of government and party domination of the media. Artists themselves are steadily pressing for removal of fetters on free expression.

Alexei Rumyantsev, editor of the party newspaper Pravda, recently wrote a series of articles condemning efforts to subject literature to "mechanical levelling and domination of the majority over the minority."

"Under such conditions it is necessary to ensure greater scope for personal initiative, individual dispositions, for thought and fantasy, form and content."

While supporting party "guidance" in literature, he said it was it should not be used to cloak "rude administration by fiat in artistic life and categoric abolitionist opinions as to one or another writer and his work."

MAIL POISON

ATTLEBORO, Mass. (AP) — At least seven city officials, including Mayor Cyril K. Brenn, have received what police described as a poisonous powder through the mail. The substance, in small brown packets, was inside large white envelopes with this note: "Unjust taxes. Your part. Your share."

Commonwealth Emigration Boom!

Britons Bid Blighty Bye-bye

LONDON (Reuters) — British exports—of Britons—are booming.

Emigration figures show that Australia is selling records in attracting settlers from Britain, and there is an upswing in the number of Britons leaving here for a new life in the other two older Commonwealth countries Canada and New Zealand.

The welfare of political and social controversy over the entry into Britain of colored immigrants from the Commonwealth—the majority of them from Pakistan, India and the West Indies—has almost obscured the fact that more than twice as many Britons are leaving.

In 1963, after the Commonwealth Immigrants Act clamped restrictions on entry, a total of 130 (130) for each adult to travel by ship or air if he agrees to remain two years. About 47,000 Britons took advantage of this plan in 1962 and last year the number rose to about 65,000. Another 10,000 paid their own fares out.

Canada also is reporting an increase in the number of Britons arriving. The numbers have been steadily increasing since 1961. Last year about 170,000 Britons went to live there, compared with slightly less than 25,000 in 1961.

The Canadian authorities here report a significant increase in the number of inquiries received from would - be emigrants, and expect the 1964 total to be exceeded by several thousand this year.

American Military Power, Mainly Air Power, Turns Tide in Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (CP) — Sheer American military power—mainly air power—has turned the tide in Viet Nam. But if a battle has been won, victory in the war remains elusive.

What happens next depends on the Viet Cong insurgents and Communist North Viet Nam, still expressing determination to fight on for 20 years if necessary.

It seemb clear that the fight in South Viet Nam, a country threatened as recently as July with being cut in two in the hilly central highlands, must revert back to operations on a smaller scale for the Viet Cong. It is a different war now, better suited to the old Viet Cong techniques of hit-and-run, terrorism, political agitation and the rest.

Bernard Fall, a French academic here whose experience in Viet Nam extends to the last days of the French regime in 1954, returned recently from a personal look at the battered south and reports in the weekly publication New Republic.

"The immense influx of American manpower (not except counting 20,000 advisers) and the ruthless use of the latter, have made the South Viet Nam war, in the short run, militarily 'unfeasible'."

He adds: "What changed the course of the Viet Nam war was not the decision to bomb North Viet Nam: not the decision to send American ground troops in South Viet Nam; but the decision to waze unlimited aerial warfare inside the country at the price of literally pounding the place to pieces."

American planes have flown more than 20,000 missions since February, 1965, over the Communist north alone. The activity in the south, robbing the Viet Cong of security day and night, has been much higher.

Reports here, based on the occasional Japanese or other traveller to the north and the capital of Hanoi, indicate heavy damage, even including some non-military targets although U.S. officials deny that agriculture, for example, now is being struck.

Agriculture rather than industry is the most vulnerable chink in North Viet Nam because compared with the south, the north is a poor producer of rice and other food.

Newsweek magazine says there is evidence that American bombs have fallen on a few targets in the vital dam-and-dike network of North Viet Nam's Red River Delta where a wholesale assault would cause widespread flooding and crop havoc.

BOMB, RAIL LINKS

More recently, tied in with heavier American plane losses, have come indications that U.S. bombs are being directed at the most vital of the two rail links down from Hanoi connects the capital 90 miles away with the Chinese border in the northeast and loss of this link would really hinch, it is assumed.

Thus, the American bombing of the north has come a long way from the first strikes last winter near the 17th parallel dividing the two Viet Nams.

However, there is some concern here about the long-range psychological cost of the barrage of bombs, some even napalm falling on the Viet Cong on the south and on the interned Chinese civilian population as well.

Sharp increases in Viet Cong defections testify to the impact on their morale, but it is tied in with similar movements of refugees seeking to escape.

Canada Ready To Help U.K. In Rhodesia

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is prepared to apply economic sanctions against Rhodesia in concert with Britain and other Commonwealth nations if Rhodesia declares itself independent before majority rule, informed sources said Tuesday.

In the post - war years at least, Canada has not looked on economic sanctions against any with any particular favor.

Readiness now to apply such measures illustrates the government's serious view of the Rhodesian situation, a problem which has had almost constant attention in the external affairs department for nearly three years.

The problem is looked on here almost entirely as a racial one. The white government of Rhodesia, representing about 230,000 whites, has so far strangled the voice of 4,000,000 blacks.

Prime Minister Pearson has declared that majority rule—one man, one vote, regardless of color—must prevail in Rhodesia before it can become completely independent" from Britain.

Sources said that failure by Canada to do what it could to back this declaration would be looked upon by whites everywhere, not only in Rhodesia, as betrayal.

Mr. Pearson said more than a year ago Canada would not recognize Rhodesia as an independent country on the latter's own say-so unless majority rule was instituted. He repeated this Monday.

It is believed here Mr. Pearson would be willing to participate in a Commonwealth prime ministers' mission to try to solve the Rhodesian crisis as proposed by Prime Minister Wilson.

Lesage Opens GM Assembly Plant in Quebec

By MICHAEL BLAIR

STE. THERESE DE BLAINVILLE, Que. (CP) — Quebec's first automobile assembly plant involving an investment of $60,000,000 by General Motors of Canada Ltd., was officially opened Tuesday by Premier Lesage.

Mr. Lesage said one of the most important aspects of the 1,000,000 - square - foot plant, which will manufacture both Pontiac and Chevrolet four-door sedans, is that it will draw manufacturers of auto parts to Quebec.

"For example, during the first year of operation, 15 to 18 manufacturers have announced their intention to establish in Quebec," he said during a speech at the plant here, 20 miles north of Montreal.

Many of the major industries to be attracted by the GM plant and a smaller $3,500,000 assembly plant for Renault, Renault and Peugeot cars at St. Bruno, Que., which will open next year, $14,000,000 factory for Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. of Canada at Joliette, Que.

'NOT BY CHANCE'

Mr. Lesage said the construction of a GM plant in Quebec was not a matter of chance, but was "induced by a number of concurrent factors which rendered this important decision easier to reach."

He said there is a prosperous market, the rapid growth of Quebec was another factor.

Mr. Lesage attributed the growth to "real investments" in Quebec since 1961 totalling more than $2,000,000,000. This increased employment by 1.54 per cent, personal income by 28 per cent and manufactured products by 31 per cent, he said.

He toured the plant, which now employs 800 persons. It will employ some 1,100 by mid-November. About 100 employees are from Oshawa, training local workers.

The plant is making about 200 cars a week on a one-shift, five-day-week operation. This is expected to increase to 100 cars a day when a full staff is working and the men, largely unskilled, are trained.

The plant is currently nonunion but the United Auto Workers union (CLC) is organizing workers.

SIMILAR TO OSHAWA

An official said the layout is similar to the main GM plant at Oshawa, with a similar degree of automation—"as high as presently feasible in the production line."

Company projections call for production of 39,000 cars a year, eventually increasing to around 80,000 if the plant goes into a two-shift basis late next year.

All materials now used in assembly will be from GM production centres in Ontario and the United States.

The official said the cars will be sold in Canada and that exports to the U.S. are "not under consideration at present."

Overseas exports will still be handled by the Oshawa plant, he said.

E. H. Walker, president and general manager of General Motors, said however that the plant here probably will share in the growth of the North American market.

Senior Noteholders Meeting Stiff Opposition in Court

TORONTO (CP)—Efforts of senior noteholders to obtain Ontario Supreme Court approval for a deal to dispose of most receivable accounts of the bankrupt Atlantic Acceptance Corp. has met with early opposition.

The proposal, put forth at Supreme Court hearings which opened Tuesday, was attacked by subordinated noteholders who claim it will leave them almost no chance of recovering their investments.

The hearings continued today before Mr. Justice W. D. Parker with more testimony from J. G. Haxton, who spent the entire day Tuesday explaining the moves and counter moves that followed the company's default last June 17 of some major, short-term debts.

Mr. Haxton is vice-president of Montreal Trust Co., the receiver - manager for Atlantic since the default.

The dual roles during the hearing of Montreal Trust as trustee for the three concerned parties and Atlantic's receiver-general was disputed.

CAN'T RECONCILE

Mr. Justice Parker said he would hear legal arguments on the roles played by the Montreal firm later in the hearing. Counsel for subordinated noteholders said the trust company roles were impossible to reconcile.

Senior noteholders accepted a proposal Sept. 17 from General Acceptance Corp. of Allentown, Pa. to collect Atlantic's personal loans and sales finance. Mr. Haxton estimated that the proposal could mean $76,000,000 would be available for senior noteholders.

With other assets, that would just about meet senior noteholder claims of $80,000,000, but would leave little, if any, recovery for minority and other creditors with claims totalling $29,000,000.

When Atlantic's default became known, it showed assets of $145,800,000, although investigations ordered by Montreal Trust revealed an estimated realizable value of only $103,000,000.

Search Spreads To North of Quebec City

QUEBEC (CP)—The search for persons believed murdered by members of a Quebec arson ring will spread this week to the Lake St. John region north of Quebec City, a Quebec Provincial Police officer said Tuesday.

Police will seek to recover the body of Maurice Garneau who disappeared in 1957 and who is thought to have been the first of seven persons known killed in an underworld purge, said the officer.

Up to now, the QPP search for the gangland victims has been restricted to the Montreal, Quebec City and Eastern Townships regions. Lake St. John is some 220 miles north of Quebec City.

Police, who have already uncovered four bodies, are conducting their search accompanied by a handcuffed man.

Tuesday, police sought the body of Paul Nadeau in the St. Nicolas region, near Quebec City, and that of Maurice Gagras near St. Ferdinand in the Eastern Townships.

Four of the victims disappeared between May and the end of September of this year while Gingras disappeared in 1963 and Nadeau has been sought since 1956.

All the bodies uncovered so far were covered with quicklime, apparently to make identification difficult.

No date has yet been set for coroner's inquests into the murders. A spokesman for the Quebec justice department said Tuesday that the department was not yet ready, to proceed.

CARDINAL RESTING

BOSTON (AP)—Richard Cardinal Cushing, 70, rested at his residence following surgery for removal of a growth on his neck. The 90-minute operation was performed Tuesday by the prelate's personal physician, Dr. James Doonan. The Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston told reporters last week that his collar irritated the growth and caused discomfort.

Quick Support Given Britain Over Rhodesia

LONDON (Reuters) — Quick support was understood to have come today from Canada, Australia and New Zealand for British Prime Minister Wilson's proposal that Commonwealth prime ministers try to solve the Rhodesian crisis.

In other early Commonwealth reaction to Tuesday night's proposal, Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman was opposed.

Wilson said in a radio-TV broadcast he had been in touch with Commonwealth leaders, seeking establishment of a mission of senior prime ministers following abortive London talks on independence with Ian Smith, premier of the white-ruled colony.

Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson declined immediate comment but observers said he would be willing to take part in Wilson's project. He was understood to have assured Wilson of Canada's support for any move which would help settle the problem.

"The suggestion has my full support," New Zealand Prime Minister Keith Holyoake said in Wellington.

Australian Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies, with whom Wilson conferred by telephone before making his broadcast, was understood to be in support.

But in Kuala Lumpur, Rahman told reporters it was up to Britain alone to settle the crisis.

We know Rhodesia is still a colony of Britain," he said. "If there is a rebellion, Britain must settle it. It is for Britain to act."

PRINT BOGUS BILLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. secret service reports some $2,364,000 in counterfeit currency was printed in fiscal 1965 and about 75 per cent of it was recovered before circulation. The service also reported Tuesday that 723 persons were arrested on counterfeiting charges.

COPENHAGEN (AP)—Prince Masahito Hitachi, youngest son of Japanese Emperor Hirohito, and his wife arrived in Denmark Wednesday for a three-day visit. The royal couple will spend six weeks touring Europe.

Socred Platform

TORONTO (CP) — Following are the 10 planks in the Social Credit Party campaign platform announced Tuesday by Robert Thompson:

1. Responsible government —positive, responsible representation in a Parliament that will concern itself primarily with national and international affairs.

2. National interests—placing the country's interests above party considerations, including respect for the voting choice of the makeup of parliament.

2. Policies and principles—preserving the democratic structure by opposition centralization and the drift to socialism, increase efficiency of government services by eliminating waste, red tape and duplication.

4. Federal-provincial co-operation — the federal Parliament to work with provincial governments in a spirit of co-operation to expand the growth and economy of the provinces.

5. Financial reforms — major financial reforms will be advocated, giving the Bank of Canada power to provide public capital, thus reducing interest charges and releasing private capital to expand reproree development.

6. Health services—support an adequate health care program on an individual voluntary basis, ensuring this service will be available to every individual and to include mental health and tuberculosis care in the hospital coverages

7. Education and training program — support greater federal financial contributions to the provinces for universities and vocational training.

8. Development of natural resources — encourage competitive free enterprise, initiative and maximum Canadian investment in the development and processing of Can ada resources by reducing or eliminating those forms of taxation which retard or penalize development.

9. Agriculture and markets — promote expansion of export markets for agricultural production, including a two-price system for wheat, providing parity price for domestic consumption and negotiated prices for surpluses.

10. Labor — the establishment of adequate fact-finding and mediation facilities to aid in resolving labor disputes.

Cape Breton Politicians Talk Steel, Coal Economy

By ED SMITH

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — The rise and fall of the coal and steel economy has been broadand-butter talk for Cape Breton politicians since the beginning of the century.

One variation that should come through loud and strong from Cape Breton South platforms before the Nov. 8 federal election will be the cry for more new industry.

Area Canada's second biggest riding after Halifax proudly proclaims itself as the industrial heart of the Maritimes. Some major diversification has come lately in the form of such projects as a $30,000,000 heavy water plant in Glace Bay, but constituents and candidates alike feel the heartbeat needs much more perking up.

How and where to administer the stimulant to counteract the sickness appear to be the factors on which candidates may disagree most.

Donald MacInnis, 47, who left his coal miner's job in Glace Bay in 1957 to end the 16-year reign of the CCF's late Clarie Gillis, has been the only one to survive successive Conservatives for most of the time since.

He was defeated by the NDP's Malcolm MacInnis in 1962 but turned the tables in 1963 with a 900-vote margin over the same NDP candidate.

SEEKS INCENTIVES

Donald MacInnis is a staunch drum-beater for more assistance to the area's coal mining and wants more incentives for new industry.

New Democratic Party supporters, this time backing Sydney alderman Ed Johnston, 41, feel it wasn't any swing of the vote to Conservative or Liberal that beat their man April 8, 1963.

A steelworker, and for the last two years Canadian Labor Congress general representative for eastern Nova Scotia, Mr. Johnston says: "A monstrous hit us around 4 p.m. on that day just as the workers were coming off shift. Normally, they would go home, wash up, have supper and go to the polling booths. Many didn't vote."

It is the six-foot six-inch labor leader's first try at federal politics.

Joseph E. MacEachern, 42, a Sydney accountant and partime lecturer at Xavier College here, is making his second bid as Liberal candidate.

Running third by a third-place finish in 1963 as the fact that the constituency hasn't voted Liberal since 1953 in a by-election, he points to progress and diversification already made in the last few years and wonders "whether the people want to go back to a state of unemployment."

Vote figures in 1963 were: Donald MacInnis 14,307, MacInnis Macleods 13,227, Mr. MacEachern 9,184.

"Boss," commented Muskmouth, "the secretiveness of the Dodgers' unsublimated success in winning three straight from the guys from the tundras of Minnesota, after losing a brace of openers, is they're home bodies, don't like to eat foreign fare, and have no blood that congealates at temperatures below 60 degrees."

"Add to this they have more secret weapons than one of James Bond's gimmy-gagadgetses, and more hidden talents than the front row of a sultan's harem."

The Minnesopolis smorgasbords and polar bear steaks smothered with walrus scales, didn't sit well on Dodger stomachs. The hamhocks and saurkraut got the push-back especially by Koufax.

The northern air chilled by the frosty glare of the northern lights had a blood-thickening effect particularly on the famous flippers of Koufax and Drysdale. By the time they had warmed up they were out of the game and the northern steppes echoed with the delighted hurrahs of Little Scandinavia.

Then they lightalled it out of the American League refrigerator into the warm sunny smog-shrouded air of Chaves Stadium and home.

Here was the club that had lived up to pre-game predictions on the part of most of the experts. All they had was pitching, flashes of speed, with a plate potency average that would scarcely reach three digits.

The aces, Koufax and Drysdale, had been trumped by the ramboundball Twins. All they had left was Osteen, whose main claim to fame was he had defeated Minnesota five times without a loss, their speed and fielding prowess.

To all intents and purposes the Dodgers were a beaten club. The outlook was darker than the inside of a whale. If the Twins could defeat Osteen, it was just a matter of ordering the flowers and naming the pallbearers.

But they hadn't reckoned with a couple of California steaks, the soft breezes soughing in from the Pacific, the warm mood-arousing air and the familiar roar of the hometown crowd.

They shot the virus of victory into the hitherto sluggish bloodstreams of the team whose ancestors formed the nucleus of Custer's brigade in Montana.

Even the most rabid fans couldn't believe their eyes as the Dodgers, digging to the uttermost depths of their warbags, came up and batted with a savagery that stunned the club's top brass.

Their speedometers zoomed as Wills and Davis proved themselves the greatest base larcenists in world series history. The infield clicked with the accuracy of a watch.

The thin blood warmed by the California sunshine loosened the arms of their mound aces. Osteen clicked, Drysdale was smiling as he whiffed 11 Twins. Sandy Koufax, back in form, hung a horse collar on the bobbling Minnesotans.

Back in Minnesota the deer and moose stood still to be shot by hunters. Hunters stood still to be shot by other hunters. The northern lights went out, shortcircuited by the tremendous jolt from the west coast.

The sheer savagery of the Dodger attack and the brilliancy of their defense willed the proud Twins in their tracks. Grant and Kaat were chased early. The defense fumbled and bobbled. True, most of the breaks went against them.

Today in Minneapolis the faithful were asking, "Will the real Minnesota Twins stand up?"

It could be all over by the time this edition lands on the porch. The Twins faced their mound nemesis, Osteen, this afternoon. The victory-chanted Dodgers smell blood and the extra two grand that goes to the series winners.

The Twins if they regain normalcy can win it with the home-town environment in their favor. Quien sabe?

Had Cold, Bad Knees ★★★★★

Grant Carried Twins' Hopes Today

★★★★★ Faced 'Nemesis' Osteen

By JOE REICHLER

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Twins' hopes of extending the World Series into a seventh game with Los Angeles Dodgers rested today with a tired pitcher who has a headache, a nagging cold and protesting knees.

"My head feels like a balloon, my cold's no better and my knees are bothering me," said Jim Grant, manager Sam Mele's desperation starter, who lasted five innings in a losing effort against the Dodgers just three days ago.

"Otherwise, I'm all right," added the strong-armed righthander, set to make his third series start in eight days. He defeated the Dogers 8-1 in the opener last Wednesday.

Claude Osteen, Grant's mound rival for the sixth game, hasn't pitched since Saturday when he shot out the Twins 5-0. That got the Dodgers off to a three-game sweep at Chaves Ravine which boosted the National League champions to a 3-2 edge in the series.

Should the Twins bounce back and defeat their left-handed nemesis, southpaw Jim Kaat will pitch the seventh and final game for Minnesota Thursday. Dodger manager Walter Alston probably will start Don Drysdale, his right-handed ace, who has split two series decisions with the Twins.

Osteen, who defeated the Twins five times without a loss as an American Leaguer before he came to the Dodgers, said he planned no change in his pitching strategy despite the difference in parks.

'KEEP BALL LOW'

"I'll just try to keep the ball low," he said. "That's the way I got them out in Los Angeles."

Grant said he didn't think pitching with just one good control would tire him. He recalled that once during the season he pitched with two days' rest and won.

The 29-year-old hurler has been bothered by a lingering cold but what worries him most are his knees, which have been giving him some trouble for the last month.

"It's tendonitis," Grant said. "I intend to have a thorough examination of the knees once the series is over. It happens every year, late in the season. The knees get awfully tired. I usually get a rest when this happens but I couldn't afford one this year."

Grant, who has beaten and been beaten by the Dodgers, said he doesn't think they are as tough to pitch to as some clubs in the American League.

"But they're tough once they hit the ball on the ground," he admitted. "You can't afford to make any mistakes or take time out to relax."

Mele said he picked Grant over rookie Jim Merritt because: "He's been my best pitcher all year."

"I told him to throw as hard as he could and go as far as he could and that I had plenty of relief pitchers available if, and when he needed help," the manager added.

HAD MEETING

"I had a meeting with the players Tuesday and I told them I know we were a better club than we looked in Los Angeles. We played poorly overthere and they know it. That bothers them because they have a great deal of pride. They're keyed up. They don't like being embarrassed."

Junior Camp Opens Tonight At Arena

The Belleville Junior "B" club, 1965-66 edition, opens its training camp at Memorial Arena tonight.

The arena management says the ice is in good shape with one organization using it last night.

The "B's" take to the ice at eight o'clock and club president Gordie Bell and manager Jim Matthews expect a good turnout of young hopefuls at the initial workout.

As has been noted only three players of last year's club will be missing but the management feels the positions can be filled with no loss of strength to the club.

All positions are open and any youngster who feels he can make a position will be welcomed.

The club will play in a strictly Junior "B" circuit this year instead of interlocking with Junior "C" clubs of the district as was the case the past two years.

Member clubs are Oshawa, Trenton, Kingston, Peterborough and Cobourg besides the local city squad.

The season opens here October 29 with the "Bees" playing host to the Cobourg youngsters. Their first away game is at Cobourg, November 1st.

The Handguns

The Quinte Handgun League shoot, cancelled from October 3 will be held on Sunday, Trophies will be awarded to the winners of the team shoot, topscore, master, expert, sharpshooter and marksman.

Results of the weekly shoot are - Harold Howting, 252; Louis Kulcsar, 251; Frank Allin, 246; Walter Mesem, 242; and Eldon McMurray 240.

Osteen Held 6 Wins Over Twins

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Lefty Claude Osteen, who blanked Minnesota here in game No. 3 of the World Series, plans no changes in his pitching strategy when Los Angeles Dodgers resume play today at Minneapolis.

Osteen and the Dodgers worked out Tuesday in Dodger Stadium before taking off in their private plane for Minneapolis.

"I don't plan to pitch any different," Osteen said. "Just keep the ball low. That's been my objective all season."

Osteen now holds six wins over the Twins, the first five in 1963-64 when he was with Washington Senators.

Manager Walt Alston repeated that he will make no decision about his pitcher for a possible seventh game until the sixth game has been played.

WE'VE GOT SANDY'

"We've got Sandy . . . Don Drysdale . . . Podres . . . We'll just wait and see," Alston said, referring to Sandy Koufax, Johnny Podres as well as Drysdale.

Podres, who has an ailing elbow has not seen service in the series.

Second baseman Jummy Lefebvre, who shared batting honors with Ron Fairly in the first two games in the Dodger finale, is still favoring a badly bruised right heel, which he injured Saturday.

Alston stressed that the Dodgers lose nothing defensively with Dick Tracewski at second "but the other kid hits a little better."

Lefebvre got three hits for a .375 average in the two games at the Twins' stadium, drove in a run and was robbed of an extra base hit and at least one run driven in by left fielder Bob Allison's sensational catch in the second game.

Names NHL Expansion Centres

NEW YORK (AP) — Baltimore, Vancouver, Minneapolis-St. Paul and San Francisco-Oakland are most likely to complete the projected six-team second division of the National Hockey League, Bill Jennings, one of the leading architects of the circuit's expansion program, said today.

"I envision that we will approve cities and start issuing franchises next week," said Jennings, who is also president of New York Rangers and a member of the NHL's board of governors. "At any rate, I think we'll know the makeup of the new division by the end of this year."

The governors and league president Clarence Campbell are scheduled to meet in Montreal next Tuesday. At their last meeting in June, they approved Los Angeles and SC Louis and set alternate target dates of October 1967 and October, 1968 for the start of the two-division setup.

"We're aiming now for 1967," Jennings said. The NHL has retained the six-division divisional setup since 1942 when Brooklyn Americans were disbanded. Current league members are New York, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Montreal and Toronto.

If He Strums Like He Runs?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Wills is in town with a banjo on his knee and a couple of records on his mind.

As Wills came down the ramp carrying the banjo he immediately was asked why he had brought it along. He said he wanted to keep in tune for a singing and dancing engagement at Lake Tahoe, Calif., as part of his off-season musical act.

What about baseball records?

"I didn't even know about them until the writers told me," said Wills, who has collected 10 hits in the series for a .455 batting average. He took his hits to the pre-record for a six-game series and three to tie the seven-game mark.

Twins Hurt By Oliva Slump

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Slumps puzzle Tony Oliva more than the average baseball player, because he's never had a prolonged one since coming to the major leagues.

The Minnesota right fielder is in one now, and it's hurting the Twins because he isn't carrying his usual share of the hitting load in the World Series.

Oliva has collected only three hits in 19 times at bat in the series for a .158 batting average. He has driven in two runs —with a double in the second game, which the Twins won 5-1, and with a home run in the fourth game, which Minnesota lost, 7-2.

"I try to hit the ball, but sometimes you no hit the ball," was Oliva's simple explanation in his Cuban accent.

Mele has stuck to the pitchers make the difference. If you are hitting the ball, you can hit against any pitcher.

Twins' manager Sam Mele is just as puzzled about Oliva's slump as the rest.

"You tell me why he suddenly isn't hitting," Mele said, "I don't know. Maybe his leg is still bothering him, but he hasn't complained to me about it."

Oliva was slowed a little by a pulled thigh muscle in his right leg going into the series, but no mention has been made of the injury since.

Presentations Victory Party

Village Honors Cementmen

POINT ANNE (Special) — The Point Anne Cementmen, champions of the Commercial Softball League, received the accolades of their fans and the community at a "victory" party here Saturday night.

Frank Insley, president of the Belleville and District Softball League, chaired the function in the well-decorated St. John's Parish Hall.

The champions were honored as a team and players with others associated with the club getting tangible recognition.

Jim Horwood, Cementmen captain, received the Blade Diamond Cheese Trophy symbolic of the championship from Robert Cruickshank, company representative.

Crosta for the team jackets were gifted by the Canada Cement Company and presented through representative Mr. Neville Burrows.

Manager Bill Shaw, unable to attend, was paid fine tribute by Jim Hunter and Burton Wonlen. Mr. Hunter presented the club through Captain Horwood with a cheque from the company employees.

The Point Anne Fire Department honored the champions with a substantial cheque while it was announced the Canada Cement Company would donate uniforms for the club next year.

Each member of the team will receive a jacket commemorating the championship.

Mrs. Jean Scalli named the "most loyal fan" was presented with a miniature cup and a corsage. Terry Zilis presented the awards.

There was enfertainment too.

Paddy Maracle, the distrinct dean of softball hurlers and his son Ron, gave exhibitions of step-dancing around "the Hotel-men Scalps" while a trio of former Point Anne players sang the "victory song" and other numbers.

SWOOP ON GAMBLERS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal agents have arrested 113 persons and confiscated $91,502 in cash in another of their periodic gambling crackdowns. A spokesman for the Internal revenue service's intelligence division said 122 locations in 46 U.S. towns and cities were included in raids Friday.

Parker Has Knee Injured

TORONTO (CP) — Jackie Parker, Toronto Argonauts' defensive bullback and reserve quarterback, had his knee injured in the final quarter of a Canadian Football League interlocking game here last Friday against Calgary Stampeders.

The injury is either a badly strained ligament or one with a slight tear.

Parker is not likely to play in the Orders five backfield but may dress as a backup man to quarterback Pete Liske here this Saturday when the Argos play an Eastern Conference game against Montreal Alouettes. He may also be used to kick converts.

No Contract—No Spot On All-Stars

Reay Adds Eleven

MONTREAL (CP) — Eleven players have been added to the all-star team for his game here against the Montreal Canadiens next Wednesday.

The 11, chosen from five National Hockey League teams by league coach Billy Reay, will replace of the stars picked after last season's play. The other three all-stars are Montreal Canadiens and will play with their own club.

The additional players are:

Chicago Black Hawks—Goaltender Glenn Hall and right-winger Eric Nesterenko;

Detroit Red Wings — Centre Alex Delvecchio;

The all - stars selected last spring are:

Second team—Goal: Charlie Hodge, Montreal; defence: Bill Gadsby, Detroit; Carl Brewer, Toronto; centre: Stan Mikita, Chicago; right wing: Gord Howe, Detroit; left wing: Frank Mahovlich, Toronto.

Reay, Chicago coach, earned the right to coach the all-stars because the Hawks gained a berth in the Stanley Cup final last spring. The Canadiens beat Chicago four games to three in the best-of-seven series. It will be his first time as an all-star coach.

No player will be allowed to play in the game for either team unless he has signed a contract for this season.

Petes Defeat London

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough Petes moved into the lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series Tuesday night by winning their second game in as many outings.

The victory, a 6 - 2 decision over London Nationals, left the newest entry in the series all alone on the bottom with two setbacks and no wins.

Toronto Marlboros, meanwhile got on the right track by whipping St. Catharines Black Hawks 8-3 in St. Catharines. The win evened the Marlies' record following their opening-game loss to Peterborough last week.

Penalties paved the way for the Petes before a crowd of 2,860 in London, Ont., as the winners counted twice on the power play. They added two more goals while they were shorthanded themselves.

Guy Dufour scored two goals and added an assist for the Petes, while Gary Monahan, Gord Tucker and Andre Lacroix were the marksmen. Len Batay and Dave Del Papa scored the London goals.

The Marlies outscored St. Catharines in every period to hand the Hawks their second loss in three games. Defenceman Jim McKenney, starting his fifth season of junior hockey, led the way with three goals as Toronto led 2-0 after the first period and 5-1 after the second. Terry Caffery and Frank Hamill each added two markers and Brent Imlach, son of Toronto Maple Leaf manager - coach, Punch Imlach, scored his first Junior A goal. Doug Skeldon, with two and Bill Sherwood one counted for St. Catharines.

TORONTO (CP)—Bill Gournay of Ottawa, an end and defensive back, has turned out for a trial with Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference.

Compromise Suggested

Boxing Peace Offering

MILWAUKEE, (AP) — Joey Sangor, vice-president of the World Boxing Association, suggested Tuesday the group recognize the Nov. 22 heavyweight bout between Cassius Clay and Floyd Patterson if it is billed as an elimination fight with the winner meeting the WBA champion.

Sangor, who recently joined in a resolution calling for impeachment of the group's president, James Deakin, for backing the Clay - Patterson fight, made his suggestion in a letter to Deakin.

The proposal was viewed as a possible compromise in the feud touched off by the scheduling of the fight for Las Vegas, the home town of Deakin who is an official of the Nevada Athletic Commission. The WBA recognizes Ernie Terrell, rather than Clay, as world heavyweight champion.

Sangor said Clay and Patterson should sign "an ironclad contract, with a substantial guarantee attached."

For the victor to fight within six months against the winner of the Nov. 1 fight in Toronto between Terrell and Canadian champion George Chuvalo.

"I believe' even if the above conditions are met, it would still be a violation of our convention position," Sangor wrote Deakin. "But at least we may be able to save a great deal of embarrassment to all of us and perhaps clean up the heavyweight mess."

Bathgate, Harris Score

Red Wings Tab Habs For First Loss

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Canadiens fattened up on minor league opponents for eight victories in a row, but Tuesday night they finally got around to playing a National Hockey League team in a pre-season exhibition game and lost.

Detroit Red Wings, led by three former Toronto Maple Leafs, dumped the Canadiens 4-1 at Detroit. It marked the first time Montreal has ever played another NHL club in pre-season activity.

The Leafs, meanwhile, took a page from Montreal's book and trimmed Quebec Aces of the American Hockey League 4-0 in Quebec City.

Boston Bruins, playing the only team they've been able to beat so far, won 4-2 over Oklahoma City Blazers of the Central Professional League in St. Thomas, Ont. The Bruins have won just twice in exhibition play and both victories are against their Oklahoma farmhands.

Don McKenney, Andy Bathgate and Billy Harris, all former Leafs, had a hand in the four Detroit goals. And just for good measure Bathgate took on another ex-Toronto player, Dick Duff, in a fight that resulted in five-minute majors to both.

But it wasn't a case of former team mates falling out since Duffan Bathgate never played together with the Leafs. They changed colors in a wholesale trade between Toronto and New York Rangers two years ago. There were 26 penalties in the game, including a 10 - minute misconduct to Alex Delvecchio of the Wings.

McKenney, Bathgate and Harris scored for Detroit and Harris set up the Wings' remaining goal by Bruce MacGregor. Bobby Rousseau scored for Montreal.

Bob Pulford sparked the Leafs with two goals while George Armstrong and Red Kelly got the others. Johnny Bower, in the nets for two periods, and rookie Garry Smith kicked out 39 shots between them for the shutout.

Veteran Dean Prentice counted twice for the Bruins, who broke a 1-1 tie after the first period for a 3-2 lead going into the third. Terry Crisp and Tom Williams got the other Boston goals. Oklahoma marksmen were coach Harry Sinden and Skip Krake.

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method

by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

STRAIGHT LEFT ARM— MUST IT BE?

How important is it for golfers to swing with a straight left arm — one of the so-called basics of good golf? I say it's fine if you can, but not bad if you can't.

The golfer, as shown in No. 1, who can maintain a straight left arm at the top of his swing is fortunate. However if you cannot do so without strain, forget it. Don't force yourself to keep it straight. This may lead to excessive grip pressure and tension and a hurried, jerky downswing.

It's much more important that you take the club away from the ball with a straight left arm (No. 2) to provide a wide swing arc, and that you straighten this arm when it's needed most — on the downswing and through the hitting area (No. 3).

He Wanted to Be NHL Star, Now Is Best Comic on Skates

By IAN MacLAINE

TORONTO (CP) — They laughed when the young hockey player donned a pair of figure skates and proceeded to make himself look ridiculous by slipping and sliding around the ice.

It was 18 years ago in Montreal and the centre of attraction was Guy Longpre, a young man from Sherbrooke, Que., with dreams of becoming a National Hockey League star.

Today they're still laughing, both in North America and Europe, as Longpre tours with the Holiday on Ice show. And the money he gets as a comic extraordinaire more than compensates for any regrets he might have about missing out on that NHL career.

The dark - skinned, bushy-browed French-Canadian talked about it while in Toronto to stir up some interest in the impending arrival of the ice show's first visit to the city.

Longpre, who has spent almost all his time with the show's European company, recalled that he was playing with Montreal Canadiens' junior reserve club in Sherbrooke at 15 when the incident occurred that changed his life.

The club used to practise at figure-skating clubs in Montreal and Sherbrooke.

"The figure - skaters used to come on the ice after us and the other guys on the team kept kidding me about how I'd look on figure skates.

"One night they hunted up an old pair of these skates with the toes that fold over the front. I was tripping all over the place but apparently everybody, including the figure-skaters, got a big kick."

WORK YEAR ROUND

Longpre's talents as a natural funnyman came to the attention of Ice Follies, a New York - based show, and he was hired several months later for its Canadian tour. He then joined Holiday on Ice.

It has been a 12-month-a-year grind that has included appearances in Moscow and Israel as well as all the major cities of Europe. One result is that Longpre has never "really thought seriously about marrying" although he has a girl in New York.

It has been years since Guy had an opportunity to see an NHL game and when he heard Maple Leafs would be playing two exhibition games in Toronto while he was here he immediately reserved tickets.

Asked if he had any regrets about missing out on a pro hockey career, he said:

"I really loved the game and still do, but a guy my size (five-foot-seven and 155 pounds) can't last much longer than 10 years in pro hockey, especially in the National Hockey League.

"I had to look at it realistically even then.

"In this business I can skate almost indefinitely as long as my legs hold out. There are some ice show skaters well over 50 and still strong skaters.

"No, I'd have to say I made the right choice."

Lions Say Play Illegal

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia Lions will lodge a complaint with the Canadian Football League over officiating during a Western Conference Game Oct. 9 which the Lions lost 14-12 to Edmonton Eskimos.

Coach Dave Skrien said Tuesday he will submit a report to G. Sidney Halter, CFL commissioner, pointing out a play that gave Edmonton its winning touchdown and which Skrien says was illegal.

On the play Skrien is questioning, Edmonton halfback Jim Thomas scored.

Skrien said game films show clearly the play was illegal for two reasons: A downfield block was thrown by an ineligible back and the block was thrown following a forward pass.

Kelso May Retire

NEW YORK (AP) — Kelso the multi-million dollar horse, is through racing for the season and maybe for good.

Mrs. Richard C. DuPont, owner of the eight year - old gelding, said Tuesday Kelso has been returned to the farm and; "There was no possibility of his making any race."

The great thoroughbred, winner of $1,907,200, has been bothered by an eye affliction which has not responded to treatment. The injury was caused when a clod of dirt struck him in the eye while he was winning the Stymie Handicap at Aqueduct in New York Sept. 22.

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Wildower's Pick, owned by Bruce Beer of Brampton, scored an upset victory in the seventh race at Garden City Raceway Tuesday night and returned $41.40, $11.40 and $6.90.

The victory was only the third in 14 starts this season for the five-year-old pacer.

Herb Craig, a 22 - year - old horseman from Blenheim, Ont., drove Prince Hal to his first victory in the opening race. Prince Hal combined with Fastry, winner of the second race, for a $29.90 daily double.

The sixth race went to Tapdean, who finished ahead of Lee Ezra for a $17.60 quinella.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A daily double of $54.00 was paid at the Western Fair Raceway Tuesday night when Victor Lee won the first race at $7 and Early Morning Song the second at $14.80.

An exacta of $57.80 was set up in the seventh race when Dean Sullen B came home first at $8.60 and Royal Victoria second at $5.60.

TERRORISTS CHARGED

HONOLULU (AP)—Two 18 - year - old U.S. Navy sailors were charged Tuesday with terrorizing 12 airliner passengers and a stewardess with bunting knives. The FBI said the two boarded an Aloha Airlines plane Monday at Kaunakakai, Molokai, Hawaii, and held the stewardess at knife-point until they were subdued by air line employees with a shotgun and flare gun.

Traffic Floors Terrell

TORONTO (CP) — Ernie Terrell of Chicago, World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, has been floored even before stepping into the ring against challenger George Chuvalo of Toronto.

Toronto's traffic delivered the blow to Terrell working out for his Nov. 1 title fight here against Chuvalo.

Terrell became enmeshed in rush hour traffic on one of Toronto's expressways on his way to training and back to his living quarters afterwards.

So he did what most other drivers caught in the same traffic jams can not do: He moved to the curbside to another part of the city, to avoid rush hour traffic.

Slick Canadian Fugitive, Georges Lemay, Has Not Made Mistake Since Escape

By BEN FUNK

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Georges Lemay, the slick Canadian fugitive, has said he seldom makes a mistake in his hemispheric game of hide-and-seek with authorities who want him in connection with the spectacular looting of a Montreal bank.

And, obviously, the dapper 40-year-old Montrealer hasn't made a mistake since his brazen "human fly" escape Sept. 21 from a fifth-floor cell in the ultra-modern Dade county jail here.

Except for a vague report that a man and woman "fitting the description" of Lemay and his ling brunette wife, Lise, 28, had been seen at Opelika, Ala., no clue has been reported to investigators.

A warrant has been issued in Canada for Lemay on charges of stealing and entering and theft of $300,000 in connection with the theft at a Montreal branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in 1961.

A total of 377 safety deposit boxes at the bank were broken into, but the exact amount never was established because of reluctance of box owners to talk. A gang apparently gained entry to the branch by tunnelling under the building. There have been estimates that between $500,000 and $4,000,000 was stolen.

CONVICT FOUR

Four persons were convicted in connection with the theft.

Roland Primeau, 38, of Montreal was convicted of conspiracy and sentenced Aug. 26, 1962, to 13 years in prison.

Andre, Yvon and Lise Lemieux, (no w Mrs. Lemay) brothers and sister, were found guilty of conspiracy and were sentenced in 1964. Andre was sentenced to six years, Yvon four and Lise to time already in jail, which amounted to several months.

None of the convicted persons linked Lemay with the theft in court, but Jan. 8, 1962, two warrants were issued for Lemay's arrest on charges of breaking and entry and theft.

When he was picked up on his yacht at Fort Lauderdale May 6 last, Lemay said he was puzzled. "I seldom make mistakes," he told an officer. "How did you find me?"

Told that the RCMP had supplied his picture as Canada's "most wanted" man around the world by way of the Early Bird satellite, and a Fort Lauderdale port repairman had turned him in, Lemay grinned.

"Isn't that something?" he said. "It took a satellite to catch me."

Later, asked at a hearing how he obtained a passport in the name of Rene Roy, Lemay shrugged. "When you have money," he said, "you can get anything."

PROBING BRIBE

A special Miami sheriff's board of inquiry is trying to determine whether Lemay's money bought his freedom Sept. 21. Two guards have been charged with aiding the escape and two were suspended for not reporting bribe offers by the Canadian.

Lemay left his fifth-floor cell about 7 p.m., went to the unoccupied seventh floor, found a cable to a plumbing fixture, broke out a window and slid down the cable. Another prisoner testified that Lemay dropped the last 20 feet to a first-floor setback, jumped to ground and was picked up in an automobile.

Both Lemay and his wife were under orders for deportation to Canada and officers doubted they would head for that coun-

Russ Jackson Is Top Passer

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa Rough Riders, loners in four of their last five Eastern Football Conference games, may be losing their chances of a first-place finish but quarterback Russ Jackson is emerging as the top passer.

Jackson was the leading passer in the EFC last year and in 1963.

With four games remaining in the schedule, Jackson leads in yards gained, touchdown passes thrown, percentage of completions and average gain he is second in completions and fewest interceptions.

Bernie Faloney, veteran quarterback of Montreal Alouettes, leads in completions and is second in three other departments, but falters badly in interceptions with 27. Pete Likke, Toronto Argonauts' quarterback, is a close third.

Toronto players are moving up in the kick returns and rushing departments, but Ottawa's Bo Scott still holds the rushing lead with 630 yards in 117 carries. Dave Thelen, a former Hough Rider now with the Argos, moved into third place behind Jim Dillard of Ottawa. Dillard has 574 yards in 100 carries and Thelen 567 yards in 120 carries.

Scott also is tops in kickoff returns, running back 12 kicks 300 yards. But Toronto's Dick Shatio, who will be honored at a special day this Saturday in Toronto, where the Argos play the Argos, made a big gain during the last week and trails Scott by only 34 yards.

Terry Evanshen of the Als still is the best pass catcher in the EFC with 30 catches for 528 yards. Ted Watkins of Ottawa moved into second place with 27 catches for 547 yards and Whit Tucker of the Riders is third with 23 catches for 564 yards.

Billy Wayte of Hamilton Tiger-Cats broke a three-way tie for the lead in pass interceptions by making his sixth of the season against Ottawa Monday.

Team-mate Garney Henley and Bob O'Billovich of the Rough Riders have five each.

Joe Zuger of the Ticats leads in punting with a 43.3-yard average in 111 punts while Henley is tops in punt returns. Henley has run back 27 punts 303 yards for an average return of 8.4 yards.

Moe Racine of Ottawa has a nine-point lead in the scoring race over Don Sutherin of Hamilton. Racine has 67 points and Sutherin 58. Neither player has scored a touchdown this season.

Blame Sports Columnist

Riders' Coach 'Feud' Denied

OTTAWA (CP)—A published report of ill feeling between head coach Frank Clair and assistant coach Bill Symons drew angry denials Tuesday from Clair and Eddie Emerson, president of the Ottawa Rough Riders.

Smyth was not immediately available for comment.

Red O'Quinn, general manager of the Eastern Football Conference club, Monday described with a heavy cold, said he wouldn't like to say anything until he's seen the columnist.

Jack Kinsella of the Ottawa Citizen said in his weekly sport column that it is an open secret in Canadian pro football that the two Ottawa coaches haven't been getting along since mid-way through last season.

"Rather than improve with time, the strained relations have deteriorated to a point where they have become detrimental to the club," wrote Kinsella.

Clair hadn't been able to put together a winning combination despite "an obviously superior complement of players." Now that Riders had lost four of their last five games a report appeared to be heading for a second-place finish behind Hamilton Tiger-Cats, in the East, it son for the club's "less than was time to "groom a major replacement."

ACCUSES WRITER

Clair accused Kinsella of a "personal vendetta against me" and added that the writer wanted him fired.

"The relationship between Bill and me has never changed," said Clair. "It is as good as it ever was."

Clair and Smyth both joined Riders many years ago and have led Riders to a berth in the eastern playoffs every year since, but never to a first-place finish. They had a Grey Cup winner in 1960.

Sources close to the club said Clair and Kinsella haven't been on speaking terms since the end of last season when Clair was considering an offer to leave Ottawa and coach Toronto Argonauts. Kinsella commented than that Riders and Clair should part company.

Clair refused Toronto terms and later signed a three-year pact with Ottawa.

Emerson said Kinsella is "talking through his hat." He had never heard of any feud between his coaches.

While Clair and Smyth had differences of opinions on some matters, this was to be expected among coaches, he said.

Automation's 'Release of Manpower' Begins to Bother Soviet Economists

By JOHN BEST

MOSCOW (CP)—Soviet economists call it "release of manpower" and it means the elimination of jobs due to automation.

In the West the phenomenon causes unemployment, at least temporarily, for those workers affected by it.

In the Soviet Union such workers are supposed to be kept on the payroll until other jobs can be found for them.

Any suggestion that, in economic terms, they are really unemployed is indignantly rejected.

"In a socialist country—particularly in the U.S.S.R. — the very concept of unemployment is something alien," writes Pavel Gobkhov in a Soviet news eview.

Gobkhov, assistant editor of he magazine Questions of Economics, adds:

"This can be seen from the oviet constitution which not nly proclaims the sacred right o work but also the no less acred duty to work."

He concedes that "accelerated echnical development in the .S.S.R. also creates a surplus f workers in a number of enterprises" but notes "the existing rocedure in the U.S.S.R does not allow a worker to be sacked without providing him with work, either in the factory or in another enterprise."

There are signs, however, that some economists are disturbed by the situation.

Writing in Questions of Economics, Yefim Manevich says a survey of 40 Moscow industrial plants showed increases in the labor force at most plants despite advances in automation.

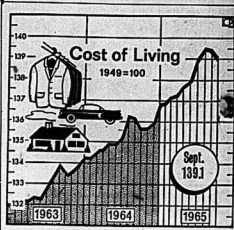
"As a result the plants employ quite a few people for whom there is absolutely no need."

Manevich agrees that "it would be advisable that workers dismissed because of technical progress be provided materially to a certain extent during the period needed to place them in new jobs."

And he declares they should be retrained in new specialties and paid by the government while learning — an idea that sounds much like that behind the government - financed retraining program in effect in Canada for several years.

The practice of keeping workers on factory payrolls even after they have become surplus runs counter to a growing movement in the Soviet Union to let factory managers run their own show on the basis of profit.

This trend frees them more and more from government control and gives them jurisdiction over manpower policies. If carried to its logical conclusion it would mean the end of artificially inflated payrolls and the facade of full employment.



LIVING COST DROP—The consumer price index Canada's main cost-of-living gauge, dropped three tenths of a point in September to 139.1, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today. The index was a its peak in July, 139.5 and fell one-tenth of a point in August. The bureau attributed the decline to lowe food prices. The index is based on 1949 prices equal ling 100. (CP Newsfi

Big American Force Pulling Out of Valley

AN KHE, South Viet Nam (AP)—One U.S. battalion remained in contact with the Viet Cong in the Suai Ca valley of the central highlands today, but the rest of the big American force was pulling out.

At last count 34 Viet Cong bodies had been counted and 81 guerrillas were captured in the four-day operation in the valley 25 miles northeast of An Khe. The Americans estimated at least 44 more Viet Cong had been killed by artillery or a attack.

U.S. losses were described a light, with one company unde Viet Cong fire all night havin suffered moderate casualties.

No contact was reported wit elements of the 325th Divisio of the North Vietnamese Army which had been reported operat ing in the area.

Introducing the tuned car. 1966 Buick.

What makes a car a car is styling, performance, braking and ride and handling. Only when they're all tuned together is the car a Buick.

We tuned the 1966 Buick. Not just the engine, but the whole car. We tuned all the elements. Like you would the instruments in an orchestra. And just as the tuned orchestra gives the effect of one-ness, the tuned car says blended perfection from bumper to bumper and road-line to roof-line.

Tuned Performance. We tuned Buick performance. Not just by increasing the efficiency of the six Buick engines, but by tuning everything that translates this power into activity. The transmission, the full coil suspension, the balanced drive-shaft, the brakes. All working together. All tuned.

Tuned Ride. We tuned the traditional Buick ride. And came up with something unique. Boulevard comfort with enough road-feel to let you know you're in charge. We added extra jolt-cushioning rubber to places that get a lot of pounding. And to make you more comfortable, we added more sound-deadening insulation. The result is a very special kind of ride. A tuned ride.

Tuned Styling. We even tuned the way Buick looks. Possible? Look at any one of the Buicks. Every sweeping line and gentle curve suggests motion. Inside and out, the car has been designed to move. And to say so. Quietly. But emphatically. That's tuned styling.

Drive the 1966 Buick. Riviera, Electra 225, Wildcat, LeSabre, Skylark or Special Deluxe. They're all Buicks. All tuned cars. All tuned to you. Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?

Pillars of Security

Minor Sports Assoc.

Last of a series of articles on the 14 participating agencies in the United Appeal, explaining the functions of the agencies and their reasons for participating in the United Appeal Campaign.

It had been a tough series.

Things were even, and with two minutes left in the final game, it was do or die.

The lanky redhead on left wing hadn't played too much all year, but he had done his share. He had learned what teamwork was on this hockey team, even though he was just over 12 years old.

Last year he had spent most of his time hanging around street corners, and twice he ran into trouble with the law. Not that he was a bad boy, he just had nothing constructive to take his energies out on.

The puck was dropped! A scramble! The scrappy winger had it! A shot! A save! The rebound! Bang! A goal!

It was a little while before he managed to climb out from under the pile of teammates who had jumped him in the usual congratulatory fashion, reserved by athletes for such occasions. When he did emerge, his face glowed with the pride a boy finds in doing something well.

He was a hero. But more than that, he was a member of a team, and through the efforts of the Belleville Minor Sports Association, this boy had learned the value of sportsmanship, of teamwork and of effort.

BUILDS CHARACTER

The objective of the Association is to foster character - building through organized outdoor recreation with emphasis on teamwork and good sportsmanship.

The Belleville Minor Sports Association promotes hockey leagues involving over 40 teams, 1400 children and 40 volunteer supervisors. There are 14 teams in the Association's baseball program involving 280 children and 22 volunteer supervisors, and in softball, there are 40 teams, 800 children and 32 volunteer supervisors.

The total involved in the three areas, hockey, softball and baseball, is 2580 children and 97 volunteer workers in the field.

And it's not only the best players, the stars, who participate in the games. Everybody participates. Everybody learns to do his share of the work. All learn that they must depend upon others and not be self - centred. And they learn how to take defeat – no by giving up, but by accepting reverses and pledging to do better the next time.

NEED HELP

While registration fees, sale of jackets and ticket sales at hockey games produce some revenue, the total operating expenses of an Association covering three areas of sport and affecting so many children is far in excess of these limited revenue sources.

The allocation to the Belleville Minor Sports Association from the United Appeal comprises 50 per cent of the Association's income. The money helps with the purchase of equipment, such as goal - tending gear, pucks, tapes, hockey sweaters, and softball necessities such as catcher's equipment, bats, balls and bases.

Administrating expenses of this large association, covering only such items as audit, advertising and printing, amount to only five per cent of the total expenditures.

The coaches, team managers, executives and their wives, themselves lower operating costs to the Association through personal financial assistance out of their own pockets.

With the opportunity to prove themselves both as individuals and members of a team, some 45 boys out of 280 who played baseball, were considered outstanding and were selected for all - star purposes to represent the City of Belleville in area playdowns.

In hockey, selected all - star teams played in tournaments and Ontario Minor Hockey playoffs at Kingston, Napanee, Oshawa, Niagara Falls and other centres. They earned a fine reputation for their all - round play and good sportsmanship, and brought credit to Belleville through their outstanding efforts.

Sports are a vital part of growing up. Besides the things already mentioned, such as sportsmanship, teamwork and getting along with others, sport teaches a boy discipline. There are rules in hockey that he must follow, or he will get a penalty. There are rules in life too, rules which he must obey for the good of all or suffer the consequences. Just as a boy in the penalty box does his team no good, a man in custody does society no good.

Sport also teaches a boy to keep fit and trim, and gives him a place to burn up all that energy that most boys have. His excess energies have to be used up somewhere, and where better than in an association where, besides having a good time, the basic ingredients of responsible citizenship will become second nature to him?

The Belleville Minor Sports Association asks your support through the United Appeal. Even if you never played a sport in your life, and few are in that category, surely the 2580 children involved rate your consideration?

Yukon Paper's Capital Reporter Is Boy of 15

By JOHN McLEAN

OTTAWA (CP)—It was a few minutes after 8:30 the night of Sept. 7 and the Ottawa correspondent of the Whitehorse Star sat in front of his radio.

Prime Minister Pearson had been speaking a little more than five minutes when he reached the part 15-year-old Jim Harbic had been waiting for: "Therefore, I have asked the governor - general to dissolve Parliament now so that there can be a general election on Nov. 8."

Political correspondent Harbic, a Grade 10 student at the University of Ottawa high school, didn't wait for the rest. He filled in the Nov. 8 date on a piece of news copy, sealed his story in an envelope and ran to the corner mail box.

His report on the general election was soon on its way to the Yukon where The Star carried it under his regular column heading with the notation "Age 15" under his picture.

"I had it all written ahead of time," reporter Harbic revealed with a precocious grin. "All I needed was the date."

A few days earlier he had sent the following report to his paper:

"Prime Minister Pearson returned to the nation's capital . . . with a whisper of an election centred around him. He's good spirits the 68 - year - old statesman described his visit (to Western Canada) as wonderful, and an official of the party was quoted as saying, 'If he harbored any doubts about an immediate election the last nine days apparently eliminated them.

WROTE TO EDITOR

Jim Harbic has been sending out regular reports from Ottawa for almost a year now, ever since he discovered the twice-weekly Star had no Ottawa correspondent.

"I just wrote them and asked whether they would like me to be their Ottawa reporter and they said yes."

Jim, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Denis Harbic, says he has always been interested in Canadian history and the development of the North in particular. He used some of the money he earned doing odd jobs at a summer resort last year to subscribe to several newspapers in the Northwest and this led to correspondence with the editor of the Whitehorse Star.

"Dad and mother are interested in my column, of course, but they don't interfere or give me advice. They let me write it my own way."

That's the way Whitehorse editor Pat Wheyard plays it too.

"There are times when I have to cut his copy down a bit, but he keeps pretty well on the beam. He comes pretty close to looking at Parliament through our northern eyes, which is a neat trick for a veteran, much less a boy his age."

Here's how Mrs. Whyard describes the beginning of their relationship on The Star:

"One day about a year ago we got a letter from a kid in Ottawa. He said he had been subscribing to our paper for six months and would like to write a column for us about what goes on in Ottawa. He said he was 14 and enclosed a school snap of himself."

PAPER IS HAPPY

Mrs. Whyard said she and publisher Bob Erlam thought he had earned something so we wrote and said, 'You're on, son.'"

Now, almost a year later, publisher Erlam and editor Whyard agree it was a good move. Harbic's reports, gleaned mostly from what he reads and hears, are chatty and spiced with his own opinions.

Jim and Mrs. Whyard agree that his reactions are just about on a par with those of the average voter," says Mrs. Whyard. "His report on the Canada Pension Plan was the only one of the many I read that I could understand."

She says they have been printing Jim's age under the picture since it was discovered most of the newspaper's readers thought he was a grown-up member of the Press Gallery."

An intense, keenly - curious boy, Jim is fluent in both English and French. He can't "be bothered" with most television shows, goes to few movies and spends much of his time reading political history and listening to parliamentary debates from the public galleries of the House of Commons.

He gets marks in the 70s in school and is good at several sports.

The style he wants to be a political correspondent "for a big paper" by the time he's 24.

POLITICAL COLUMNIST — HIGH SCHOOL SIZE — Jim Harbic, 15-year-old grade 10 student in Ottawa, works on his political column for the Yukon's twice-weekly Whitehorse Star. Watching is his sister Patricia, 17, who sometimes helps him with his spelling. Harbic started his column two years ago after offering his services to the paper when he discovered they had no Ottawa correspondent. He prefers books on political history to movies or TV and hopes some day to become a political columnist for a big paper. (CP Photo)

400 Moslem Fanatics Will Be Tried in Egypt For Anti-Nasser Plot

By GARVEN HUDGINS

CAIRO (AP)—Within the next few months at least 400 Egyptian members of the fanatical Moslem Brotherhood will stand trial on charges of trying to overthrow Gamal Abdel Nasser's government, according to campaign of murder and chaos.

In the early days of the Nasser regime, Brotherhood support was sought and gained by the young army officers who ousted King Farouk. But the alliance was short-lived. The Brotherhood insisted on a greater role in the Nasser government and on a strict interpretation of the Koran as the basis for ruling Egypt.

In October, 1954, Mahmoud Abdel Latif, a member of the Moslem Brotherhood for 16 years, fired at Nasser at a rally in Alexandria. The only casualty was a light bulb above Nasser's head, but the incident gave Nasser an opportunity to break with the Brotherhood. A wave of arrests followed.

Today, six members of the Brotherhood, including Latif, were hanged.

The crackdown appears ready to crush the Brotherhood.

Details of the latest plot against the government were revealed.

Government spokesmen say the Brotherhood had selected a special murder squad that included one of Nasser's bodyguards. The president, leading members of the government, the ambassadors of the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union were marked for assassination.

The aim was to create chaos, paving the way for Brotherhood takeover.

SUICIDE PACT

The government has taken more than 2,000 Brotherhood members into custody. Many are expected to be released after government questioning. For the hard core, Nasser is expected to show little mercy.

The Brotherhood dates to 1928, when an obscure teacher of the Koran founded the Association of Moslem Brothers in Ismailia.

He was Sheikh Hasan el Banna, and his doctrine was simple: "The Koran is our constitution."

By 1936, he had cut up 50 branches of the Brotherhood. In 1938 the organization made its first entrance on the political scene, denouncing British colonialism and decrying what it called attempts to humiliate Islam.

STRENGTH MOUNTED

Within four years, the Brotherhood became a force that Britain had to fight in the war. The Wafdists had to reckon with.

El Banna saw in the Palestine crisis of 1947 an opportunity to give Brotherhood commandos the arms the organization had been secretly accumulating for years.

He sent a special squad to Palestine to fight in the war. Those who returned were arrested by police on the pretext they might become terrorists.

This proved true when El Banna, deprived of many of his best fighters, fell back on terrorism and in one year caused the deaths of hundreds through bombs on shops, theatres, office buildings and apartment houses.

Police finally cut down El Banna in a street fight at the end of 1948.

U.S. Military Buildup Changes Face of South Viet Nam War

By RONALD I. DEUTSCH

SAIGON (AP)—The U.S. military buildup in Viet Nam has become so immense that Americans who arrived here at the beginning of the summer say it's not the same war.

Three months ago U.S. forces numbered 51,000. Now at least 125,000 American troops are in the country and more are expected.

It once was news when a U.S. unit on patrol made contact with the Viet Cong. Now hardly a day passes when this does not happen.

Only one year ago, fewer than 20,000 Americans were serving in so-called advisory roles to South Vietnamese government troops. Now it is not uncommon for thousands of U.S. troops to go out by themselves in search of the Viet Cong.

The United States mainly has anchored its ground forces along the coast of the South China Sea. They stretch from the scenic port of Cam Ranh Bay, 200 miles northeast of the capital, to Da Nang, 180 miles farther up the coast.

With the arrival of the army's 1st Air Cavalry Division, the United States has a permanent base camp in the central highlands for the first time. Only in the vast and lush Mekong Delta south of Saigon are U.S. troops not committed in mass numbers.

No less spectacular has been the expansion of the role of U.S. air power in both North and South Viet Nam. Day and night, jet aircraft zero in for strikes.

MORE FLIGHTS

One week recently 28,500 sorties were flown to combat and non-combat missions. One year ago about 12,000 sorties were the average for a week, mostly on supply and transport missions. A sortie is a single flight by one plane.

In some parts of South Viet Nam, U.S. planes circle the skies almost continuously. They are ready to be at the site of a beleaguered government outpost within minutes.

One of the newest elements in the air war is the introduction of Strategic Air Command B-52 bombers which fly from Guam to pound Viet Cong jungle strongholds in South Viet Nam. They are averaging four missions a week and authorities have said they may soon fly every day.

At sea, ships of the U.S. Navy's 7th Fleet fire offshore bombardment missions against suspected guerrilla positions. The missions began four months ago and have picked up in intensity.

U.S. combat casualties totalled about 1,200 one year ago. They now number at least 5,400. Of these, 1,100 died in action, 375 of them during the first eight months of 1965.

All this has transformed the face of the war. It has created immense problems for military planners seeking to fill the growing needs of both front-line and support elements.

Pearson Calls On Quebec to Support Unity

By BEN WARD

QUEBEC (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson called on Quebec Tuesday night to play a full role in building a new and more united Canada, passing on the "ferment of ideas" to the rest of the country.

"I am here because I believe in Quebec, in the part Quebec can play in our Confederation, and in the full and positive part which French - Canadians can play in the destiny of this country," he told an election rally.

A standing-room-only crowd of about 1,000 persons jammed a downtown auditorium for the meeting held in support of Liberal candidate Jean Marchand, former president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions. He is seeking the Quebec seat in the Nov. 8 general election.

Mr. Pearson, who delivered almost all of his 1,400 - word speech in French, got his loudest applause when he referred to the Liberal government's work in bringing about a national flag, "le nouveau drapeau nationale."

He called it "our beautiful flag of which we are so proud."

The enthusiastic meeting, capping a busy day of election campaigning, was highlighted by the presence on the platform of Louis S. Laurent, 83-year-old former Liberal prime minister who resigned from the Conservative government was defeated in the 1957 election. Mr. Pearson succeeded him as Liberal leader.

A lone spectator among the standees at the back of the hall drew even more attention from reporters. He was Leon Balcer, transport minister in the former Diefenbaker government who resigned from the conservative party earlier this year in a rift with Mr. Diefenbaker and sat in the Commons as an independent. He is not seeking re-election.

DUKED OUT EARLY

Mr. Balcer said he was at the meeting "as one of the uncommitted voters." He decked out half - way through the prime minister's speech.

Mr. Pearson flew here from Ottawa Tuesday morning and held a 45-minute private conversation with Premier Jean Lesage before heading off to a two-hour tour of the shipyards in nearby Lauzon.

He ran into a barrage of questions from shipyard workmen and officials about the government's freeze on shipbuilding subsidies, instituted without warning last February. The government has since been conducting a review of the subsidy program.

Mr. Pearson steered clear of a definite promise about reseeing the 35-per-cent subsidy but said the government's decision on a new policy should be announced in a few weeks.

"Whatever we in government can do to keep these yards going we should do and we will do," he told cheering cheers from 200 workers gathered in a cafeteria at the Davie Shipbuilding Yards.

The prime minister shook hands with about 200 grimy shipyard workers during his tour and glowed with obvious delight while driving an electric golf cart around the sprawling yards.

Mr. Pearson's party flew to Toronto early today to prepare for visits to Guelph and Orillia today.

Medicare Plan Being Revised Says Douglas

By DAN POWERS

CALGARY (CP)—New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas said Tuesday night the recent federal provincial conference indicated the Liberal government is prepared to modify its universal, compulsory medical care insurance plan.

"I am challenging Mr. Pearson to reveal whether, behind closed doors, the federal government has assured the provinces and insurance companies it is prepared to alter the compulsory character of the plan and alter the idea of one single agency of administration," Mr. Douglas told 1,200 persons at a rally in the Southern Alberta Jubilee Auditorium which has a capacity of 2,100.

The first act of an NDP government would be to introduce a comprehensive medical care insurance plan "for all the people. If the NDP does not form the next government, it will fight for the day when such a plan will be available to all."

The Liberals have stalled and "it's beginning to leak out that Pearson will begin to waffle" on medical care. The Conservatives should "come out of the bushes and be counted" on the issue, he added.

Social Credit opposition to the compulsory character of a national plan was "hiding behind a smokescreen". A national plan must be compulsory "because the only way you can reduce costs is to make the plan applicable to everybody."

The NDP leader was to catch a flight to Regina today to continue the election campaign.

CITES GALLUP POLL

He cited a Gallup poll which showed that 3,500,000 Canadians have not yet decided which party to vote for. If thetr-quarters of these persons vote NDP along with party support, which has increased since the last election, "we can form the government on Nov. 8.

"For the first time in our history, it is legitimate to believe the NDP can form the next government."

Mr. Douglas attacked the Liberals for making promises to the farmer but not carrying them out and mentioned promises of a "two-price policy for wheat" and a guaranteed minimum price of $2 a bushel. The farmer has become "the forgotten man" in the Canadian economy.

"Profits were up 14 per cent in 1964 compared with 1963 but farm profits were down by 14.6 per cent. Farmers are caught in a cost-price squeeze.

Mr. Douglas outlined the NDP's program to meet the scientific and technological revolution. Among steps needed were a national development corporation and manpower retraining and tax cuts for persons in lower income brackets.

ITU Pickets March Around PC Rooms

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the International Typographical Union (CLC) picketed Felicity Cochrane's Progressive Conservative campaign headquarters Tuesday.

Mrs. Cochrane, nominee in Toronto Parkdale, then picketed the ITU's pickets.

The union pickets carried signs reading: "Mrs. candidate, the Ontario government is unfair - busting. What are your views?"

Mrs. Cochrane's sign, which she paraded with the union pickets, read: "I take my orders from Ottawa, not from Colorado Springs."

Mrg. Cochrane's sign referred to ITU headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo.

A worker at Mrs. Cochrane's headquarters said she was picketed because some of her campaign literature is being printed by a friend in a non-union shop.

Local 91 of the ITU has been on strike at Toronto's three dailies since July 9, 1964. But The Telegram, The Star, and The Globe and Mail have continued to publish.

Water Reserves Being Wasted Says PC Head

By STEWART MacLEOD

MEDICINE HAT (CP)—Charging that Canada's water resources are being recklessly wasted, Conservative leader Diefenbaker Tuesday night promised a new national made-in-Canada water policy if his party is elected Nov. 8.

He also suggested that one cabinet portfolio would be eliminated and another added.

Moving his campaign westward, Mr. Diefenbaker continued to hammer heavily at the Liberal government for its alleged disruption of national unity, its alleged lack of integrity and its alleged deceit and incompetence in agricultural matters. He spoke for 82 minutes.

He told a near-capacity audience in a 1,000-seat auditorium about "those last 2½ years—a time to horrify the honest and discourage Canadians as a whole."

The Pearson government had done nothing about water resources — "and there's no greater problem before Canada today." By the 1980s, Canada could be a nation without a usable water supply.

He said Resources Minister Laing is prepared to consider diversion of Canadian rivers to the United States under a continental water program, and that's a system that would be unacceptable to a Conservative government.

'WELL PULL PLUG'

"They refuse to believe that Canada is a nation capable of developing our own resources. This would pull the plug on one of our most vital resources."

The Conservative policy, which he did not detail, would mean "no surrender."

In arguing that most Canadians should be given a greater voice in public affairs, Mr. Diefenbaker said "we can well do away with the associate ministry of national defence and do with a minister of youth affairs," This would give young Canadians new opportunities.

Facing a relatively-quiet audience, the Conservative leader continued to tear into the government for "pitting province against province and race against race."

Prime Minister Pearson took office and immediately announced that Canada has two nations, he said. It was a proposition denied by every prime minister from Macdonald to Meighen."

FOUGHT LIBERAL POLICIES

Mr. Diefenbaker said he fought against the policies of the present government. "They condemned, ridiculed; I stood."

He stood against Mr. Pullen-Favreau formula to amend the constitution, which had been approved by nine provinces "and in my opinion, it now is as dead as a dodo."

The choice in the forthcoming general election is "a Liberal government that would Canada into different nations or a conservative government that would preserve national unity while respecting provincial rights," he said.

"Mr. Pearson turns his back on the past and walks backwards into the future."

He said the last member of Parliament from Medicine Hat, H. A. Olsen of the Social Credit party, would not stand as Canada against the government although he disagreed with it.

"He said, the government is wrong but $18,000—$6,000 free of tax—is not something to be voted away."

Syndicate Tries To Steal Rare Stamps, Coins

VANCOUVER (CP)—A crime syndicate that operates around the world is trying to steal rare stamp and coin collections in Vancouver, police said Monday.

Total value of local collections is estimated at between $13,000,000 and $20,000,000.

Police Chief Ralph Booth said the syndicate employs burglars and stamp and coin experts to obtain the collections. The valuable stamps and coins then are smuggled out of Canada and sold on the international market.

Canada's Needs Best Served by Minority Govt. - - Thompson

TORONTO (CP) — Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson says Canada's needs probably could best be served by a minority government.

Speaking to reporters at a press conference Tuesday, Mr. Thompson said both the Liberal and Progressive Conservative parties are in trouble. They should join with the New Democrats to form a left-wing party on one side of the House with Social Credit as a right-wing party on the other.

Mr. Thompson said his party will field some 100 candidates in the Nov. 8 general election, but even should all win seats the party still would not have enough members to form a majority government in the 265-seat House.

While a two - party system would be best for Canada, the parties must first present an alternative to each other, he said.

After outlining a 10 - point party platform hinged mainly on a pledge by all Social Credit candidates to give positive responsible representation at Ottawa even to the extent of nonpartisan s hip, Mr. Thompson boarded a plane for Calgary.

Earlier stadiorm stressed decentralization of government and the Social Credit belief that Canada's "drift to socialism" must be opposed.

"The tendency of the federal government to invade provincial jurisdiction and to centralize a large amount of power in the hands of the federal government, dealing with matters of local and provincial nature, should be fought," he said.

Provincial autonomy must be respected, he added, and the provinces must be consulted by the federal government on joint problems.

Mr. Thompson suggested a department of federal - provincial relations should be set up to provide liaison between Ottawa and the provinces.

Social Credit Is Explained By Caouette

THETFORD MINES, Que. (CP) — Creditiste Leader Real Caouette explained Social Credit monetary theories Tuesday night for the first time in his current campaign for the Nov. 8 federal election.

Mr. Caouette, speaking at an election rally in Thetford Mines 50 miles south of Quebec City, suggested that the Bank of Canada should distribute a total $15,000,000,000 in dividends to Canadians.

The gross national product of Canada will reach some $50,000,00,0000. The $15,000,000,- 000 would be distributed as dividends to individuals, would allow Canadians to buy the products represented by the gross national product.

"This dividend is the weapon which will ensure liberty and security in Canada," he said.

"When I have purchasing power in my pockets, when I have money in my pockets, I don't need government plans," he said. "You are intelligent enough as I am, to know what to do with this money."

Canada does not need plans to increase production, he said. What it needs is to increase purchasing power. Automation has created a problem that the Social Credit will solve. "Only Social Credit with its national dividend, its monetary reform, can find the solution."

Medical Care By Means Test Won't Work

- - LaMarsh

PRESTON, Ont. (CP) — Health Minister LaMarsh said Tuesday night that if the Liberals obtain a majority in the Nov. 8 federal election they will adjust the basic flat rate of the Canada Pension Plan if assistance proves insufficient to meet pensioners' needs.

Miss LaMarsh said at a Liberal rally in a high school auditorium, attended by about 60 people, that benefits would be proportioned according to needs, based on the cost of living in the area in which a pensioner lives.

"A pensioner in Prince Edward Island doesn't need as much dollars anything like a pensioner living in Toronto," she said.

She said a majority Liberal government would "offer whatever is necessary to help those in need" by enacting the Canada assistance plan as soon as Parliament reconvenes.

If the plan's basic rate is inadequate, she said the Liberals will assure that pensioners get sufficient money to pay rent, food and doctor bills to enable them to live comfortably.

Earlier in Toronto, she told the Liberal Business Men's Club of Toronto that medical care by means test would not work.

She said there would be no way of determining who needed public assistance.

"Such an approach would not taken into account the fact that even persons, with a relatively high income can face crippling medical costs," she said.

She added that it could not be assumed that such persons would be covered by private plans.

In Alberta, which uses the voluntary approach, 25 per cent of the population was not covered by the provincial, private or civil service medical plans, Miss LaMarsh said.

"Can we fairly assume that almost one in four of the population has no requirement for protection in this cruel a rest"

She said it was this factor and not a desire for socialism that prompted the Liberal government to demand universal coverage for provincial plans if the plans are to receive federal fiscal assistance equal to one-half the national per capita cost.

Tycoon Takes Time Out to Resume Acting

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jean Caulfield the tycoon is taking time out from her financial activities to resume acting.

The blue-eyed blonde with the peaches-and-cream complexion is so cunning with the stock market that even her own broker buys whatever stock Jean does—and sells when she does.

Now she's vice-president of Leather Shine Co., Inc., a company that makes and installs self-polishing machines in airports, hotels, etc.

Most actresses suffer from insecurity, self-doubt and general misery while waiting for roles. Not Joan.

"Most of the time I'm so busy with my deals, I sometimes forget I'm an actress," she says.

BACK IN ACTION

Currently she's back in Chicago at the Drury Lane Theatre doing Affairs of State.

Then she'll return here for recording more movie and television roles—if she can find time between playing lady executive.

She'd like to revive her TV series, My Favorite Husband, which was on for a short time before the days of tape.

"That's the one time my so-called financial acumen wasn't working for me," she says. "If I had only filmed those shows, they would still be showing—and the residuals would be pouring in."

Joan's way with the stock market comes naturally. She was born in Orange, N.J., one of three daughters of a successful stockbroker, Henry Caulfield.

KNOWHOW COUNTS

And she studied the market at Columbia University.—until she got a part-time job as a cover girl and eventually an actress.

Joan, an avid baseball fan, says playing the stockmarket is the same as managing a ball club.

"You play the percentages—and should know at all times when to pull out a pitcher—or sell a stock."

Doyle Claimed As Fixer for Socred Pledge

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says a former Social Credit member of Parliament told two of his reporters that John Christopher Doyle, who escaped Canadian Javelin Corp., worked behind the scenes to get six Creditiste MPs to pledge support to the Liberal government after the 1963 general election.

In a story from Ottawa, and by reporters Robert Regily and Robert McKenzie, the newspaper says Mr. Doyle, Javelin company has vast iron-ore and timber holdings in Labrador, was identified by Dr. Guy Rocheleau, m e m b e r for Quebec-Montmorency in the last Parliament.

Dr. Marcoux is running in the Nov. 8 federal election as an independent.

Mr. Doyle, a Chicago native and a naturalized Canadian citizen now believed living in Ottawa, left the United States to avoid a possible jail sentence after he opposed last May 3 in connection with illegal stock transactions.

The newspaper says Premier Lucien Plourde, one of the six Creditiste who allegedly signed an affidavit in March 31, 1963, pledging support for the Liberal party three days after the election.

It says Mr. Plourde, former member for Quebec West, said Dr. Marcoux told some of the six they had signed "20 months too soon" had they waited a few more minutes another document would have been presented to the governor-general for a coalition government continuing the Progressive Conservatives in office.

Ashes of Gareth Hughes Sent to Land He Loved

By BO BTHOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The ashes of Gareth Hughes have been sent to Nevada for burial near the land that he loved.

That had been his final wish. For 15 years he had worked among the Piute Indians as a lay missionary called Brother David. Few were aware that he had once been a movie star.

Gareth Hughes was a Welshman, 200 like many of his countrymen, he had a flair for the dramatic. He went on stage, joined the Welsh players and came to the United States with the company. The tour was a flop, and Hughes stayed on to try his luck in the American theatre.

One of his first jobs was on a tour with James O'Neill in Joseph and His Brethren. The elder O'Neill was a minority stock who domineered his wife and two sons, Hughes recalled.

The young man came to Hollywood in 1919 to appear opposite Clara Kimball Young in The Eyes of Youth. He enjoyed a decade of success in films, appearing in long-forgotten features with Norma Talmadge, Mental Tommy, Enemies of Children, Whirlwind of Youth and The Sky Rider.

Hughes didn't survive the transition to sound. He returned to the stage, acting in the Federal Theatre project and playing Shylock at the Hollywood Playhouse and the University of Michigan.

"I finally hung up my acting robes," he said. "I had had enough."

His starring days had netted him Dollars—"I was never the kind of actor who could smell money." Always deeply religious, he answered the call in 1942 for a lay missionary to serve among the Indians in southern Nevada. His quarters were an abandoned fort; its most regular inhabitants were rats and rattlesnakes.

The extent of Hughes' parish was 200 miles of desert land. He travelled by jeep through bone-numbing cold in the winter and 120-degree heat in the summer, christening babies, burying the old, and bringing the comfort of God's message to the sick. The selfless service of Brother David became a legend among the Piutes.

Hughes' frail form finally broke under the privations of the desert. In 1958 he was forced to leave the reservation and retire to the Motion Picture Country House in nearby Woodland Hills.

I visited him there one day as he paused between his visits to the sick veterans of the film industry. Gareth Hughes was a fortable room surrounded by quartos and folios of Shakespeare—"I studied them in my salad days," he grinned. He also displayed photos of himself as a handsome leading man, a contrast to the wispy white-haired man he had become.

Gareth Hughes continued doing his good works among the sick and retired until a year ago, when his strength failed. He spent required him to enter the motion picture country hospital. He died last week at the age of 71.

African-Style Hamlet Filmed In Ghana Bush

ACCRA (Reuters) — Shakespeare's Hamlet has been filmed in the African bush in Ghana—but it is Hamlet with many differences.

The play has been renamed Kimble (pronounced ham-lee) because the setting is a Fra'ra village in northern Ghana and Kamile is, in fact, the name of a border village.

Other names have also been changed. Ophelia becomes Habiba, Horatio becomes Karim and the ghost of Polonius are spoken by a character named Ibrahim.

The palaces of the great are only thatched wattle and daub huts, painted with blue stripes. Fra'ra style, with gaudy curtains and carpets within.

The women are seen pounding cassava or smoothing hair by traditional methods. Sloops of ale have become calabashes of pito.

The Fra'ra dress, which has been described as "Scottish dress, yes, fra in naturally, but it is something of a shock to hear Hamlet's famous soliloquy is rotten in the state of Tongo."

Tongo is a little Fra'ra town. The name was chosen for no other reason than that it sounds well. The production has thus become known as "the Tongo Hamlet."

When Laitu (Laertes) leaves for France he is referred to as Lome (the French-speaking capital of Togoland).

The two messengers who gallop in (on good Ghana army horses) with the news that Hamlet is safe say they are from Sokoto (northern Nigeria), not England.

The ghost does not declare he was poisoned with "the juice of cursed hebenon" but with a "crocodile poison," which is easier for a West African to understand.

The cast of 27 are all students of the school of music and drama of Ghana University.

The film has been made by the Ghana Film Industry Corporation and directed by Terry Bishop, a British producer in Ghana whose only other African film, Daybreak in Udi, won the Oscar and the British Academy Award.

Officer Shot At Four Times

CHATHAM (CP)—Constable John Fitzgerald of the provincial police was shot four times by a man he was attempting to arrest Tuesday.

During a robbery of the Tilbury Hotel, constable Joseph Chevalier tore off the mask of an intruder during a scuffle in the hotel.

A shot was fired, apparently when a vase thrown by Chevalier struck the man on the wrist.

In a pre-dawn encounter in a room field 20 miles southwest of Chatham, Fitzgerald, 21, was fired on by a man carrying a revolver. Three bullets hit the constable's right leg and a fourth grazed his left, officials said.

One Member Still in Cast Of Great Show

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—Porgy and Bess opened in Toronto's Royal Alexandra Theatre Monday on the 30th anniversary of its first opening in New York on Oct. 10, 1935.

There is one member of the cast who recalls that first opening as the biggest thrill of her life. Helen Dowdy, still a high school girl, sang the Strawberry Woman that night, and has sung it in the major revivals of the show since then, including the world touring 1952 production.

Miss Dowdy says her haunting street vendor's cry was composed partly by George Gershwin and partly by her mother.

Miss Dowdy, a native New Yorker, was a member of Dr. Eva Jessye's choir from which Gershwin chose many of the members of the first cast. Dr. Jessye is the only other person associated with the first production who is with the current show, as its choral director.

Miss Dowdy says:

"I started out to be a concert singer, but then I married and the theatre is a most exciting life and I think it's fulfilling. Porgy and Bess is a wonderful show but brings a degree of pleasure to people."

The Porgy company has been on the road for 16 weeks and is scheduled to go to Israel. Miss Dowdy is not sure she will go with it. She works as choir director and organist at a church in New York and says she wants to stay home a while.

Right now she believes the show is holding up well artistically, and that its picture of the Golden Negroes of Catfish Row is accepted by audiences for Porgy and Bess rather than as a social commentary.

"A few years back Negroes were not too happy about it. But in the last 10, 15, maybe 20 years they've all grown up. We're intelligent enough to realize this type of character is typical of all races. They all have different levels."

Drama Outlines America's Love Affair With the Car

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Impeccably timed to arrive at the peak of the auto industry's super - model season and with just the right combination of majestic detachment and raised eyebrows, CBS news Tuesday night provided a delightful hour's drama outlining America's love affair with the car.

"This thing we have about automobiles," was one way narrator Harry Reasoner described it. And with graphic illustration, the program told us a lot of things most of us had not realized about cars.

This year, Reasoner said, Detroit will be producing about 9,000,000 new cars. Americans are throwing away about 5,000,000 cars a year, and the problem there is what to do with the unsightly rusting all over the countryside.

Today there are drive-in movies, restaurants, banks, post offices, liquor stores and, now in Southern California, the beginning of a chain of drive-in cemeteries. If stacked bumper to bumper, American cars would reach to the moon and a quarter of the way back.

The program took a philosophical look at television car commercials. Reasoner explained that by showing the cars in glamorous situations with pretty girls, the automakers are really playing back to the would - be male buyer his own dreams.

"If you're a boy," he said, "the day you get your driving license is the biggest thing that's happened to you since the day you got born."

Then he noted coolly that the average newly - licensed driver in the United States would buy 15 cars and have 15 accidents in his lifetime—and has a 40-to-1 chance of being killed in a car.

Great Britain Alters Policy Of Avoiding Special Stamps

By CARL MOLLINS

LONDON (CP)—The General Post Office has acknowledged, to its profit and with some dismay, that postage stamps mean more to thousands of Britons than a means of sending a letter or a bad taste on the tongue.

So almost 125 years after the world's first adhesive postage stamp was issued in Britain—the renowned Queen Victoria Penny Black of 1840—the post office held secretly to the view that stamps were for postage only.

Then, in 1963, the GP had a change of heart and decided to join most other countries in using special stamp issues to propagandize, commemorate events and please the collectors. A philatelic bureau was established to publicize new stamps, handle inquiries from collectors and provide a service of special envelopes and postmarks on the day a new stamp is issued.

The GPO's conversion of the stamp collector has also resulted in a sudden, sometimes bewildering outpouring of special issues marking themes from wildflowers to a new bridge across the Firth of Forth, from the centenary of the Salvation Army to the septicentenary of Parliament.

Under the policy, intensified last year under the new Labor government, as many special stamps have been issued in three years as in the previous history of the post office.

ISSUES INCREASE

From 1924, when the first special stamp was issued to mark the British Empire Exhibition that year in London, the double-size pictorial stamps trickled out sporadically, most of them marking royal events like coronations, jubilees and weddings.

Until the end of 1962, there had been 20 special issues consisting of a total of 52 stamps. From the beginning of 1963 to the end of 1965, the total is 19 issues consisting of 51 different designs.

This year is producing a record crop of 24 designs in nine issues, all crowded into a four-month period from July 5, when the two Winston Churchill commemorative stamps were issued, to Dec. 1, the date of issue for two stamps marking the centenary of the International Telecommunications Union.

In between are stamps marking anniversaries of Parliament, the Salvation Army, Joseph Lister's discovery of antiseptic surgery, the United Nations and the Battle of Britain—an issue of eight different designs — plus issues for the Commonwealth Arts Festival in September and the opening of a new post office telecommunications tower in London.

CANADA ISSUES 8

By comparison, Canada issued eight single specials throughout 1964. At the other extreme, Russia issues as many as 150 new stamps a year while some new countries, mindful of propaganda and revenue, are as prolific. Sierra Leone issued 222 stamps in 100 years as a British colony and has put out 140 in four years of independence.

The response to Britain's change of heart has been generally enthusiastic, especially from British philatelists and dealers overwhelmed with activity after years of making do with rare "specials" of mid-Victorian design. The GP's venture, while costly, has proved profitable: An estimated $900,000 from 1964 philatelic sales alone.

But there has been criticism and controversy, including complaints about the sudden abundance of issues tending to lower the GPO to the level of some of the postage - stamp sheikhdoms of the Persian gulf, which issue scores of stamps every year as an unabashed revenue-raising enterprise.

Designs have come under fire, most notably the Battle of Britain stamps which displayed the Nazi swastika prominently in designs representing conflict between British and German fighter planes.

The monthly journal of Stanley Gibbons Ltd., fast-growing dealer and publisher of stamp catalogues, says designers have attempted to widen their scope by eliminating Queen Elizabeth's portrait from its inevitable position in the right-hand corner.

"But apparently," the journal says, "Her Majesty was not amused and in the final design . . . the portrait is present and correct."

The GPO has also been criticized for bumbling by attempting too much too soon. Five of the nine special issues were behind schedule: The telecommunications union stamp missed the May 17 anniversary by 21 weeks; the Salvation Army stamps, six weeks late, came out long after thousands of world Salvationists had departed from their centennial convention in London.

But, as one stamp dealer pointed out, at least there is something now to be controversial about.

BRITISH STAMPS ARE BIG BUSINESS — A change of policy in Britain's General Post Office has resulted in a flood of new issues. From 1840 when the first adhesive stamp was issued in Britain until 1963 the GPO issued stamps for postage only. Then the GPO opened a philatelic bureau and in the last three years as many special issues have come out as in the previous 125 years. Some of the issues, notably the Battle of Britain stamps, have come in for heavy controversy. But the venture has proved profitable: an estimated $900,000 from 1964 philatelic sales alone. Moscow Sprawling City Drab But Yet Imposing

It is a hodgepodge of shacks and skyscrapers, peasants and world figures, bazaar-like outdoor stands, staggering drunks and a soaring monument to the world's first spaceship.

The Soviet capital embodies communism's mood and problems. It has a utilitarian, no-frills look that lays out before the visitor this state's triumphs and failures.

"It's the contrast that puzzles me," says an American student.

"You see these old women out sweeping the streets with twig brooms, and then big water trucks come along to wash them down. There are ragged old wooden buildings all over, and big apartment houses and office buildings that look like New York.

"They put up the sputnik and carry out fantastic heart operations, but the merchandise in the stores—well, the Salvation Army couldn't give it away back home."

Moscow, shunning display and elegance, does not shine and glitter like the great cities of the West. Buildings present stern facades of dull - colored brick, plaster often discolored and peeling, thick walls instead of open expanses of plate glass.

The dense, hurrying crowds wear work clothes—the men tieless, often unshaven, the women in heavy shoes, babushka kerchiefs on their heads.

A 3,182-room hotel—one of the world's biggest, the Kremlin battlements being built on the banks of the muddy Moskva River. Spotlights shine at night on the rising apartment houses spreading over the area outside the centre of town. Construction cranes stand out against the sky.

The new Soviet architectural style is bare, functional. Gone are the days of the Stalin Gothic ministries and hotels, though these still serve as a reminder of a grim and pompous era.

Into the highly urbanized atmosphere of Moscow come peasants by the tens of thousands each day. They carry produce for the collectives' open markets, the street stands. You see them squatting in the waiting rooms of the train stations, boarding buses outside the Moskva Hotel in the midst of the downtown area.

Weather - beaten, roughly clothed, they seem to have stepped out of 19th century Russian literature.

He Prefers Murderers To Dope Pushers

TORONTO (CP) — Brigadier Cyril Everitt's congregation includes thieves, murderers and dope-peddlers.

Retiring in September after six years as Salvation Army chaplain at Toronto's Don Jail, Brig. Everitt says he would rather spend his time with murderers than dope pushers.

He doesn't believe in hanging but said that if he did, "I would hang the dope-pushers because they slowly destroy a man while the murderer acts on the spur of the moment."

Brig. Everitt has not seen a hanging since Randolph Turpin, 20-year-old slayer of a Toronto policeman, and Arthur Lucas, 52, a hired killer, were hanged back to back at the Don Jail in 1962.

However three young murderers were under his care at retirement: Matthew Kerry Smith, the "Beatle bandit," and William Mackie and Michael Black, who pushed the man they robbed into a river, were all awaiting execution.

Alcoholics are the most intelligent and likable prisoners, thinks Brig. Everitt, but "when they get out they drift back to their old cronies and start boozing again."

Sometimes the padre wonders if prison is the answer. More than 80 per cent of last year's inmates had been jailed before.

Alcohol is the cause of most of the trouble for people over 30, says Brig. Everitt, and cars —particularly stealing them or parking in them with bad cheques—are the problem for the under 30s.

The Sedan de Ville

New Elegance! New Excellence! New Excitement!

The 1966 luxury car year may now begin! The finest of all Cadillacs is here! And it greets you with an exciting new elegance surpassing even the Cadillac styling triumphs of years gone by. Its dazzling new look is highlighted by a totally new split-level grille and by new clean-swept body contours. And its interiors have never been more breath-taking! New leathers, new fabrics and new appointments (with dramatic walnut paneling on all Fleetwood models) impart an air of unrivaled distinction and luxury. And Cadillac's traditional engineering excellence rewards you with a number of suspension, chassis, and acoustical advances which result in an almost incredible smoothness and quietness of operation. Finally, consider the excitement of Cadillac's new performance. You'll marvel at the alert response of Cadillac's new, exclusive variable ratio power steering and wonderfully steady handling. Very soon . . . visit your authorized Cadillac dealer. Ask to see and drive the great new Cadillac, the new Standard of the World!

Operating Engineers Threaten Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Members of Local 793, International Union of Operating Engineers, (AFL-CIO) threatened Tuesday to stage a strike that would affect the heating system which supplies Toronto's old and new city halls, Osgoode Hall Law School and several other downtown buildings.

The dispute centres on an application by the union to represent stationary engineers employed by the Toronto Hydro-electric system and who operate equipment in two central steam plants.

John Parker, business manager of the local, said the application for certification on behalf of the engineers was made in July, 1964, but has not been processed by the Ontario Labor Relations board.

The Canadian Union of Public Employees (CLC) had applied earlier to represent the group.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For October 14

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): New contacts, methods require patience. Don't rush or lose sense of values. Best to postpone unnecessary journey. Be on the alert for valuable hints. Take care with written word.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Not so good for trading, exchanging goods. Tendency for others to present second - rate material. Work with what you have on hand. Realize financial situation due to improve.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): Keep plans to yourself. Realize many around you are apt to be envious. Heed your own counsel. Moon in your sign stresses personal action. Steer clear of controversy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. Study details. Obtain hint from Gemini message. Privacy required. Avoid extremes. Realize that communication not as serious as first impression. Look beyond present exterior.

LEO (July 22 — Aug. 22): Not wise to mix business with pleasure. Make necessary changes. Clear communication lines. Put thoughts, ideas on paper. Stay out of arguments. Minor concession advisable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): May be necessary to change mode of operation. If official sources raise objections . . . have alternative methods at hand. Don't compound error. Seek family harmony.

LIBRA (Sept. 23—Oct. 22): Go slow where business, career affairs are concerned. Obtain necessary clearances. Check leases, contracts, special agreements. Key is being realistic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Be self-reliant. Base decisions on previous experience. Advice from friends should be received graciously. But you must be on alert for misinformation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): No time for hasty decisions. Wait for all facts. Key is patience. Play waiting game. Those around you may appear irritable. Realize you get nowhere by arguing. Air will soon clear.

CANCER (June 21—July22): Utilize direct, simple methods. Avoid complications. Go directly to source. Exercise initiative, be independent. Emphasize originality. New contacts could add cause.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Avoid excess — including extravagance. Emotions tend to rule logic. Remember past commitments. Pay and collect debts. Keep promise made in family meeting.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Accept opposition as new challenge. Find ways, means of pointing across your views. Cooperate with authorities. Keep close watch on possessions. Find out true value.

• • •

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you have a strong need to express yourself. If restricted by situation or individual you often do best work. You would do well in field of art, design, decoration.

• • •

GENERAL TENDENCIES: News of disruption in communication likely.

PRISONERS FREED

SAIGON (Reuters)—The former chief of police in Saigon, Tran Van Tu, and three deposed police chiefs during the Ngo Dinh Diem regime were released from prison Saturday. Under president Diem, whose regime was toppled in November, 1963, Tran Van Tu was responsible for the arrest of Buddhist monks and nuns who demonstrated against the government. After the 1963 revolution the four police chiefs were arrested, but never brought to trial.

Centennial Fever Burns Hot Through Alberta Farm Town

By PETER WILSON

ST. PAUL, Alta. (CP)—Centennial fever has spread through this little multicultural Alberta farming community like fire through prairie grass.

The first town to complete a centennial project, St. Paul has at least 25 others under way as it sets the pace for the rest of the country is preparing for Canada's 100th birthday since Confederation, 1867.

A composite of two major ethnic groups, French and Ukrainian, the town finished its $200,000 recreation centre last year, before most communities had even started their centennial projects.

Centennial Commissioner John Fisher of Ottawa calls the town "the star of Canada, the most inspirational centennial community in the country."

Lawyer John Lagasse, St. Paul's centennial committee chairman, says the number and variety of projects mean everyone of the town's 3,000 people can become involved.

"Too many people are inclined to sit back and believe a building or a statue or something along those lines is all that a centennial project means," says the 34-year-old native of St. Paul, 133 miles northeast of Edmonton.

"If they believe they aren't involved, they begin to feel the centennial means nothing to them.

"We're getting our people into something and they are finding themselves enjoying it."

SURCHARGE FOR WATER

The first piece of total involvement was an assessment of $1 a month added to the water bill. The money goes toward repaying a $100,000 bank loan used to help build the recreation centre. Another $100,000 was raised by the local recreation committee.

The $1 levy for about 800 householders and businesses was approved in a plebiscite.

"When you can get people to vote themselves a bit of additional taxation, it's just a bit amazing," says Mayor Jules Van Brabant.

St. Paul attracted attention with its second completed project, a sketching contest among Alberta Indians. The winner, Oscar Whiskeyjack, an 18-year-old Cree, was sent to Paris where he toured the Louvre and spread the word about the centennial.

Another project is a retarded children's centre. One source of money for this is a 400-pound centennial bell from the nearby Legoff Indian mission. It hangs on the front of the recreation centre and can be rung by dropping a coin into a timing device.

Many projects are expected to continue even after 1967. One is the sketching club. Another is a growing collection of pictures of early Alberta.

St. Paul is not merely concerned with its own immediate area. It looks to places as far away as France.

For example, it wants to have church bells rung all over France on Dec. 31, 1966, to herald the centennial, and has mounted a campaign to have the cobblestones in front of Champlain's birthplace in Brouage repaired.

EXCHANGE OF FLOWERS

It's trying to promote the manufacture of Canadian centennial toques and is thinking of hiring a train to take as many St. Paul people as possible to Expo 67 in Montreal.

Another project is to get each province to exchange provincial flowers. So far, in St. Paul itself, are planted the Alberta wild rose and Ontario's trillium, a gift from students in Kirkland Lake, Ont.

A St. Paul priest has written a centennial mass for distribution to Roman Catholic parishes across Canada. A German immigrant has set up a plan to bring relatives of townspeople to Alberta during 1967.

A secretary in the office of lawyer Lagasse is doing a petit-point design of her own centennial flag as her own centennial project. Her husband, a photographer who came to Canada from Italy, is making a collection of photos of famous Canadians.

Mr. Lagasse can't explain St. Paul's enthusiasm.

"We've tried to analyse this thing but I can't exactly put my finger on why it happened."

Some say the reason is John Lagasse himself. He is the sparkplug, idea man, publicity agent and organizer of almost all that is connected with the centennial in St. Paul.

He says the centennial first began to interest him when he realized he knew more about British and American history than he did about the background of the area he lives in.

"I saw the centennial as a way of learning our history again and I hoped a lot of people would see it that way."

FILLS NEEDS

He denies that he is the whole centennial show in St. Paul, however, saying "it's a team effort and the people of this town make a magnificent team."

"Centennial is like a spring housecleaning when you get all those things done you should have done a long time ago. Take the recreation centre. We've needed that for a long time. We've needed an art club, better relations with the farmers, and a feeling both here and outside that the town is alive. I think we've got that now."

Mayor Van Brabant sees another, practical side to the matter.

"We're hoping for outside industry. Essentially right now we are nothing more than a service town, a town that draws in the local farmers to buy, nothing more. I think that with all this centennial publicity we may attract someone who realizes the town is ready to grow."

Cattle auctioneer Mickey Flaker sees other benefits.

"I depend for my business on the farmers and to keep the business this town must make the farmers feel welcome. What better way to make them feel welcome than to give them something they can use."

It has been suggested that St. Paul, with its blend of cultures, is merely trying to show the rest of Canada how its people can co-operate. But Mr. Lagasse says this is incidental.

"While we are getting wonderful co-operation from all sections of the community, and this is one of the byproducts we'd hoped for, there's nothing more in it than that.

"A few weeks ago, when our students were in Ottawa on a tour, a Hull radio station tried to get their chaperone to say the reason we're doing this is to show that French people love Canada and Confederation as much as everyone else. If I'd been there I'd have really torn into that announcer."

Asserts Socreds Pawns In Scheme Involving Mining Promoter And Pickersgill

QUEBEC (CP) — Dr. Guy Marcoux, former Social Credit member of Parliament, says the six Social Credit MPs who pledged their support to the Liberals after the 1963 federal election were pawns in a scheme initiated by mining promoter John Doyle and involving Transport Minister Pickersgill.

Dr. Marcoux, in account of a plot to gain the Liberal party an absolute majority in the Commons following the indecisive election is contained in a pamphlet published Wednesday, a forerunner of a book he is writing and hopes to have printed within a few months.

Entitled Dans le Meme Sac (In The Same Bag), the pamphlet links the names of Pickersgill and Mr. Doyle with that of Maxe Dardanner, a Quebec businessman now before the courts on charges of fraud, arson and conspiracy to commit fraud and arson.

Dr. Marcoux, member of the last Parliament for Quebec Montmorency, has appealed to the federal government on several occasions for an investigation of the role Dardanner played in the decision of "the six" to support the Liberals.

In the pamphlet, he says the document pledging allegiance to the Liberals was drafted in a Montreal hotel by Hubert Ducharme, Mr. Doyle's lawyer, "with the collaboration of Hon. Jack Pickersgill," and sworn to in Quebec by Dardanner in his role as a commissioner of the Superior Court.

It was taken to Quebec from Montreal, he says, in Mr. Doyle's private plane, with Mr. Pickersgill, Mr. Doyle, Newfoundland Premier Smallwood and others on board.

Mr. Doyle controls Canadian Javelin Corp., which has vast iron ore and timber holdings in Labrador, and is a personal friend of Mr. Smallwood.

Dr. Marcoux also tells of an offer of $25,000 made to one of the chief organizers of the Social Credit party by an individual who wanted the six members at least five MPs proposed to "exit themselves."

He says he himself and one of his friends were approached by an influential French-Canadian lawyer, who wanted to know "how much I would ask to support the Liberal party."

No names are mentioned in connection with the offer.

In Ottawa, Mr. Pickersgill said in a statement issued by his office that he has no knowledge of any money paid or offered to the six MPs. This was echoed by Prime Minister Pearson in Toronto, who said: "I have spoken to Mr. Pickersgill and he has assured me that he had nothing to do—directly or indirectly—with any offer of a bribe to any member of Parliament." Of anyone else on the matters referred to in the reports on Dr. Marcoux's pamphlet, Mr. Pearson in Quebec, similar denials

Thirty Huddle Below Decks In Atlantic Storm

Try To Get 600 Back On Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Teamster union officials were hard at work today trying to persuade about 600 holdouts involved in a 12-day-old wildcat truckers' strike in Ontario to return to work.

Oshawa, Hamilton, Brantford and the Niagara Peninsula were the only Ontario points still affected by the strike.

"Six hundred men out of 9,000 are involved," an official of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (Ind.) said Wednesday. "The union is working on these to get them back to work. We anticipate we can do this in a couple of days."

In Brantford, an injunction effective until Friday barring strikers from picketing at Jones Transport Ltd. was issued Wednesday.

In Oshawa, a bomb scare temporarily broke up a meeting of about 200 Oshawa truckers Wednesday night. A police search turned up nothing and the meeting broke when truck company representatives and local 938 continued.

NO FIRINGS

M. D. Davis, speaking for Inter City Transport, said no employee would be discharged provided there was an immediate return to work. Spokesmen for the striking workers said they could get everyone back to work today.

At a general meeting late Wednesday of member companies of the Motor Transport Bureau, a statement was drawn up saying: "Where employees have not returned to work, companies are taking all available legal action under various legislation provisions and collective agreements."

Meanwhile, two Toronto men were remanded Wednesday to Oct. 21 after appearing in magistrate's court here on charges of assaulting a truck driver.

LONDON (AP)—The 30-man crew of the stricken Swedish freighter Orion bobbled helplessly below decks in the boiling Atlantic today as an international rescue force strove to pluck the men from disaster.

The decks of the 2,871-ton ship were split open in gale-force winds of up to 55 knots some 370 miles south of Iceland.

The Orion radioed that water was pouring through two nine-inch gaps in the deck as the vessel wallowed in waves towering 40 feet high.

A U.S. naval spokesman in London said there was little the crew could do to help themselves.

It was impossible for them to go on deck, he added, because they would be immediately swept overboard.

Aircraft swung in relays kept an anxious eye on the Orion from the air ready to guide in rescue vessels.

U.S. Navy headquarters in London said the first plane to sight the Swedish ship was a U.S. Air Force C-130 Hercules transport. It was ordered to stand by for several hours in company with a U.S. Air Force C-54 airsea rescue plane.

The Orion was bound from Finland to the U.S. east coast with a cargo of paper pulp when she was stricken around midnight.

Rhodesia's Door Open To Menzies, Consider Rest

By ADAM KELLETT-LONG

SALISBURY (Reuters)—The Rhodesian cabinet early today began its second special session in 24 hours on the burning issue of independence.

"We will talk and talk and talk," Prime Minister Ian Smith said Wednesday night after the first cabinet session.

Smith Asks Menzies' Aid

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesian premier Ian Smith has appealed to Australian Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies to intervene directly in Rhodesia's independence crisis, government sources said today.

They said this was Smith's intention when he said during a television interview Wednesday night he would like Menzies to come to Salisbury.

The sources hinted the Rhodesian government had also made a direct approach to Menzies through diplomatic channels, but this could not be confirmed.

* * *

"We will go on talking so that when we make a decision we are sure it is the right one."

The decision is whether or not this Central African colony will seize independence from Britain—an act the British government says would constitute rebellion. Britain refuses to grant independence until the Negro majority has a greater say in government. Rhodesia, which became self-governing in 1923, is ruled by a white majority government.

Smith said in a television interview Wednesday night that so far there has been no decision on this or on Britain's latest proposal for a Commonwealth summit mission to visit Rhodesia.

But he said the door is open for Sir Robert Menzies, prime minister of Australia, to come

Boost Grants Request

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian universities urged the federal government today to boost its university grants by more than $250,000,000 immediately and to give special aid to the Atlantic Provinces.

A delegation representing 50 universities and colleges presented Prime Minister Pearson with a series of sweeping straight all recommendations in last week's Bladen report.

The universities went further than the report and made four new recommendations:

— "More generous" federal tax equalization payments to the four Atlantic provincial governments.

— Special federal grants of $3,000,000 annually to the Atlantic universities until the requested tax payments are begun.

— Supplementary federal grants to all universities based on the number of non-resident students.

— A bigger increase in federal research grants than that recommended in the Bladen report.

The brief from the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada was submitted to Mr. Pearson by a three-man delegation headed by Rt. Rev. Louis-Albert Vachon, association vice-president and rector of Laval University.

Other members were Dr. Geoffrey Andrew, association executive director, and Prof. W. J. Wainer, vice-president of the University of Manitoba and chairman of the association's finance committee.

The brief also called for increased aid to universities and students by the provincial governments. Copies were mailed to the 10 premiers.

Labor Force More Than Year Ago

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment fell to 178,000 at mid-September, 41,000 lower than in September a year ago, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the labor department said today in a joint report.

The labor force this September was 194,000 greater than a year ago at 7,350,000.

The report said that more than half the decline in the number unemployed represented teen-agers who left the summer labor market to go back to school in September.

This meant that the number of unemployed in September this year was 3½ per cent of the total labor force. The unemployment rate in September, 1964, was 2.1 per cent, and a year earlier it was 3.7 per cent.

The report said that if the figures are adjusted to smooth out seasonal variations, the September unemployment rate this year was 3.6 per cent.

This was the job picture in brief (estimates in thousands):

	Sept Aug Sept. 1965 1965 1964
Labor Force	7,159 7,490 6,965
Employed	6,983 7,279 6,708
Unemployed	251 211 257

The labor department - DBS report said that between August and September, 42,000 persons 25 years of age and older joined the labor force but 338,

Marcoux Revelations Spark Fierce Debate on Hustings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Incumbent MP Guy Marcoux charged Wednesday that Transport Minister Pickersgill offered two financiers now before the courts took part in a secret deal to line up six Social Credit MPs with the minority Liberal bloc after the 1963 election.

He also charged that an unidentified man offered a Social Credit organizer $25,000 in the days after the inconclusive April 8 election for the names of at least five MPs who would agree to "exit themselves."

Mr. Marcoux's charges, contained in a 24-page pamphlet, brought quick and terse statements from Prime Minister Pearson and Mr. Pickersgill.

Denying that the transport minister had any involvement with a bribe offer,

Mr. Pickersgill statement said that to the best of his knowledge, "no money was paid to any member of Parliament or anyone else in connection with the incident the book refers to."

Mr. Marcoux, a physician who has represented Quebec-Montmorency in the Commons since 1962 as a Social Credit MP and seeks re-election Nov. 8 as an independent, told a Quebec press conference he fears reprisals by the underworld and

Tshombe To Run For President

By ARNOLD AMBER

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—Ousted Premier Moise Tshombe will challenge the man who dismissed him, President Joseph Kasavubu, at the presidential elections next February, a reliable source close to both men said today.

It was understood Tshombe told Kasavubu in a face-to-face meeting before the president's dismissal announcement Wednesday: "We will have another meeting at the presidential elections in February."

The informant said Tshombe, who returned from self-imposed exile in Europe last year, heard in advance about the president's plan to dismiss him and tried in vain to talk him out of it.

Kasavubu has served as head of state since Belgium granted independence to the Congo in 1960. Within two weeks of independence, Tshombe, then head of the mineral - rich Katanga province, seceded from the central government.

It was assumed that Kasavubu intended to seek a second term as president, an all-powerful post under the new constitution.

Tshombe, apparently intends to wage an all-out fight to take over the presidential office.

Yet there were increasing signs today that his Convention Nationale Congolais (CONACO) party alliance was rapidly losing strength.

Vatican Council Votes 10 to 1 For Part of Schema on Jews

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Vatican council today refused by a last-ditch conservative effort to block the assembly's declaration on the Jews.

By overwhelming votes of 10 to 1, the prelates of the Roman Catholic church adopted the first part of their document on the church's attitude toward non-Christians, including the Jews.

The voting brought approval to the first four sections of the document. These portions deal with Hindus, Buddhists and Moslems, and introduce the section on Jews.

Initial voting results made public did not concern the key portion of the schema (draft decree) holding that Jews as a whole cannot be blamed for the crucifixion of Christ.

But the first results showed that only a minority of council fathers had decided to reject the schema as a whole. Three conservative bishops circulated a memorandum in the council Wednesday asking such a rejection.

The three complained that the declaration's treatment of the Jews was unacceptable and that its references to other non-Christians were "insufficient or at least superficial."

A council spokesman, announcing the voting results, gave this rundown of the section approved:

—General introduction of the spirituality of other religions, 2,071 to 110.

—Section of the search for God in Hinduism, Buddhism and other religions, 1,953 to 184.

—A section on The Religion of Islam, 1,910 to 189.

—The introduction on the section of the Jewish religion, saying there is a spiritual bond between Christians and Jews and urging "fraternal dialogues" between them, 1,763 to 153.

The council also voted on the next portion of the schema which says: "Although the Jewish authorities and those who followed their lead pressed for the death of Christ (John 19,6) nevertheless what happened to Christ in His passion cannot be attributed to all Jews, without distinction, then alive, nor to the Jews of today."

Results of this vote were not announced since the council adjourned before the ballots were counted. However, council sources said they assumed that it was approved by a margin similar to those in the first four votes.

In its present version, the document leaves out the word "deicide" in saying the crucifixion cannot be blamed on all Jews of today or Christ's day.

Indonesian Red Leader Directs War With Army

JAKARTA (Reuters) — The Communist Party today that D. N. Aidit, head of Indonesia's 3,000,000 - member Communist party, was leading resistance against the army in Central Java.

Radio Jakarta announced that President Sukarno would make an important statement tonight to Indonesian and foreign correspondents.

Aidit flew to Jogjakarta in central Java Oct. 2; the day after an abortive anti-government coup here in which the Communists were alleged to be implicated. Aidit now is meeting illegally with party members, the armed forces newspaper said.

The armed forces paper said there were indications that rebel groups were trying to sabotage vital projects in Jakarta, and called for security measures against any attempted takeovers.

Some 20,000 persons at a Jakarta rally today demanded a ban on all organizations that supported the coup attempt. The speakers were leaders of various groups—not including any Communists.

But observers here believe President Sukarno will refuse strong demands for a ban on the Communist party, but will replace Aidit and his pro-Chinese supporters by more loyal and "Indonesian style" Communist leaders.

Meanwhile, the growth of anti-Chinese sentiment has been reported in the country.

Police today blocked the main shopping centre to traffic in an area of Jakarta where most stores are Chinese. They said they had received reports that Moslem students planned to attack the stores.

Anti-Chinese incidents have followed reports of possible Chinese Communist involvement on the abortive coup.

Home Care Program Urged for Retarded

The October general meeting of the Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children was held at the school, 281 John Street, with the president, Mrs. T. Stovell, presiding. Among those welcomed to the meeting were five members of the Kingston associa-tion. Tribute was paid to the late Mrs. Flora Gelsthorpe, a loyal and faithful member of the association. Her work with the young adult retarded of this district will long be remembered.

Brief reports from the various committee chairmen were presented, with John Ross, financial chairman, report in g that the tag day would be Oct. 15 and 16.

The president introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Anne Stafford, home care consultant for the Ontario Association for the Mentally Retarded and Mrs. Hazel Baker, home care chairman for O.A.M.R., who accompanied Mrs. Stafford.

Mrs. Stafford opened her remarks by stressing that every one of the 95 local associations for the mentally retarded in Ontario should double their efforts in an all out program in home care. This should include services for parents, prospective adoptors and adults, regardless of the number to serve. She stated that the school program is just one phase of the vast outlook for the many retarded. Many volunteers are need to add impetus to these new challenges. These are secured only by asking and challenging people. The ultimate goal is to help each and every child a chance to live at home and in the community. This goal can be realized only if there are services provided for all ages.

Nursery classes can start with two children and handcraft classes or sheltered workshops begin with the graduates from such classes for retarded children. Mrs. Stafford said she and others will gladly arrange a program of co-ordination with other agencies in the city to further the scope of the work. She related her experiences in Hamilton during this past summer, where she was consultant to homes where problems exist. This was summed up in the statement "If the community needed to be taught how to speak to the adult retarded, for example in cases in which legal action is involved and the retarded is in court. Mrs. Stafford said "Let's clarify anxious for each of the 95 locals in Ontario and work hard to establish sheltered workshops or at least handcraft classes for those graduating from school at 18 years of age. This, she said, would require a capital expenditure of several thousands of dollars and new accommodation apart from the school buildings.

Mrs. Win Glover, local home care chairman, thanked the speaker for the challenging address and the helpful and practical suggestions given by Mrs. Baker.

In the Belleville association a sheltered workshop committee has been formed, comprised of the following members: Mrs. D. Bradley, Mrs. R. Gibney, Mr. A. Parkhurst, Mr. J. Ross and Dr. C. Dondale, chairman.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

Salvationists Plan Varied Program Here

All through 1965 The Salvation Army has been celebrating its one hundredth year of service to mankind, and will have been the ways used to mark this historic fact. The Founder, William Booth, did not envisage the host of consecrated men, women and young people who would form this Army of Salvation when he stood on Mile End Waste in London, England, and first set to challenge the forces of sin and evil in 1865.

For over 80 years in this area now known as the Mid-Ontario Division of The Salvation Army, the "Army" has proclaimed its message and to mark the centenary the Mid-Ontario Division is holding its Centenary Congress meetings in Belleville, Friday, October 22 to Sunday, October 24.

Salvationists and friends will be gathering from east, west, north and south to join in a series of gatherings being planned to mark this special occasion.

Congress leaders will be the Provincial Commander for Newfoundland, Colonel and Mrs. George Higgins and among the speakers will be Hon. Walter Dinsdale, M.P., who will address a special meeting for men on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. in the Quinte Hotel.

The musical highlight of this series of meetings will be the visit of The Salvation Army Temple Band, an all brass band of superb quality which will be featured in the Festival of Praise on Saturday night in the Belleville Collegiate auditorium. Along with the band will be soprano soloist, Mrs. Winnie Watson of Hamilton and the outstanding Peterborough Temple Songster Brigade — and of particular interest to teenagers and all young people the Crusader's Combo, the group with the beat from Guelph under Major George Clarke.

His Worship Mayor Jack Ellis of the city of Belleville will bring his greetings, as will Robert Temple, M.P. for Hastings South in the parliament.

Among participants will be Major Dorothy Page who is to furlough from India, the superintendent of the Salvation Army Mary Scott School for the Blind in Kalimpong, North East India, who will speak on her experiences during the special meeting of "Witness to Century of Service" on Monday afternoon at 2.45 p.m. in the Belleville Collegiate.

A group of Senior Light Converts, led by Brigadier J. Monk, the Corps' Officer of Toronto Harbor Light, will testify to transformed lives.

These Centenary celebrations for Salvationists and friends will be opened by a "Youth Spectacular" in the King George School on North Front Street on Friday night at 7.45 p.m.

The Victoria Avenue Baptist Church in Belleville will be the setting for a special women's rally to be held on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. when Mrs. Colonel George Higgins will be guest speaker and the Rev. Edith Mainprize of Belleville will preside.

All services on Sunday, Oct. 24th will be held in the Belleville Collegiate Institute, Church Street, and the public will be welcome.

Armed Services Personnel Must Register to Vote

Armed services personnel who live in Belleville and want to vote on the November 22nd liquor plebiscite will have to register at city hall to get their names on the list.

The reason is that the federal voters' list is being used for the liquor plebiscite and in federal elections armed services personnel vote at their station and not at their place of residence.

City Clerk Adam Stalker says there are possibly several hundred service personnel living in Belleville who will have to register individually if they wish to vote on the liquor plebiscite.

If such persons register at city hall or call the city clerk before November 6th, their names can be placed directly on the list.

After that date service personnel wishing to have their names added to the list will have to appear before County Judge J. C. Anderson who will hold court of revision at county hall on November 10th.

Will Replace Street Lamps At Intersection

The city public utilities commission is going to light up the Bridge-Pinnacle Street intersection by replacing a number of the street lamps installed in the late 1940's.

These are being installed are mercury vapors of the type which have gone up in great numbers in the outlying parts of the city.

Utility Commission Manager E. H. Burnham said the mercury vapor lamps give twice the output with only half the wattage required for the present lamps in the downtown area. Approximately 650 of the mercury vapor lamps are now installed in the city.

Teen-age Youth Jailed for Three Months

A teenage youth was jailed for three months today after his lawyer appealed him to police for theft of a $40 money order.

Grant Lawrence, Sidney township, 19, was suspended sentence for theft, appeared indifferent and lazy, and his family pleaded for him very tearfully.

Crown Attorney John Principle called the youth a "thieving drone (who) steals from the hand that feeds him and he is not worthy of any consideration at all."

Two Arrested For Break-ins In Madoc Area

A series of break-ins at hunting camps in the Madoc area has brought charges by Provincial Police against two teenagers.

In Hastings County jail are Gordon Passmore, 18, and Donald Webb, 17. Police say they have no fixed addresses.

The two were spared over an estimated two days, saw theft of utensils, bedding and food from four camps. A rifle and shotgun were stolen from a house on Ewart Lake, at Bancockburn, just north of Madoc.

Airman Placed On Probation For Two Years

A 20-year-old airman, guilty of taking two cars — one of which he wrecked — today was placed on probation for two years on condition he remain in the RCAF.

In fact, the decision of the force to keep Robert Harold Wood in its ranks at Trenton was partly responsible for the decision of Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Wood two weeks ago pleaded guilty to joyriding in two cars — one vehicle taken from a parking lot, was later found wrecked near Brighton for an estimated loss of $1,200.

The magistrate ordered Wood to pay $720 toward the loss — in 30 monthly instalments, during his two-year suspended sentence.

Magistrate Wills noted the restitution was "considerably less" than the damage estimate but commensurate with Wood's ability to pay.

Boost Grants

lished Oct. 6 by a four - man commission of inquiry named by the universities in April, 1964, and headed by Dean Vincent Bladen of the University of Toronto.

The report said economic growth depends heavily on investment in education and recommended that federal aid to universities be jacked up five-fold to $330,000,000 in fiscal year from about $80,000,000 the current year ending March 31.

This aid would consist of $104,000,000 in research grants, about $118,000,000 in operating grants, $98,000,000 in funds for new buildings, plus undetermined amounts in grants to medical institutions and tax relief for students, parents and university graduates.

ENDORSED REPORT

The universities endorsed the Bladen recommendation that a federal minister be given, or even as one of his duties, the responsibility of co - ordinating the federal aid programs to improve efficiency and planning.

The brief said the "less flexible" student loan plan does not have special fiscal needs.

"We therefore urge the federal government to provide more generous equalization payments to these provinces as quickly as possible."

The Bladen report argued against any special aid to the Atlantic universities, aroused protests from university heads in the region.

High Failure Rate Among OPP Officers

HAMILTON (CP) — A high failure rate among Ontario Provincial Police officers writing promotion exams is causing dissatisfaction and frustration ment in the ranks, a senior official says.

Less than 25 per cent of about 800 OPP officers passed the exam given at district headquarters throughout the province.

"A lot of the boys are discouraged and disgruntled," Thomas Trimble, OPP deputy commissioner said in an interview Wednesday. "But it was a very fair exam and they will be eligible to write it again when our 'eligibility list' is depleted."

The exam for first class constables, corporals, sergeants and commissioned ranks was set by a firm of consultants in Philadelphia and is the same as that used by major metropolitan police forces in the United States.

"It's a very stiff test and only senior personnel are entitled to write it," he said. For example, a constable must have several years' service.

The OPP adopted the test method last year when the force reorganized its promotion system.

"We feel it's a good system and we're not unhappy with the results. If the men are disappointed—well, that's natural, and we're not closing the door on them."

Never Allowed To See Boy Says Witness

OTTAWA (CP)—Social workers and a nurse testified Wednesday in the starvation-death trial of two parents that they were never allowed to see three-year-old Gary Edward Craig in the months before his death.

The testimony was given at the trial of James Craig, 32, and his wife, Muriel, 40, who were charged with criminal negligence following the death of their son—one of eight children—last Dec. 17.

Mrs. Jean M. Roberts and Peter Yarema of the Children's Aid Society testified that they visited the Craig home several times without seeing Gary. They said Mrs. Craig told them all eight children were well.

The day before Gary died, they said, Mrs. Craig had also told them this but several children had interrupted to say all were well except Gary.

The children were hushed by their mother who said Gary was away at her sister's, they testified.

Testimony was given Tuesday that Gary died of starvation.

Margaret Gavard, public health nurse, told of weekly visits between May and December in which she never saw or allowed to see Gary. She said Mrs. Craig would tell her Gary was sleeping upstairs.

All three witnesses were shown photographs of Gary's body taken at an autopsy performed the day after his death. All said that they would have had the boy removed to hospital immediately had they seen him in such a state before death.

Minister Opens Plowing Match At Milliken

By IAN MacLAINE

MILLIKEN, Ont. (CP)—Federal Agriculture Minister Harry Hays Wednesday urged further co-operation at all levels of government to offset possible food shortages as 38 competitors completed their opening day furrows in the Canadian plowing championships.

Mr. Hays was speaking to a coat - flocked crowd beneath cloudy skies at the official opening of the matches in this hamlet of 200 persons on the northern fringe of Metropolitan Toronto.

The Canadian championships are being held in conjunction with the 52nd international plowing championships that will decide an Ontario champion by Saturday.

The two-day Canadian championships will mean representation from every province except Alberta and Newfoundland, started with contestants plowing stubble in 60-foot wide plots and ends today with sod plowing.

Plowing conditions were ideal for opening day as the clay-loam soil, saturated by several days of rain, was firm and closely packed.

Mr. Hays, who flew in from Winnipeg for the opening, said continued co-operation by all agricultural officials is necessary if farmers are to continue to meet the country's needs for farm-grown products.

With just six per cent of Canada's 2,029,000,000 acres being farmed, he said that only through proper farming programs will the needs of an expected 40,000,000 persons be met in the year 2,000.

Earlier, Ontario's agricultural minister, William Stewart, said the tent city that provides a commercial back-drop for the annual international event also brings to light the importance of automation in the agricultural industry.

Veteran Charles Bonney, 38, of Princeton, who finished second at the world championships in Northern Ireland in 1959, and novice Keith Robinson, 24, of Cookstown, are the Ontario entries.

Lord Snowdon At Peak as Photographer

LONDON (Reuters) — Lord Snowdon, Princess Margaret's husband, this week will reach a new peak in his career as a photographer.

An unprecedented survey of the contemporary London art scene, for which he has been busy during the last three years taking nearly 300 photographs of artists and art personalities, will be published today.

The book, Private View, is the result of his collaboration with two other specialists.

The two, Nan Robertson, director of the Whitechapel Gallery, and John Russell, art historian and critic, have written the text.

The book crowns the quiet but persistent efforts made by the Queen's brother-in-law to resume a successful professional career which many thought was over at the time of his marriage five years ago.

In "private view" he uses his own talent to give the public an idea of the people who have made London, with Paris and New York, one of the world's three capitals of art.

Official Opening Is Planned For V. P. Carswell School

TRENTON — The Trenton Board of Education, meeting last night, voted to hold an official opening for the new V. P. Carswell Elementary School on Reid Street, probably in November, and in co-operation with the newly-formed home and school group at the school. Board chairman T. S. Ketcheson suggested the home and school association might want to have the official opening of the school coincide with the group's inaugural meeting.

Wm. Pickering, building superintendent, suggested that the opening be held off until workmen finished a hard-top area back of the school for car parking. He said, however, that this shouldn't be too far distant as the area had been staked out.

Town workmen will build a walking access off Sidney Street to the new school, also before the opening takes place.

DENY BAN ASKED

Mr. Ketcheson and the board members disclaimed all knowledge of an alleged request from the board to do away with parking on the north side of King Street, opposite the Trenton Country Club. The board's legal committee had proposed the parking ban, and council had approved, but P. J. Attic, president of the Country Club, made serious objections to the ban at last week's council meeting, claiming "discrimination" against the club. He said golfers and others would find it unhandy to carry equipment if they could not park their cars in the vicinity of the club. Council members seemed to think the Board of Education had requested the ban on the north side.

Board secretary Miss Eva Baker read out a letter from the town in which school guards were promised for the corners of Sidney Street with Wilson Crescent and North Murray Street.

Another letter from the town assured the board that it need not worry for the present about school expansion in the West Mount Park, Trenton West area, as there won't be any "expansion" of the housing development until the developer, William Sidor complies with the town's requests for completion of promised services in the existing development.

A public nurse's report from Mrs. J. M. Wilson, said that there had been four cases of mumps, four of infectious hepatitis, 11 of skin infections and nine of pediculosis in the schools.

At the high school, students have suffered such ailments as athlete's foot, poison ivy, poison oak and minor injuries in the workshops.

TEACHERS TO MEET

E. T. Morris, superintendent of public schools, reported that a teachers' convention would be held in Peterborough on Oct. 22 and the students will get a holiday that day.

High school principal John Garrett said 450 persons had registered for night classes at the school.

E. M. Parker Jr. suggested that a part-time kindergarten teacher be hired for Queen Elizabeth School, as all sessions in morning and afternoon classes are not getting the full advantage of the program. He said that he and Mr. Morris were agreed that the one teacher, Mrs. Arbuckle, could handle 20 students in the morning and, with assistance, 42 in the afternoon class.

Finance chairman, Douglas Whitley said the public and high school budgets stood a very good chance of ending "in the black" this year. He suggested each chairman make an estimate of the 1966 budget requirements for the benefit of new board members who will enter the field "cold" after the December elections.

J. C. Bowman reported that a serious sore problem at Prince Charles School would be cleared up as soon as a nearby factory converted its heating system to gas.

Mr. Pickering told the board that the V. P. Carswell school would be getting water through ordinary chinnels before the end of the week. A lack of laterals to the school has made it necessary to bring water in through overland pipes.

Wm. Wilkinson of the advisory vocational committee, asked for, and got, more equipment for the commercial department at the high school. The desks, ladders and other pieces of equipment will cost $1,725.26.

Jack Hadley, air cadet liaison officer said the high school cadet quota had been reduced this year then cut to 70, and that the cadet program was progressing favorably.

Following the four-hour-long board meeting, the members adjourned to the new auditorium-gymnasium at North Trenton school for the official opening of this part of the new addition, which was held in conjunction with the home and school group at the school.

Cargo Airliner Said Downed By Viet Cong

SAIGON (Reuters) — Viet Cong guerrillas have claimed responsibility for the downing of an Air Viet Nam airliner Sept. 16, which crashed north of Saigon killing all 41 persons aboard, U.S. mission sources disclosed today.

News of the Viet Cong claim came, the sources said, when a morse transmission over Radio Hanoi was monitored in Saigon a few days ago.

The transmission contained a roundup of Viet Cong activities during which the guerrillas boasted of having shot down "an enemy cargo plane" over the area of Quang Ngai city.

TRENTON — Two entries have been received for this year's Chamber of Commerce Santa Claus parade, planned for November 27. The Trenton Citizens' Band, in their new uniforms and the 6-piece Canteer Brass and Reed Band will play for marching majorettes.

OMB Judge Approves Move To Rezone Land

TRENTON — A. H. Arrell, a judge of the Ontario Municipal Board, Tuesday approved in principal the rezoning of a piece of property in the Dundas Street West - Catherine Street and Henry Street area to permit local builder Stan Klemenkie to erect an apartment complex on the property owned by the late Senator Wm. A. Fraser.

The OMB will issue a formal decision on the matter after details as to parking space, access and guaranteed perpetual care of the building have been worked out between lawyers representing Mr. Klemenkie and persons living in the vicinity of the proposed apartment building.

STARTS OWN PAPER

A former free lance writer and photographer in the Trenton area, Mrs. Nicky Marchese, has started up a weekly tabloid-type newspaper in Hamilton, the "Herald."

Mrs. Marchese worked as a reporter on the Trentonian and did supply work for the Trenton news in the Intelligencer when she lived in Trenton.

Following a move to Hamilton two years ago, Mrs. Marchese became women's editor of the Burlington Gazette.

Also on the staff of the new weekly, is James Marchese and Mrs. Helen Upper, a former women's editor at the Trentonian, has a weekly column in the publication.

General Visits 6 Repair Depot

TRENTON— A distinguished visitor to Trenton yesterday was Major-General R. P. Rothschild, commander of Materiel Command, who arrived at No. 6 Repair Depot to be greeted by the commanding officer, Group Captain C. R. Thompson, early in the day, reviewed a guard of honor, took the salute at a ceremonial parade and toured the depot.

Study Tour Discussed At Meeting

TRENTON — Interested students and their parents have been invited to attend a meeting in Trenton High School auditorium tonight, starting at 7:30 p.m., where plans for a proposed study tour of western European countries next summer will be discussed.

Originator of the idea for the six weeks' students' study tour was Peter Miedema, a teacher at the school. Approximate cost, including air fare, would be $500.

Tonight, a representative of the KLM air lines will show a film on the countries to be visited during the tour and answer questions from the audience.

U.S. Job Corps Problems

As social reformers have found to their cost, the task of raising standards of living is often a thankless one. Low levels of education among those they seek to help tend to frustrate their efforts.

The Americans are running into such a problem with their anti-poverty drive, and specifically with the job training program. So bad is the situation in the Job Corps Centre at Camp Atterbury, Ind., for example, that Indiana Republican Richard Roudebush has suggested that the centre be closed.

Fulton Lewis Jr., Washington correspondent of The Syracuse Post-Standard, says that townsfolk and merchants in the camp area have been harassed by unruly corpsmen.

"Trainees have been arrested on charges ranging from sodomy to assault to drunkenness . . . Late last month the operator of a local auto raceway decided to invite 30 corpsmen to the track as an evening's entertainment. The guests demonstrated their gratitude by shouting obscenities at women customers, hurling bricks into the crowd and creating a small-scale riot."

But there is another side to the question. The Indianapolis News, in an investigation of camp conditions, blames policymakers who have laid down official guidelines "that make it almost impossible for Job Corps officials to discipline the unruly."

In one barracks, the newspaper claims, the most serious-minded, thoughtful corpsmen who would like to benefit from the program look to the staff for protection and when it has not been forthcoming some have dropped out. Forty corpsmen were recently listed as absent without leave.

Camp Atterbury is apparently not alone in its problems. The St. Petersburg, Fla., city council earlier this year voted to close its women's job corps centre. Discipline was nonexistent, according to columnist Lewis, and girls were dismissed from the centre for drunkenness, pregnancy and a "lack of motivation."

Hong Kong's Boom

Hong Kong, the British crown colony and port on the communist Chinese mainland, has been enjoying a boom. But now, after four years of rapid advance, the colony needs a breathing spell.

The boom, leading government official told Neville Nankivell of the Toronto Financial Post, "has run out of money."

Nevertheless, the progress that has been made, including the near-doubling of domestic exports in the last five years, has opened up greater trade and investment opportunities for Canada.

"Incomes," says Nankivell, "are higher, working conditions are better, and Hong Kong has an Asian standard of living second only to Japan." Despite its small area (only 398 square miles for a population of nearly 4 million) huge new blocks of public housing have been built to resettle nearly one million people, new luxury hotels are accommodating thousands of tourists and modern factories have turned the colony into an important manufacturing centre.

In the process, total trade between Canada and Hong Kong has risen $50 million a year, double what it was five years ago. But Canadian trade officials believe there is a vast potential in products not yet touched, such as pharmaceuticals and building materials.

Mackinnon Black finds Hong Kong a valuable trading partner, as well as a useful outlet to the western world. Nankivell says that China sells Hong Kong the equivalent of $375 million a year and buys only $10 million in return. The rest is then available for foreign exchange with which to pay for such essential commodities as wheat.

China also earns about $200 million a year from the banks, trading companies, department stores and other concerns it operates in Hong Kong. From this it may be deduced that China, like Russia, is at heart a capitalist nation. It also helps to explain why China has its quota of millionaires.

Chilly New England

The minimum temperature in Belleville the other night was 32 degrees, which gave rise to thoughts of anti-freeze for the car and other winterizing chores.

But in New England there has been a foretaste of what is to come. Six-foot drifts blocked the auto road to Mount Washington in New Hampshire. Hurricane force winds whipped the 6,288-foot summit and drifts blocked the eight-mile auto road at the six-mile mark.

But then, Mount Washington was living up to its chilly reputation. It has always been a dangerous peak, even in summer when fog and cloud often hamper climbers.

During the current wintry blast, winds up to 126 m.p.h. and a temperature of only 4 above zero were recorded.

Result of cancellation of subcontracts on bomber parts construction, approximately 102 employees of the Universal Moulded Products have been laid off, it was announced this morning by the plant manager.

The layoff was mandatory with the cancellation of contracts, according to the manager, who stated that only a skeleton staff, at present, was being retained at the plant. It was hoped that the layoff would be but very temporary as the company has post-war plans for future expansion which will call for increased personnel. No statement regarding the possible length of the layoff was bazarded by the plant officials. They stated that this morning's layoff was expected.

Strictly Personal
Demagogue Has No Counterpart

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: The success of evil assures its own failure — for example, counterfeiting can gain only as long as most people are honest and most money sound; if counterfeiting became wide-spread, then all money would fall under suspicion and the counterfeiters would eventually perish by the very prevalence of their "success."

The density of auto traffic has created a new problem which we have scarcely begun to attack — namely, that the driver who sets off a chain reaction culminating in an accident is not ordinarily involved in the collision taking place around him, and is sometimes even unaware that he has caused an accident.

We complain about "difficult" modern poetry, as though we really understand the great poetry of the past; but not one person on a thousand really knows what Dominus meant, when he said of Hamlet, "Though this be madness, yet there is method in it." He didn't mean, as most believe, that Hamlet was being calculating or slyly witty.

(Likewise with dozens of other famous Shakespearean quotations, such as "more honored in the breach than in the observance," and "one touch of nature makes the whole world kin," which are grossly misunderstood even by those who use them.)

Americans simply have no conception of the amount of destructive power at our command; as Prof. Mario Salvadori has graphically said, if we had begun dropping a Hiroshima - type bomb the day Christ was born, and we had continued dropping a bomb a day, every day of the week, every week of the year, from the year zero to the present, we would still have a six months left over — and each of these bombs can kill 100,000 people.

To the pessimists who still stubbornly insist that the universe is "just like a machine," one can only repeat Robert Frost's question: "Did you ever see a machine without a pedal for the foot, or a lever for the hand, or a button for the finger?"

Why are there demagogues, but no "anti-demagogues"? Why are there men who rise up on the ruins of hate and anger and vengeance, so that we form mobs and rush across town, or form armies and rush across borders — but none who stimulate our feelings of love and compassion so that we rush anywhere to perform good deeds and acts of mercy?

The saying, "each to his own taste" is useful only after we decide which things are matters of taste only, and which are matters of judgment; when a subject permits of judgment, to evaluate it by "taste" is as silly and undermining as comparing the engine efficiency of two cars by their colors.

To Your Good Health
Whether to Remove Ulcer Is Difficult to Decide

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Two years ago my husband was hospitalized with bleeding ulcers, but no pain. Since then he has not been bothered until last winter when he had severe pain but no bleeding.

X-rays showed a duodenal ulcer plus a shallow gastric ulcer.

Our doctor wanted to operate saying this stomach or gastric ulcer could become cancerous.

My husband then went to an internist who said no, that because of the location and small size it would not become cancerous, and that he would not think of operating.

Now we don't know what to do. Can an ulcer of this description turn cancerous? Can it be cured? — Mrs. J. H.

* * *

If this ulcer becomes cancerous, or if it doesn't but becomes so troublesome that it has to be removed anyway, then the first doctor is right.

I would be most careful to have continued examinations to check this ulcer.

Duodenal ulcers rarely are malignant. Gastric (or stomach) ulcers have a much higher incidence of cancer, so when an ulcer is in the stomach rather than duodenum, that's the time to play safe.

X-rays taken periodically, to see whether the ulcer is getting bigger or smaller, are an important safeguard. It's a means of seeing how each ulcer is behaving.)

In addition, tests to detect anemia, if any, and to determine the acid content of the stomach are valuable. Direct observation of the ulcer, by means of a gastroscope, can give clues as to the likelihood of the stomach lesion becoming cancerous.

If this gastric ulcer doesn't heal, then surgery must be considered. But if some signs of healing become apparent, then, of course, you are warranted in going ahead with ordinary treatment rather than surgery.

There are certain things in medical care which lend themselves to yes-or-no positive answers. There are others which do not.

It is most certainly wrong to think that all gastric ulcers become cancerous. They don't. But it is dangerous to forget the possibility that some of them may.

You've got to know when to be on your guard. This is one of those times.

(Dr. Molner's booklet on "How to Heal Peptic Ulcers and Keep Them Healed" may be obtained by sending 20 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.)

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: In the last couple of years I have developed a drooping eyelid. It is not hereditary. What causes this? Can an operation correct it? I am in my late 20's and it is ruining my appearance. — G. M. L.

I think I'd better sidestep this because there are differ e n t causes. You should consult an eye specialist (or possibly a neurologist). Treatment might or might not involve surgery.

Dear Dr. Molner: Two years ago my doctor told me I had a goitre and recommended 10 drops of iodine twice a day at first, and then five drops daily. Could one take too much iodine as well as too little? Should there be a special diet. — Mrs. F. S.

Yes, it's possible to take too much iodine, but small doses are very effective and not harmful in some kinds of goitre. With doses of five to 10 drops you will not get too much. A special diet is neither necessary nor helpful.

Ottawa Offbeat
Thoughtful, Concerned Public To Make Meaningful Decision

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Notes from the Campaign Trail, — Watch them, day after day, night after night, in city and town, at corn roast or barbecue, in high school auditorium or civic arena — and know that something's happening.

Watch the crowds, that is.

The crowds and their faces seem different this time.

But the leaders are the same — except maybe more so.

For the leaders it is only an encore.

Diefenbaker has the part four times before, and Mike Pearson three.

And for one of them — this fifth time for the Conservative, and fourth for the Liberal will be the Last Hurrah.

But this "One More Time" — and for each of them it is with this one — isn't making that much actual difference. The jokes are stale. The gestures are unchanged. The clichés are even more thread-bare The peculiarly personal mannerisms are the same.

Dief, the man with the flashing light - blue eye and white flying mane, is still angry and crying, as he has in every campaign, that phrase that has become almost a battle - cry: "They said it couldn't be done!"

THE LINES

And Mike, the man with the quiet smile and straw-pile hair, is still slightly anguished and deploring, as he has in every campaign, the unconfortable necessity of becoming involved in all the whoop-holler-and-bullshine he so obviously finds utterly distasteful.

Dief shakes an accusing finger. Mike shakes a puzzled head.

But while almost everything about them this time is the same as it was before there are those other campaigns — the lines are slightly different, or delivered with different body is sitting up and listening intently.

You see it on those faces in the crowds.

People this time are concerned. Perhaps deeply.

Beside the issues — whatever they may be: Crime and the shadow of the Mafia; access to Peace Tower; Medicare, National Unity and Quebec. More for Education. Trade — and all the rest — there's seems to be the knowledge that this time the vote will be a sentence of political death for one or the other of these two leaders, now at the brackish end of the years that brings the Old Age Pension.

So the halls are packed to the doors, people stand in the aisles at the back, and out on the street to listen.

And the halls are quiet. Even Dief doesn't stir up much of a storm.

These silent, thoughtful crowds are a new and strange breed.

It could be that this is the first time a great many people have concerned themselves enough about their country to actually leave the comforts of home and go out in the chill fall night to a campaign rally.

WANT TO KNOW

There are questions. Good and thoughtful ones. For both leaders. Not hostile ones. But rather from people who want to know. They don't often get answered, for it is not a way to make yourself noticed in a big crowd, and even more difficult to make yourself heard over the roar of a platform loudspeaker.

Both leaders are getting close thoughtful attention from these crowds whose concern they must see in their faces.

The crowds nod in agreement when one warns them of the peril to the public interest of the failure of dignity, pride, integrity and honor in High Government Places.

And they nod in similar agreement when another counsels them that the political misdemeanors of a very few underlings must not be allowed to divert their attention from the real issues, the big problems, or detract from the High Government Purposes.

And they nod, too, in approval, when both leaders caution them of the hard, and perhaps unpopular or even painful decisions in the interests of Unity that lie ahead for whatever government is returned to Parliament Hill.

Equally, they get a good and understanding hearing when they talk about education and what must be done, whatever the cost, to assure university or special technological train i n g for all qualified young people.

Deeply concerned with the nation's affairs, these crowds obviously are deciding which man seems the better qualified, the more capable to address himself to their future. Their faces say that the decision is one to make their every vote count. To reprieve one — and condemn the other.

Somebody could be in for a surprise.

Today in History

Oct. 14, 1965 . . .

William Penn, the Quaker founder of Pennsylv a n i a, was born 321 years ago today — in 1644 — in England. Perpetually persecuted for his religious beliefs, he converted a claim on the government in his father's estate to a land grant in America and founded a colony in 1682 for a haven for other people suffering for their beliefs. He spent only four years in Pennsylvania on two visits, and left the colonists fairly free to run their own lives.

1806 — Battle of Jena was fought.

1927 — French aviators Dieudonne Coste and Joseph Le Brix first flew from Africa to South America.

First World War

Fifty years ago today — 1915 — Bulgaria was stormed as the Austro-German invasion of S e r b i a gathered momentum from the Western front. German troops reoccupied lost trenches near Arleux.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today — in 1940 — London underwent its heaviest air raid to date, only one German aircraft being shot down for four RAF fighters lost. Russian troops and tanks were reported to be building airfields in Bessarabia.

Voters' Indecision Reflects Leadership

Montreal Gazette

This election has at least one distinction no other election has ever had: it has the greatest number of undecided voters. According to the latest poll, 36 per cent of the Canadian electorate has not yet made up its mind which party to support. It is an outstanding figure. It means that more than one elector in three hasn't decided, presumably because he can't decide. He is puzzled into indecision.

At the first glance this might seem a distressing — even unappalling — state of affairs. What has happened to Canadian party politics that the voter is examined more closely, perhaps it is not a sickness, a malaise, in the body politic, so much as a healthy reaction. For what it may indicate is not so much a hesitation in supporting any party but a realization that no party is really offering the nation what it wants and needs.

If this is so, then this 36 per cent of the uncommitted comes as a healthy rebuke. It is, in effect, a demand that something more adequate be offered in the way of policy and leadership than is being offered now.

The late W. L. Mackenzie King used to state on numerous occasions that "Canada is a difficult country to govern." But the very fact that Canada is a difficult one divided country calls out, for that very reason, for the quality of leadership that can adjust its conflicts. It is an exacting discipline, for it demands that the real leader in Canadian political life cannot depend solely, or even unduly, on regional, or sectional, or class appeal.

If in the last Parliament there was an assortment of parties, all of them short of a national majority, this was more than an unfortunate accident. It was a majestic law that any party in this country that becomes too much of one thing, that roots itself too deeply in certain areas, or draws support exclusively from one class, will find itself cut down to the dimensions of a minority.

The national leadership has to be such that it will satisfy nobody too much, but give all the realistic hope that a national consensus has been achieved.

Do any of the parties contesting today for the voters' allegiance measure up to this requirement? They are all rich in promises. But in the case of them can really promise that it will leave no region with adequate representation, and will avoid disproportionate dependence on any region, or class or group?

Nor is it simply a matter of consensus. For there can be no hope of a consensus unless there is the conviction that the personal qualities of the leaders are such as to bring it about and to preserve it amidst all troubles.

It is not part of the hesitation in the voters today the healthy awareness that they are as deep having no leader? They may see in the leadership offered them the colorlessness of the grip; or the color without the grip; or the dreary attempt to manipulate class hostilities, or to conceal that this should be announced as righteousness.

It would be a calamity if the 36 per cent of undecided voters are to produce another undecided election, with no party in effective power at the end of indecision through which Canada is passing may prove to be one of the most maturing era of its history. Painful as the anxieties of indecision may appear, there may be as much health as sickness in a people who demand what they are not being given — competent leadership for the balanced reconciliation of a diverse country, difficult to govern.

Wednesday, prices on the exchange were mixed in a dull day's trading.

Industrials were unimpressively higher as losses outnumbered gains by 118 to 113. However, gains went to issues which figure prominently in the index and it climbed a full point.

Distillers Seagram advanced ¼ to 37¼ with gains of ¼ going to Algoma Steel at 66, I.A.C. at 24¼ and Oshawa Wholesale A at 50½. Canada Iron jumped 1¼ to 60¼.

Senior base metals were higher, Hudson Bay added ⅛ to 74, but Craigmont dipped ⅛ to 11¼. The list was given a boost by Pine Point which gained to 76½. Its parent company, Cominco, was up ⅛ to 47 and CPR, which in turn controls Cominco, tacked on ⅛ to 67¼.

Golds sagged with losses going to a long list of issues. Prominent were Campbell Red Lake, which fell ¼ to 194, and Sullivan, which eased 10 cents to 5.75.

Western oils were the busiest section of the market. Westates advanced 25 cents to 6.25 and Central Del Rio ¼ to 12. Asamera spurted 17 cents to 1.56. Scurry, Rainbow and Hudson's Bay each declined ⅛ to 17¼ and 16¾.

On index, western oils fell .29 to 100.14 and golds 1.37 to 152.6. Base metals were up .20 to 81.99 and the TSE index .23 to 157.34. Volume was 2,598,000 shares compared with 2,919,000 Tuesday.

Sudbury Police Officer Killed Answering Call

SUDBURY (CP)—A city policeman, Sgt. Larry Quesnel, died in hospital here this morning shortly after being shot while answering a routine call at an apartment house.

Police filled the apartment with tear-gas and later found the body of Lionel Proulx on the apartment floor.

No other details were available.

Rebekahs, Odd Fellows Hold Joint Installation Service

THOMASBURG — On Monday evening, October 4, a crowd of about 250 persons packed the I.O.O.F. hall, Thomasburg, to the doors, to witness a large and joint installation of officers for the year 1965-66, for Crescent Rebekah Lodge, No. 139, and the I.O.O.F. Lodge, No. 293.

Distinguished guests and visitors were present from Tweed, Madoc, Stirling, Campbellford, Belleville, Picton, Perth, Cobourg and Toronto. District Deputy President of Belleville District No. 4, Sister Joyce Fisher of Crescent Rebekah Lodge in Thomasburg and her staff, installed the officers for Crescent Lodge. District Deputy Grand Master of Madoc District, No. 45, Brother Wesley Farrell of Thomasburg I.O.O.F. Lodge, and his staff installed the officers for Thomasburg I.O.O.F. Lodge.

Thomasburg lodges are proud and honored to have both District Deputies from Thomasburg lodges this year.

COLORFUL DECORATIONS

Many favorable comments were heard on the decorations and the committee in charge is to be congratulated on the arrangement and color scheme.

A false ceiling of pink crepe paper was installed in the centre of the hall beneath which the impressive and colorful installation ceremonies took place.

On the platform, the background was centred by a large framed printing of "The Golden Rule," on the top of which rested a large white dove, the gold centre flanked by seven gold stars, the beehive, the lily and the open Bible, surrounded by seven all emblems of the lodge, were prominently displayed.

Miss Violet Morton, daughter of Noble Grand Sister Marion Morton, accompanied by Sister Ruth Seekings sang a selection after the officers of Rebekah Lodge, followed by a group of members of Belleville Canton in full dress regalia, and a group of the Ladies' Auxiliary to Belleville Canton, also in full dress, marched into the hall.

COLOR PARTY

A Color Party followed, carrying the new Canadian flag recently donated to the two lodges by Brother and Sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sayers. Sister Ruby Colden carried the flag.

The Rebekah flag was carried by Sister Joyce Fisher, District Deputy President, and the Oddfellows flag was carried by Brother Wesley Farrell, District Deputy Grand Master.

REBEKAHS, ODD FELLOWS

An honor guard from the Canton and Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canton of Belleville District No. 8 followed the color party.

Distinguished guests included District Deputy President Belleville District No. 4, Sister Joyce Fisher; District Deputy Grand Master of Madoc District, No. 45 — Brother Wesley Farrell; Past District Deputy Grand Patriarch of the Encampment, Patriarch Farley Parnell of Belleville; Past President of Department Association of Ontario — Lady Irene Aaron of Bellsville; President of Belleville Auxiliary No. 8, Ladies' Auxiliary Patriarch Millicent — Lady Grace Akey; Captain Canton Belleville No. 8, Patriarch Militant — Brother Howard Akey.

Noble Grand Sister Marion Morton welcomed the distinguished guests, friends and families.

NEW OFFICERS

Mr. Thomas Bronson furnished violin music, accompanied by his son, Kenneth on the piano, for the I.O.O.F. installation. A solo by Kenneth was enjoyed.

A Bible, donated by Brother and Sister Ray, for use in both Lodges, was dedicated by Mr A. F. Smith, pastor of Thomasburg United Church.

ACTION'S WHAT COUNTS

HALIFAX (CP) — Alderman Abbie Lane says far too few Canadian women enter public life. Any that do, she says, must be well - trained and prepared to emphasize action rather than just words.

SECOND HUSBAND WIFE TEAM

Thomasburg lodges have another husband and wife team this year, as Bro. Orval Ray is the Noble Grand of the Odd Fellows and his wife, Sister Elinor Ray, is the Noble Grand of the Rebekahs.

Junior Past Grand, Sister Marion Morton, presented each of the officers of the past year with a gift and thanked them for their help and support.

She presented Sister Irene Coulter with a gift in recognition of 52 years' membership in Crescent Rebekah Lodge and Bro. Harry Coulter with a gift for his help as degree captain.

The lodge presented her with a gift in recognition of her untiring efforts during the past year.

Noble Grands Brother and Sister Ray exchanged gifts and Crescent Lodge presented District Deputy President Sister Joyce Fisher with gifts.

District Deputy Grand Master Brother Wesley Farrell spoke briefly on Oddfellowship and District Deputy President Sister Joyce Fisher related a short sketch about the beginnings of the Rebekah Lodge.

Sister Doris Lawrenson sang several solos during the evening, accompanied by Sister Merle Mumby, who also supplied the music for the floor work of the Rebekahs.

Former Director Gives Self Up

TORONTO (CP) — John Campbell, 51, former director of the Ontario Securities Commission, surrendered Wednesday to police.

A charge of breach of trust by a public officer was laid against Mr. Campbell Tuesday.

The charge arose from revelations in the royal commission report on Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd. which skyrocketed and then nose-dived on the Toronto Stock Exchange in July, 1964.

Mr. Campbell, accompanied by his lawyer, Paul Hess, gave himself up at the offices of the Windfall royal commission in Toronto.

He appeared in court before Magistrate Joseph Addison and was remanded to Oct. 20. Property bail was set at $2,000.

Conviction on the charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in jail.

Mr. Campbell, a lawyer, was suspended from his director's post at the OSC by Attorney General Arthur Wishart in August, 1964. He resigned a month later.

WOMAN TAKES OFFICE

HALIFAX (CP) — The downtown Halifax Business Association has appointed a woman as its executive director, Mrs. Violet Shaw has a background of experience in real estate management and development.

There was "a noticeable decline" in farm employment, partly due to bad weather, the report said; Agriculture accounted for 109,000 of the 296,000 decline in the number of jobs in the country.

The main drop in non-agricultural employment was in the service industries, the report added. These mainly were students returning to school.

The report said total employment remained well ahead of last year's September figure. The 6,983,000 who had jobs last month was an increase of 215,000 or 3.2 per cent over September, 1964. The largest gains were in construction and the service industries, and the increase was recorded in all regions.

FEW OUT FOR LONG

Of the 176,000 unemployed in September, approximately 131,000 were without jobs for three months or less and the remaining 45,000 or 26 per cent of the total had been seeking work for four months or more.

The six—all are seeking re-election as Creditiste candidates now—are Robert Beaule (Quebec East), Pierre-Andre Boulin (Dorchester), Lucien Plourde (Quebec West), Gerard Perron (Beauce), Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford) and Raymond Langlois (Megantic).

Mr. Beaule and Mr. Plourde denied Wednesday night that any money had been paid or offered them in 1963. The other four were not immediately available for comment.

Greek Ship Freed From Rocky Shoal

PICTON (Staff)—The Greek freighter Prostatis which went aground off Point Traverse in Prince Edward County nearly two weeks ago was finally freed Tuesday at 11.30 a.m.

On Saturday William Smith of R.R. 4, Picton, discovered a 20-foot white life boat well up on the beach at Cape Vesey, east of Waupoos. Provincial Police were called and they in turn called the Kingston Marine Station. Rough weather is believed to have torn the lifeboat away from the Prostatis during the weekend.

Observers reported that there were hundreds of people at Pt. Traverse on Sunday to watch the unloading of the ship. The vessel was loaded with scrap metal.

ACTS AS CHAIRMAN

Dr. Lionel Dockrill of Picton has accepted the job of campaign chairman for the Liberal candidate, Lloyd Woolsey, in the forthcoming general election campaign in Prince Edward-Lennox. Dr. Dockrill was runner-up to Mr. Woolsey when the two men were nominated to contest the seat at the nomination meeting in Napanee on Thursday. Len Foley will be chairman of the Picton committee rooms.

COMES FROM PERTH

A new member of the Ontario Provincial Police detachment in Picton is Thomas W. Cousans, a probationary constable transferred here from Perth. Constable Cousans replaces Constable Jack Hodgins who has been transferred to the Long Sault detachment.

PICTON — Farmers in Prince Edward County are reminded that the deadline for applying for Drought Relief Assistance has been set for October 15th. Those who wish to apply should complete an application form and forward to the On'ario Department of Agriculture, Box 470, Picton by this date.

PLOW AT MATCH

The International Plowing Match and Farm Machinery Demonstration will be held this year from October 12th. to October 16th on the Massey Ferguson Farm at Milliken. There is a great deal of interest in this event and many from Prince Edward County who will be plowing in the various classes will be Daryl Osterhout, Consecon and Jim Huffman, Ameliasburg. Daryl and Jim will represent the County in the Interclass class for junior Farmers on Thursday, and will plow in the Inter-Secondary School competition on Saturday.

CORN DAY

Prince Edward County Farmers are reminded of the Corn Day, to be held on the Elmer Laver Farm, Warkworth on Thursday, October 21st from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The farm is located 10 miles north of Brighton and 2 miles west of Highway No. 30. Those who attend the Corn Day will hear speakers on the production and feeding of grain corn. Dr. Stan Young, Department of Crop Science, University of Guelph will speak on "New Trends in Corn Production" and John Dalrymple, Animal Husbandry Dept. Kemptville Agricultural School will speak on "Feeding Grain Corn to Livestock." There will be an excellent display of machinery including pickers, picker shellers, combines, dryers, minimum tillage equipment, weed sprayers and other equipment used in corn growing and handling. Grain corn harvesting will be demonstrated in the field and company representatives will be on hand to discuss the operation of equipment being demonstrated. There will also be an opportunity to see corn plots which include 17 different hybrids, fertilizer plots, weed control plots, plant population and various date of planting demonstrations.

Income Tax Explained

A column designed for the working taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. MILLER
Retired Supervising Assessor, Income Tax Department

RAILWAY MENS' EXPENSES

An allowance for away from home expenses is not just applicable to the running trades but also to relieving telegraphers and station agents as well as maintenance workers such as "extra gangs" and the bridge and building employees.

In regard to the running trades, it is only the expenses incurred after they take their train away from the home terminal. All costs of meals and lodgings incurred at the away from home terminal are deductible no matter how long the layover may be. Any cost of transportation or a meal on their way to work is not deductible no matter what hour of the night the employee must report for duty. No expenses are applicable at the home terminal.

A relieving telegrapher or station agent may deduct the cost of his meals and lodging while employed away from home. If the railway cannot provide transportation to his next assignment then he may deduct his cost of transportation if it appears reasonable. Such deductions are never allowed on a mileage basis. The taxpayer must show the actual costs and verify them by as many receipts as possible.

Maintenance workers, bridge and building employees, etc., who are usually supplied lodging in boarding cars may not claim any deduction for lodging as that is supplied by the railway. They can deduct the amount they pay for their food.

A railway employee who is transferred to another location and expects to be there permanently cannot deduct anything while employed at the new location.

Deductions apply only to those railway workers whose jobs necessitate them moving from place to place.

Question 1: I live in Hamilton and my home terminal is now Toronto. At certain times I cannot get transportation by rail to Toronto so must drive my car. Can I deduct this cost?

ANSWER: No.

QUESTION 2: Due to a bad winter storm I was forced to lay over for 3 days at my away from home terminal. I stayed in a hotel near the railway depot. Am I allowed to deduct this cost?

ANSWER: Yes. If you were not reimbursed by your employer.

Teen-age Canada

Federal Election Fails To Interest Teen-agers

By JACK HUTTON

The prospect of a federal election in several weeks isn't exciting on Canada's newest segment of the Canadian public — those under 21 years of age.

At least that's what I read out of several letters to this column in the last two weeks.

This isn't meant to read harrass politicians peeking at this page. But here were a few sample comments from readers who've been listening to the campaign pleadings.

Joanne Marshall, 15, Halifax, N.S. — "Is there not one political man in this country capable of thinking young? I see pictures of candidates dancing the frug or the watusi, but usually that's their only contact with us."

Wayne Butler, 17, Vancouver, B.C. — "Why don't you do a column some time on what would happen in this election if all 18-year-olds and up were allowed to vote ?I suspect there'd be some rude shocks at the polls."

An anonymous reader from Edmonton, Alta. —"Weren't we teen-agers promised the federal vote some time ago? What happened?" (That's only partially accurate. The bill hasn't been passed in Ottawa.)

YOUNG COUNTRY

But the most thoughtful letter, I thought, came from Paul Swift, a Montreal student (sorry, Paul didn't give his age). Here's what he had to say:

"Pardon me for letting off steam, but I'm reflecting the views of several friends and myself about the election. We feel it isn't saying anything to us.

"Every second politician I hear mentions in passing that by 1970 or shortly after half the people in Canada will be 25-years-old or younger.

"Whatever way you look at it, that makes Canada a remarkably young country. The same will also be true of the United States before us. And's only five years from now.

"I believe the politicians don't realize what a problem my generation faces: how to choose a political party in this country? And that isn't meant to be funny. There are many of us who want to identify, understand and sympathize with a political program.

"Has it ever occurred to you — or the politicians — that the one politician to inspire my generation is Canada didn't even live in this country ?

LIKE KENNEDY

"I'm talking about the late President Kennedy. And is we did he do it? He didn't talk down to us. He didn't make inflated promises. He presented challenges and he made them sound tough.

"That's what we want, I think. Instead of dwelling on past political successes, real or imagined, Presidents tonight talked about our future and the part that we could play in it.

"Surely the response to the Canadian University Service Overseas organization should demonstrate that our generation wants to be involved.

"To give credit to one political party the Company of Young Canadians is a wonderful idea. We need more like that, however. Give us a chance to use the ideal em so many adults seem to lack.

"So what I'm saying is that we'd like more politicians to demonstrate that they think of our generation as something more than a go-go collection of mini-skirts with long hair-dos and snapping fingers.

"There's no way of proving it. But I suspect that possibly the best informed group of Canadians in this country are those between 16 or 17 and 25. Why not? We're soaked in our classes. And we haven't had time to become cynical.

"But wait. There will be a way of proving it. We'll be at the polls when the next election comes around. Will it be too late then for the politicians?"

Thanks for all your fine letters, and keep them coming. This is your forum to express your opinions, so let's hear what you think.

Eldorado

ELDORADO — Miss Lamonica Post of Toronto spent the Thanksgiving holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Post.

Mrs. C. D. McCann spent a few days with friends at Hull's Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Gailey and boys of Toronto and Mr. and Mrs. Andy Kerr of Kingston spent the week-end with Mr. Milford Stevenson and Alice.

Mrs. Elgin Post and Mrs. C. D. McCann attended the quilting at Mrs. Tom Lough's in Marlbank on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Pierce of Peterborough were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Pigden.

Mr. James Fox of Belleville spent the weekend at his home.

Mrs. Wasmund spent last week at her home at Fort Stewart.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hagate were: Mr. and Mrs. W. Horner and family of Toronto and Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Holgate of Canifton.

GREEN THUMBS DOWN

AUGHTON, England (CP) — Retired gardener George Fazackerley, 76, went back to the prize he won for having the third-best garden in this Lancashire town and told the town councillors who did the judging to buy themselves a gardening encyclopedia with the money.

Are Canada's political parties failing to reach the generation under 21 years of age in the current election campaign? Several readers think so.

Tweed

TWEED — Tweed Progressive Conservative Association held a meeting on Thursday evening for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year.

Mr. Art McCarey, a former president of the association, acted as chairman and the officers are as follows: past president - Mr. Ron Way; president - Mr. Murray Thompson; 1st vice-president — Mr. Ken Thompson; 2nd vice-president — Mr. Sanford Wagner; secretary — Mrs. Jennie Latta;-treasurer — Mrs. Daisy Rosevear; directors — Mr. Art McCarey, Mr. Clarence Graham, Mr. Ron Way, Mr. Archie Sinclair and Mr. John Sager.

The poll chairmen are Mr. Harold Long, Mrs. Phyllis Thurston, Mr. Don Woods, Mr. Cyril Latta and Mr. Bill Woods.

Following the election Mr. Thompson spoke a few words of appreciation and, asked "for the support of the association in the forth-coming election."

CITIZENS OF THURLOW:

What Are The Issues?

The issue on October 20th is NOT whether Thurlow will be dry or wet because:

1. All citizens of Thurlow are able to purchase alcoholic beverages conveniently in Belleville.
2. The same citizens can frequent dining lounges just as conveniently.

THE ISSUES THEN ARE:

1. Are we willing to turn down good tax dollars from potential enterprises that would require the dining lounge licence.
2. The present laws discriminate upon present establishments in Thurlow that require a licence to compete with similar establishments in Belleville.
3. Has any citizen the right to tell his fellow man that he can or cannot drink.

Pearson Draws Biggest Crowds Of Campaign

ORILLIA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson carried his "majority government" appeal into traditional Conservative territory Wednesday and drew the biggest crowds so far in his campaign for the Nov. 8 federal election.

A capacity audience of 2,400 in Memorial Arena here Wednesday night gave him an enthusiastic response when he said there must be a strong central government in Ottawa, able to plan ahead for five years and not just five weeks."

Mr. Pearson spent most of the morning in a Toronto hotel suite conferring by telephone with Ottawa and London on the Rhodesian crisis. Then he drove 40 miles to Guelph where hundreds of flag - waving school children mobbed his open convertible in a screaming welcome on a downpour square.

Provincial police estimated that close to 1,000 persons, almost all children, were in the square.

He spoke briefly from the back of a truck, recalling the time when he lived in Guelph just after the First World War and played semi - professional baseball for a Guelph team. Mr. Pearson's father was then minister of Norfolk Street Methodist church and Wednesday the prime minister said a brief visit to the manse where he lived. A minister's family still occupies the old two - storey brick home.

STRESSED BENEFITS

Mr. Pearson spoke to about 400 adults at a coffee-and-sandwiches reception in a Guelph hotel, stressing benefits Canada is getting from the new Canada - United States auto agreement.

He said accusations that the pact gives $50,000,000 a year to the auto firms while ignoring consumers is "complete nonsense." Prices of 1966 autos were lower than those of 1965 models. The full saving from tariff rebates was being passed on to car buyers.

Attacking critics of the auto agreement, he singled out Conservative Alfred D. Hales, seeking re-election in Wellington - South riding which surrounds the industrial city of Guelph. Liberal candidate Don McFadden is running on the same theme that the auto agreement is bringing new industries to the Guelph area.

In both Guelph speeches Mr. Pearson laid emphasis on the problems Canada faces in the immediate future and said only a solid majority government can bring about the solutions best for all the country.

He pushed the theme to the fore in his Orillia address, referring to "some very important economic arrangements" similar to the auto agreement as being among the matters requiring a strong central administration.

On social welfare, he said his government relies on the UN and to get into the position where the people of the country feel that the government is going to do everything for them and they have nothing to do for themselves."

FOUNDATION SOLID

But Liberal governments had already built a solid foundation on which to develop proper social welfare policies and one of the next would be unemployment with the provinces for "a sensible, reasonable medicare scheme."

Mr. Pearson said his main declaration is towards national unity based on the principle of "unity without uniformity." He was proud of Canada's traditions and these must not be discarded but rather built upon.

"We must build up this country from coast to coast," he said, spreading opportunity and eliminating the pockets of poverty and distress.

Aides said Mr. Pearson's Orillia visit was the key point in a campaign to break the Conservative hold on the Simcoe region's five ridings.

The prime minister drove back to Toronto Wednesday night, completing a 270-mile highway circuit. He flies to Ottawa today and will attend a bridge opening there Friday before resuming the campaign Saturday in Fredericton and Charlottetown.

Dief Claims P.M. Aware of 'Revelations'

LETHBRIDGE (CP)—Conservative Leader Diefenbaker said Wednesday night the "revelations" in a forthcoming book by Dr. Guy Marcoux were an "added reason" why Prime Minister Pearson didn't want to meet Parliament.

Talking about the Rivard case and the Sinclair bankruptcies in the same breath, the Conservative leader told 1,200 people that Dr. Marcoux's statements "are even worse than anything else."

Mr. Diefenbaker was told about a newspaper report on Dr. Marcoux's book shortly before his evening rally, and he fired off a blistering attack on the Liberals before one of the most responsive audiences of his western tour.

Commenting on reports of the book, concerning alleged representation by Moise Darabaner to six Social Credit MPs to support the Liberals, Mr. Diefenbaker said "it is a frightful thing" when a government is formed because it can get the support, by manipulations, of six members who were elected against it.

Mr. Pearson "knew this was coming. He must have known these revelations would take place. He knew if Parliament met, the part played by Darabaner—who today faces charges of fraud and arson—and the involvement of others high in the circles of Liberalism would have been the subject of a parliamentary investigation.

". . . The government preferred not to face that and now it is coming out in all its shady detail.

"More and more, this latest revelation, added to the Rivards, to the Sethinds, to the Sinclairs deals . . . 40 and set the picture unravelling, a picture of wrongdoing that goes right to the vitals of the heart of the nation? Do you want your sons and daughters to be made subject to addiction in narcotics?"

Mr. Diefenbaker, who "spoke for 92 minutes after a 12-hour day of whistle-stopping through southern Alberta, said he had claimed months ago that Darabaner was a Liberal agent.

"His wife said he wasn't, he just drove a car on election day and drove a bargain on holy Thursday in 1963.

". . . I can come out and face the Canadian people and say this to them: We gave you a government that was honest."

Earlier, Mr. Diefenbaker said a Conservative government would establish an Indian claims commission and transfer jurisdiction of the Indians to the northern affairs department from the department of citizenship and immigration.

He said the commission, which he began discussing in 1962, would investigate all complaints and recommend compensation.

Jurisdiction would be transferred to northern affairs so "Indians won't feel they have been more-or-less shuttled into a department that has little or no interest in their welfare."

Canada Needs Two-Price Wheat System - - Thompson

By RON MacDONALD

CORONATION, Alta. (CP)—Canada needs a two-price wheat system to save its farm population from mass bankruptcy, Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said Wednesday night.

Mr. Thompson proposed a two-price system while outlining his party's agriculture policies to an audience of 200 in a service club hall here.

Coronation, with a population of 1,000, is in grain-growing and ranching country 140 miles northeast of Calgary. Mr. Thompson wound up a day of election campaigning here after covering by car a route from Calgary northeast through Drumheller and Hanna, Alta., taking in Bow River and Acadia ridings. He made-stops in each community he visited.

He was to spend today in Saskatoon.

Mr. Thompson said in his address here that two - price wheat, and not farm subsidies, will best help farmers overcome their financial woes. He said farmers are badly off because production costs are increasing while prices for their products remain low.

He said an import - export bank should be set up to finance the overseas marketing of Canadian agricultural products.

Then, under the two - price system, wheat would be sold as a high price domestically. It would be sold to foreign countries "for whatever price we could get," but the return to farmers on foreign sales would be as high as the return on domestic sales because the import-export bank would make up the difference to farmers.

Mr. Thompson said a two-price system would allow Canada to offer its wheat to foreign countries at lower prices without harming the farmers at home. This would help Canada win new markets.

He also proposed establishment of a Canadian feed grain authority similar to the wheat board. The authority would coordinate the marketing and transport of feed grain and eliminate the present hodge-podge of regulations which results in feed grain surpluses in some provinces and shortages in others, he said.

NDP Leader Attacks Both Major Parties

By JIM NEAVES

YORKTON, Sask. (CP)—Canada's old-line parties are owned and controlled by those who control Canada's economy, New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas said Wednesday.

Mr. Douglas told a capacity crowd of 800 in a high school auditorium that less than 1,000 Canadians in major industries and corporations control Canada.

"They decide whether prices go up or down, or whether the savings of Canadians will be used to develop Canadian industries or lie idle for another generation—and we, the people, have nothing to say."

Mr. Douglas said Canadians are fed up because they are realizing the society in which they live is an economic dictatorship.

Prime Minister Pearson's "soft sell approach—affluence for everybody"—depends on who you are and where you sit in our society," the NDP leader said.

"It's not so good if you're sitting with the 20 per cent in poverty in Canada or with the other 30 per cent suffering privation."

He said old-line parties have never grappled with the problem of farm income.

$3.50 FOR WHEAT

He would be prepared to consider a $2.50-a-bushel minimum price for the first 1,000 or 2,000 bushels of wheat delivered by a farmer in any one year.

Mr. Douglas also spoke Wednesday at Dauphin, Man., and Regina.

In Regina, he said Canada's foreign policy, or lack of it, is important to the election campaign.

No one has been able to discern Canada's present foreign policy, if indeed there is one, he said at a press conference.

External Affairs Minister Martin never has stood up and declared the country's policy, he said.

"The New Democrats believe Canada should have an independent foreign policy . . . not framed by any other nation."

Mr. Douglas was to leave Yorkton early today for Winnipeg, from where he will fly to Gali, Ont.

Rhodesia's Door

to Salisbury. "As for the rest, we're still considering it."

MANY ENEMIES

Many of the Commonwealth leaders, he charged, were declared enemies of Rhodesia and "it would be wishful thinking that they would come here and advise us."

He nevertheless said there is a "breath of a chance" of further negotiation, though he did not say with whom.

"I don't see it. But of course if somebody could produce a magic solution, we would be very ready to accept it."

Asked whether there is any chance of further negotiations with the British government, he replied: "No. I believe if I was to say that, I would be misleading the people of this country."

Prime Minister Wilson Wednesday flew to Balmoral Castle in Scotland to give the Queen his latest assessment of the Rhodesian crisis and to discuss immediate measures to be taken if the colony seizes independence.

FORCE NO SOLUTION

On his return to London, he said the undersecretary of state was one of the greatest potential crises Britain had faced for many years. He added, however, "we have made it clear we don't see the situation can be solved by force."

The United Nations General Assembly has urged Britain to take all steps necessary to prevent Rhodesia from declaring independence unilaterally.

The resolution did not specifically demand that Britain use military force, and some Asian and African states felt that it was not strong enough.

In Calgary, External Affairs Minister Martin said Canada will not take military action in Rhodesia or in any other possible crisis and added that he doubted an economic boycott would be necessary.

The Guardian, one of the leading Liberal newspapers in Britain, says:

"A possible approach would be that three white and three African Commonwealth states, plus Britain as chairman, would collectively guarantee to the people of Rhodesia as a whole their support — moral, financial, economic — if constitutional developments toward majority rule and against racial discrimination and disorders when majority rule is achieved.

"The proposition would face the white Rhodesians with the prospect of majority rule. But the Rhodesians have little fear as much or the indignities which they believe will go with it!"

The Financial Times, independent British newspaper, says:

"Judging by all the available evidence, the Commonwealth still means a great deal to many Rhodesians. A solemn warning from a man like Sir Robert Menzies might well have great weight with any who are still not certain that a unilateral declaration is the only way out of the present situation.

Asserts

that any money was involved came from three of the six Social Credit MPs involved in the pledge—Robert Beaulé, Quebec East; Lucien Plourde, Quebec West; and Raymond Langlois, Megantic.

The other three—Pierre Asselin, Boucha, Dorion; Gaston Perron, Beauce, and Gilbert Rondeau, Shefford — could not be reached immediately for comment.

At a Lethbridge, Alta., rally, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker added this comment:

"It is a frightful thing when a government is formed because it is able to secure the support of six members who were elected against it. That is manipulations that took place."

MR. AND MRS. DEAN BURDIS POND

Pond – Craig

Rev. H. Davis officiated at the ceremony which united in marriage Marilyn Joyce Craig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred O. Craig of Belleville and Dean Burdis Pond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everard Pond of Boiestown, New Brunswick. The wedding took place in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville on Saturday, October 9, 1965, at 5.00 p.m. The organist, Mr. Alex Gordon, accompanied the soloist, Mr. Curt Brinkman, who sang two selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white floor length sheath gown of taffeta with an Empire Windsor, scooped neckline and a matching removable coat enhanced with a chapel train trimmed with lace. She wore a shoulder length veil and carried a bouquet of an orchid surrounded by pale pink roses, stephanotis and ivy.

Mrs. Claire Knight, maid of honor, Miss Gail Bastable, bridesmaid, and Miss Karen Ies, sister of the bride and junior bridesmaid, wore matching gowns of peacock green in floor length sheath style with velvet bodices and chiffon over taffeta skirts. Their flowers were snowball bouquets of pink and orchid 'mums, suspended from orchid velvet bows which matched the flowers in their hair.

Mr. William Miron of Trenton was groomsman and Mr. Fred Furmidge Jr. and Mr. Manson Jones ushered the guests.

At the reception held at the Pinnacle Room of the Quinte Hotel the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a jade green crushed ice crepe dress, black accessories and a corsage of bronze 'mums. The bridegroom's mother wore a brown lace over taffeta dress, with beige accessories and a corsage of gold 'mums.

For her wedding trip to western Ontario and the Poconno Mountains in Pennsylvania, the bride chose a red wool two-piece suit with grey mink collar and red and black accessories.

On their return, the couple will live at 56 Montgomery Boulevard, Belleville.

Canadian Club Resumes With Talk on Berlin

Speaking on the topic "Berlin East and West – Past, Present and Future", Professor R. F. Hopwood an expert on German history addressed members of the Canadian Club of Belleville and District at the first meeting of the season held in Sir Winston Churchill School, last evening.

Previous to introducing the speaker, the president, Mrs. J. G. Demeza welcomed the members and warmly greeted those attending for the first time. She also introduced the complete list of the executive and announced that all meetings this season would be held in Sir Winston Churchill School.

In his opening remarks to the large number in attendance, Dr. Hopwood described Berlin, once the jewel of Germany and how that in May, 1945 it lay in ruins with poverty and devastation everywhere with most of its people only half clad and the women of the city clearing the rubble. He compared the city now some 20 years later and said it was a city of well fed people with towering apartments, huge department stores and modern in every respect. In other words a thriving city, but really a prison with 115 miles of hostile territory.

INTERNATIONAL TUG OF WAR

The speaker described the city as a subject of international tug of war. Immediately following the Second World War the eastern and western allies were divided in their future plans for the city. Russia and the allies seemed to have a "no care" attitude, whereas back as far as 1943 Stalin established a German government in exile under Communist control and eastern allied forces arrived two months after the cessation of hostilities but only as an occupational force.

FORM OF GOVERNMENT

Dealing with the form of government, Dr. Hopwood said that the area was divided into block sections, with district leaders each having a mayor and two deputy mayors, with the senior deputy in charge of food supplies. There were Communist party members everywhere with one reliable comrade in each section and these controlled the police personel and took over the educational problems. When the Western allies entered they did little more than ratify the Communist plans to control Berlin. Much Soviet plundering followed with meagre supplies of coal and grain on hand. Not everything was Soviet expropriated for Soviet troops. With this situation in control the people of Berlin merely concentrated on keeping alive and as a result many starved to death in black market dealings. Thousands died from starvation and there was not even room for burial.

MANY RESTRICTIONS

Continuing the speaker went on to say that in late 1946, the Communist controlled Berlin police clamped down and many restrictions were imposed. West Berlin was still under order to refrain from antagonising the Russians in the rat, thus resulted a divided Berlin. There were local elections but results were far from true as only 19.8 per cent of the votes were cast. Controls were tightened and large numbers of students opposed the Russian dictates in the educational curriculum and thousands moved to West Berlin.

FULL BLOCKADE

As tensions grew the Berlin issue was forced to a head and the Russians decided to test the west's will by hampering access to Berlin itself and in 1948 the blockade began in June of 1948. General Lucius D. Clay reported on conditions to the U.S. Government stating that if West Berlin fell under the Russian domination, so likewise would West Germany. So it was at this time that the American airlift was recommended which rallied the people of Berlin. From June 1948 to May 1949 there were two million tons of supplies dropped into Berlin. The perseverance of the people was remarkable considering the tremendous shortage of vital supplies.

But considering all these hardships only 4 per cent of the people accepted the communist offer of rations. The people of West Berlin could only live if they persevered in freedom and the significance of the blockade was almost immeasurable. After this period of trial was past long range plans were made for the future. Special taxes were levied in West Germany and West Berlin revived commercially. In 1959 West Berlin alone produced considerably more than the whole city did in 1936. They soon began to pay back their debts, but still have to import more than they export.

WALL BUILT

Its progress was staggering compared to East Berlin and there was an increased flow of people westward with 25 per cent having left. To combat this, the Berlin wall was built in 1961 and at this time the Russians applied extra pressure as it was during the so-called missile gap. A declaration was made by Krushchev for the western allies to get out of West Berlin within six months to put an end to this abnormal situation. An ultimatum was extended, then denied. Meanwhile the late President John F. Kennedy made his firmest statement, "We do not want to fight, but we have fought before".

Dr. Hopwood went on to describe the physical characters of the Berlin Wall which was made of cement blocks ten feet high with barbed wire extended across the top. This wire if stretched at length would measure 8,000 miles. He also expressed West Germany's reaction to the wall and stated that West Germany has no legal claim on West Berlin. This issue therefore may enter East Berlin, but not the residents from West Berlin. He further stated that it is not simply a German problem.

In conclusion, the speaker quoted from a speech made by the late President Kennedy while on a visit to West Berlin which he (President Kennedy) emphasized the fact that if any one was in doubt as to the great issue of the world, let them come to Berlin.

THANKS EXPRESSED

Mr. W. Bradford expressed sincere appreciation to Dr. Hopwood for a most vivid recall of Berlin. In charge of Mrs. G. Mayhee and Mrs. A. J. Clare were served. Mrs. R. D. Bird presided at the piano for the opening and closing numbers.

MR. AND MRS. STANLEY G. FRITZ

Fritz – Thrower

Wooler United Church was the scene on October 9, 1965, at 2.30 p.m. of the marriage of Dianne Shirley Thrower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thrower, R.R. 1, Wooler, and Stanley Gerald Fritz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Fritz, Ameliasburg. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. A. Adam and the organist was Miss Gail Margetson.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white gown of peau de soie satin with fitted bodice, a scooped neckline, long lily point sleeves and seed pearl trimming at the waist. The bell-shaped skirt featured the same seed pearl trimming and a full train was attached to the back of the waist by two satin bows. A headpiece of rose petals and sequins held her silk illusion tiered shoulder length veil and she carried a cascade of orange roses.

Mrs. Eleanor Pearce, matron of honor, and the bridesmaids, Miss Dorothy Fritz of Ameliasburg, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Eunice Hartford were dressed alike in gold organza over taffeta dresses fashioned in Alice style, with matching gold lace jackets. The junior bridesmaid, Miss Janet Thrower, sister of the bride, wore the same gold dress, but with a fuller skirt. All attendants were matching headdresses of gold and white roses with gold tulle, and carried arrangements of bronze and yellow 'mums.

Mr. Roger Pearce of Belleville attended the bridegroom, and the ushers were Mr. Larry Thrower of Wooler, brother of the bride, and Mr. Glen Fritz of Cornwall, brother of the bridegroom.

At the reception held in the Balmoral Room of the Glenburnie Motel, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a sheath dress with jacket of mink brocade over aqua peau de soie, matching brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted, dressed in a three-piece ensemble of blue ribette with matching blue accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

For her wedding trip to the eastern United States, the bride chose a navy blue French wool suit with black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz will live at 25-A Munroe Ave., Belleville.

Clothes, Designers, Models All Imported From Italy

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP)—The dignified Royal Ontario Museum was taken over Wednesday evening for a high-style fashion show with the clothes, designers and models all imported from Italy.

A black tie audience of more than 1,000 saw the latest designs of Mrs. Giovanna Fontana of the House of Fontana, Gattano Savini-Biticci, designer for men, Fausto Sarli, Mrs. Germana Marucelli, Ubaldo Barbita and Signora Liletta of Avagoll, representing six of Italy's top fashion houses.

The show was under the sponsorship of the Italian ministry of foreign trade.

The daytime skirts averaged a middle-of-the-knee length in easy lines. Geometric and coart patterns competed with glittering brocades. Fur trimmed everything and the total look was featured in costume after costume of matching coat and dress, even to matching boots and stockings.

Brioni's male models drew much of the applause from an audience at least 30 per cent male. He showed several double-breasted, knee-length topcoats with side vents and matching or mix-matching patterned linings, including one in dark red.

His dinner jackets were in patterned dull gold and black, in blue and in black on black. Two notables from Avagolf were geometric black and white scarf shirts with squared black strap necklines and striped cotton knit hipster pants with a slight flare at the cuff, topped by brief capes.

One of Fontana's more glittering gowns was an easy fitting silver silk shantung dress trimmed with silver beads. They showed two of the more exciting casual outfits, one a pants and top with matching shoes and hood in black velvet with red and blue flowers. The other, said to be for lunching at home, was a tight-fitting one-piece pants costume with a standup, ruffled V-neckline.

Marucelli showed two optical prints. One was an all-wool beige hooded coat with matching shoes, the other a black velvet evening coat with a black and white geometric for lining.

Sarli featured the swing line in a tight blue hooded coat which opened at the side and a similar bride's dress in soft white wool. He used the ubiquitous fur trim in a white silk costume topped by a coat which came off to reveal a mink-collared and -lined sleeveless jacket, which in turn came off to show a white cocktail dress.

Baratta used a rose-dyed mink collar on a rose and white geometric-patterned coat. One of the white evening dresses he showed was cut, as were others, an inch or two above the ankle.

What Women Are Doing

St. Thomas' W.A.

President, Mrs. Harry Smith

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Anglican Church of Canada was founded in 1885 by Mrs. Roberta E. Tilton, who on April 16 of that year with six other faithful women placed before the Board of Foreign and Domestic Missions, the claim of women to share in the work and responsibility of the church and missions. On the authority of Archbishop Bedford Jones the Woman's Auxiliary came into being.

From those first seven dedicated Christian women with Mrs. Tilton its president from 1886 to 1896, the W.A. now has membership of 160,000. To-day there are branches all across Canada who are giving to the whole church all over the world. The Dominion Board is supporting 100 missionaries at home and abroad besides giving grants for overseas work and work at home.

The purpose of the W.A. is to enlist the interest and active participation of women and girls in the mission of the church. The evening branch members are mothers and girls who find it more convenient to meet in the evening. There is also the senior afternoon branch.

The Winchester Cross was adopted as the badge of the W.A. The four equal arms of the cross represent the glad tidings of the gospel. The W.A. motto is "She hath done what she could." Funds are derived from the free will offerings of the members.

In 1879, St. Thomas Senior W.A. was officially formed and has functioned continuously since that date. Even before formal organization there was in St. Thomas Church, a group of missionary minded women who packed and sent bales and money wherever needed. Today through the Dorcas Department bales of clothing are sent in answer to appeals from the bishops in the various dioceses.

Through the years the W.A. has been responsible for the clothing of an Indian boy and girl while in Anglican residential schools. They also help furnish supplies to the hospitals in the far north.

In social service work out-of-town Anglicans in the hospital are visited and a note is sent to W.A. members past and present. Often other small services are performed for the patient.

The group has a Red Cross representative, and many garments and knitted articles are made for this organization. During World War 2 St. Thomas W.A. worked weekly for the Red Cross over and above their own Dorcas work. Christmas boxes are also packed for the clergy and their families serving in the mission fields.

The efforts of the W.A. members are not confined entirely to W.A. work as many of them belong to various other organizations in the parish.

This is the 29th in a series about women's organizations in Belleville and their activities.

Community Honors Couple at Shower

GILEAD — A miscellaneous shower was held in Gilead Community Centre on Friday evening in honor of the newly married couple, Mr. and Mrs. James Leavens, (the former Margaret Ellis).

With Mr. Bill Jones as master of ceremonies the party opened with a lively sing-song. Mr. Bruce Swan was at the piano.

Readings were given by Mrs. Albert Grills, Mrs. James Vos, Mrs. Wilfred Clare and Mr. Harry Huffman.

A piano accordion selection was played by Bruce Swan and a musical skit in two acts was presented by Percy Treverton and Bruce Swan.

Buffet luncheon was served and friends and relatives said goodbye to the happy couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Leavens are residing on the Rednersville Road.

Before her marriage Mrs. Leavens was honored with two bridal showers, one at Hastings Manor with Mrs. Kenneth Yorke and staff as hostesses, the other at her home in Marmora with Mrs. William O'Hara as hostess.

Susanna's Family Fare

NEVER A DULL MOMENT

Dear Susanna: Late at night, after everyone has gone to bed, is the perfect time to scrub the kitchen floor and give it a couple of light coats of wax. It is the one time in the whole day when you can be certain that someone won't want to be coming into the kitchen.

You know, it's rather fun, too, being down there all alone. I usually have a pot of coffee ready in the dining room for when I finish scrubbing, then, while the floor dries I curl up with the evening papers or the late show.

Sometimes I just apply the usual one coat of wax and go to bed, or occasionally I stick around long enough to allow the first one to set for half an hour before applying a second one — also very lightly. Two light coats make a floor look terrific. Whatever happens during the night — I'm not sure—its probably the wax has all that extra time to harden — but that special gleam it has when I come down in the morning sure gives me a charge!

Here are two more hints for retaining that special shine much, much longer. (a) Vacuum the floor well each time with the brush attachment just before washing it. (b) Be sure the floor is swept or run over with a dust mop after every meal so as not to allow particles and spills to build up and set ground in. You'll find this quick three-times-a-day maintenance job the most rewarding of all. — Mrs. Maxwell

Noting to it! For a brilliant kitchen floor, simply wash it all evening, wax it all night and sweep it all day! — SUSANNA

THAT'S ALL FOLKS

Dear Susanna: When making scrambled eggs, measure out the milk, then pour it over the egg coated beater and right into the bowl that the egg was beaten in — the result: every bit of the egg goes into the scramble and is not left on the beater or in the bowl. — Mrs. L. Wickware.

White Cane Club Holds Games Night

On Tuesday evening the members of the White Cane Club and their escorts met at the Kiwanis Centre for an evening of games and recreation. President Vi Waite was in the chair.

The names of members having birthdays in October were read by Artie Scott and the birthday draw was won by Charlie Dolan.

Recreation convener Betty Dobson organized the games, one of which was the new, easy-to-use Braille checker game. This was won by Mrs. Rivers. Doug Huffman won the domino game, played also with Braille dominoes. Vi Waite and Harvey Bailey each won a game of cribbage and the winners at euchre were Artie Scott, Betty Woods and Charlie Dolan. Wilma Blaind won the game of coolie.

Members of the Kiwanis Auxiliary served refreshments and were thanked by Harvey Bailey. President Vi thanked the drivers from the Belleville and Trenton Lions Clubs for transportation.

Successful Living

Desire to See Future Sign of Malcontent

DEAR DORIS: Could you please tell me where I could write a letter to and get my fortune told? — INTERESTED IN THE FUTURE.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR INTERESTED: Afraid not. Our lives are not based on chance, like the tossing of a coin. We think we want to see into the future, but even if we could, would it be good for us?

Anxiety for clairvoyance is often linked up with unsatisfied longings. Or we may be wondering about a tough decision. Or the question of choosing a career, a marriage partner, a hobby, has us baffled. So we long to turn to the crystal ball.

Far better to know for sure that we have a good deal to say and do about what happens to life. We can prepare ourselves for selecting a mate, and for making a success of marriage, by mixing with people, studying human psychology through both books and people, and becoming mature ourselves.

We can have counselling when it comes to picking a career; and tests which can serve as pointers. Same for hobbies and other spare time activities.

All of which needs the steadying influence of a faith which assures us that, "having done all," things will work out all right.

Ann Landers
Ignorance Breeds Cruel Insinuations

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been going with a lovely young widow for about 18 months. Barbara lives in another city but we see each other every weekend. We are in love and plan to be married. Barbara told me early in our friendship that her husband killed himself.

ANN LANDERS

Somehow my mother and sisters learned about the suicide and they are trying to talk me out of marrying her. They say when a married man kills himself it means his wife failed him.

Barbara is sensitive and insecure; her life has been a trying and lonely one. I believe it is unfair to say she failed her husband and I resent the suggestion that she is a poor marriage risk. I'd like your views. — COLOR ME BLUE.

* * *

DEAR BLUE: First, about your family: Color them vicious. Suicide is an irrational act. A husband or a wife who has to live through the nightmare should be spared the burden of guilt feelings. If you love the woman and want to marry her I hope you will disregard your family's cruel insinuations. Good luck and God bless you both.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I say a word in defence of the amateur photographer who was criticized by the bride's parents because he took only 21 pictures of their side of the family and 63 pictures of the groom's side?

To begin with, he made the pictures as a favor, not as a paid professional. At store prices the photographer laid out between $21 and $30 for film, bulbs, processing and prints. If they had hired a professional, it would have cost them at least $200 for the 84.

I would advise "Amateur Photographer" to destroy the negatives and then sit back and enjoy the expressions on their faces when they ask for additional prints. And they will. — FILM-FLAMMED.

* * *

DEAR FLAMMED: My newspaper photographer friends tell me you are far too conservative in your cost estimates. They say it would cost more than $30 to produce 84 decent 8 x 10 prints.

Photographers, both amateur and professional, are exploited and imposed upon by thoughtless friends and relatives. I hope this exchange will give them the courage to say "No" to those who try to take advantage of them.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for "No Nonsense Nell" — the smug, self-satisfied dame who pinned orchids on herself because she gained only 9 to 12 pounds during her pregnancies and didn't even have to buy maternity clothes.

How a woman carries the baby depends on the way she's built. A slender girl chooses her bone structure any more than she can choose the color of her eyes.

With my first baby I gained only 11 pounds but I was so enormous that ever stranger asked me if it would be twins for sure and maybe triplets. My sister-in-law gained 27 pounds and nobody knew she was pregnant until she was due to go to the hospital.

So, please, Ann, tell that obnoxious dame not to be so proud of herself. It's all in the lap of the gods. — MOTHER HOOD.

* * *

DEAR MOTHER: It's also in the lap of the ladies — and some ladies can't zee their laps for six months because they use pregnancy as an excuse to eat everything in sight.

The build-up is important, but the gal who eats sensibly and keeps her weight down will look better — and she'll feel better, too.

* * *

Do you feel ill at ease . . . out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Indians Part of Everyday Life Says Consultant

TORONTO (CP) — North American Indians are tired of being a cultural sideshow and want to be part of everyday life, Ethel Brant Monture, Indian consultant for the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, told Wednesday.

After all, Indians had a great influence in making modern society what it is today, she told a meeting of the Women's Art Association of Canada.

Histories still picture Indians as treacherous, bloodthirsty people; writers still picture them as simple, or lazy, or use Indians to provide the humor in their books, she said.

"So often we are invited to attend some function, and asked to wear a costume. How long are we supposed to be a sideshow for North America?"

Mrs. Monture, a descendant of Mohawk chief Joseph Brant, said that the simple, lazy image of the Indian is fallacious.

EARLY DEMOCRACY

"... It was our industry that built the fur trade and we practised democracy long, long before there was European immigration to North America."

Today's society has adopted much of the Indian culture and has incorporated many Indian words into the English language, she said.

As for the violence associated with Indians, Mrs. Monture said, "we were always taught that the spoken word was power.

"One of our earliest beliefs was that words hurt people, and were to be used with care. We believed words were magic, they had the power to cure sickness."

Mrs. Monture said the technique is acknowledged by people, and a sound method of psychiatric treatment.

As for being bloodthirsty and treacherous, she said, Indians cultivated an inner peace and calm.

Chorus Line Introduces New Fashions

MONTREAL (CP)—A chorus line in orange and black from les Grandes Ballets Canadiens Wednesday night introduced a show featuring creations from leading Montreal fashion designers, 1966 Japanese, American and European automobiles and a display of sculptures and paintings from Montreal artists.

The show, called Auto Elegance was presented at Montreal's concert hall la Place des Arts, to a capacity audience.

It featured fashions from Montreal designers France Daves, Jacques de Montjoye, Mario di Nardo, Marielle Fleury, Michel Robichaud and Raoul-Jean Fourre, president of the Canadian Couturiers Association.

The event was a benefit for les Grandes Ballets Canadiens, whose resident ballet choreographer and assistant ballet master Bryon Paige produced musical dance numbers to introduce the cars and fashions.

Among the fashions shown was a green and blue dress with bloe cape, knee length red hat from Marielle Fleury and an ensemble with an op art influence from France Daves. The dress was teal blue with a white bodice, white dome hat and matching coat.

For evening was a hanging white feathered hood, worn with a semi-fitted white coat and dress. A yellow-green theatre suit was shown with white accessories, and a dressy champagne-at-home ensemble with a dress featuring a circular train and sheer sleeves over a jump suit was worn with a matching hat.

A dull white hooded coat with white fur collar was fitted at the waist and worn with boots. A gold, black and brown tweed coat had a black muscle collar and trim and matching bemline band.

One evening costume with a hooded black full-length cloak had a white elastic gown and looked like convent garb.

Modelling the Spanish lace that she may wear as convener of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary Fashion Show, "Una Visita Espanol," Mrs. T. Neil Davidson is admired by fellow committee members Mrs. Herbert Brown, Mrs. J. H. Forrester, Mrs. W. Grant Harvey and Mrs. James B. Casey. Absent from the photo is Mrs. J. R. Blackbourn. The mantilla and comb were brought from Spain by Mrs. Forrester.

Spanish Theme Will Highlight Fashion Show

Una Visita Espanol will be the theme of this year's Women's Hospital Auxiliary Fashion Show. An annual event looked forward to by the women of Belleville and district, this is the 27th time local merchants and a host of volunteers have combined to benefit the Belleville General Hospital via the latest in glamor as modelled by auxiliary members and fashion coordinated by Mrs. Eva Doolittle.

Belleville Collegiate auditorium next Wednesday night, Oct. 20th will again be the scene and will ring to the sound of Mr. William Keeley's guitar accompaniment of Miss Diana McCallum's spanish dances as they set the background mood.

Mrs. T. Neil Davidson, convener of this year's Fashion Show is assisted by a committee of auxiliary members who report that tickets are finding enthusiastic takers. Ticket holders participate in the draw for valuable door prizes which include such enticements as merchandise gift certificates from McNabb's, A la Vogue and Barbers. Some lucky woman will have a handbag from McIntosh's or a piece of jewellery from Keely's or a touch of luxurious fur from Ashley's. And then there are the cosmetics from Kelly's or a pair of boudoir lamps from Mchaud's to add to the excited anticipation of winning not only things but, knowledge of fashion's latest as rounded up by the exhibitors from far and near.

MANY ACTIVITIES

Once a year the Hospital Auxiliary turns out in force to work for the Fashion Show but throughout the year they are engaged in many activities which since 1938 have amounted to tens of thousands of dollars turned over to the Belleville General Hospital for equipment, furnishings, better patient care, student nurse bursaries and the building fund. In recent year "In" Hospital Volunteer Services have been gaining greater and greater popularity and members have donated innumerable hours of voluntary time.

BEST KNOWN PROJECT

Perhaps the best known of auxiliary projects, as well as the annual Fashion Show is the Opportunity Shop recently reopened on the Market Square. Members and the public alike are impressed and grateful to City Council for providing the delightful new shop located in the old weigh scales building. Proceeds from the Opportunity Shop, which last year turned a profit of $5,200 and the proceeds from the Fashion Show are all for the benefit of the hospital.

New members are always welcome in the auxiliary and the varied talents of all civic minded women can find an outlet. Mrs. W. Dallas, president, welcomes newcomers and enthusiastic workers at the regular monthly meetings the third Tuesday of each month at Education Hall.

U.C.W. Meetings

TRINITY U.C.W.

MADOC — The general meeting of Trinity U.C.W. was held recently in the Sunday School rooms. Guests present were from Eldorado, Union, Cooper and Hazzard's UCW groups.

Mrs. Percy Brownson was in charge of the meeting. Mrs. H. Stickwood gave a detailed treasurer's report. Correspondence included notes of thanks from Mrs. Nelson Nicoll, Mr. W. C. Sheffield and Mr. and Mrs. MacKillican.

Hazzard's UCW bazaar will be held on December 4th; Trinity UCW bazaar on November 18th and Cooper UCW bazaar on October 27.

A UCW rally will be held in Halloway United Church on October 19. The next general meeting for Trinity UCW will be on October 27th.

The worship service, having "Hope" as its theme, was conducted by Miss Olive Ash and Mrs. H. Stickwood.

Rev. David Potter addressed the group on the subject of the proposed union of the United Church of Canada and the Anglican Church. He discussed briefly the work of Dr. Mathers and the Committee of Ten since 1943 and also the article which appeared in the June 15 issue of The Observer. He urged his listeners to get the information from the right sources and become acquainted with the issues involved.

Refreshments and a social hour concluded this meeting.

PINEAPPLE SQUARES FOR FREEZER

A funeral brings out the best in neighbors. After Cousin Ernie's funeral we returned to his home where kind neighbors served us their finest efforts. It is a comfort to all of the bereaved to be surrounded by friends and relatives, and recupied with the common-places of tasting goodies and sipping tea from fine china.

Now I have tried them and also frozen them.

I predict a long popular run for these and know that freezer owners will be grateful.

PINEAPPLE SQUARES
(courtesy Mrs. H. Gumbert):

Lower Crust: ¾ cup butter (no substitute), ¾ cup granulated sugar, 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Topping: one 20-oz. can crushed pineapple, well drained, 1 egg, ⅔ cup light brown sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup cocoanut (flaked or desiccated).

To make lower crust cream together the butter and granulated sugar well then add flour and salt and beat until thoroughly blended. (This now resembles soft shortbread dough.) Press into unbuttered 8¾ x 8¾" pan, using your moistened finger tips to make it smooth.

Drain pineapple, making sure excess syrup is pressed out. (Use leftover syrup for some other purpose such as the liquid ingredient in a Jelly dessert.) Spread drained pineapple evenly over lower crust.

Beat together in a bowl the egg, brown sugar, salt, vanilla and cocoanut. Spread evenly over pineapple. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 35 minutes or until top is baked and golden all over. Let cool in pan, but mark into small 1¼" squares while warm.

NOTE:

Because I planned to freeze things, I lined the bottom of the pan with foil. After cutting and cooling I put them in a double plastic bag and froze them. When they were hard I lifted them from the pan on the foil, cut them in halves lengthwise, put one half on top of the other, returned them to their double bag, dated them, and stored for a future tea party.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Crisp Fried Chicken; Apple Jelly; Baked Eggplant and Apple Casserole; Toasted Greens with French Dressing; Cantaloupe Halves filled with Sliced Peaches; Tea.

SUNDAY

Stuffed Pork or Lamb or Veal Shoulder (see Friday); Pan Roasted Potatoes; Creamed Vegetable Marrow; Stuffed Tomato Salad on Lettuce with Cottage Cheese Dressing; Pear Halves Poached In Mint Syrup; Coffee.

My attention was riveted on a plate of squares but politely I waited until they were passed and tasted. Then I sidled to the kitchen to find the cook. She is Mrs. Gumbert and in one fast sentence, smilingly told me the recipe for Pineapple Squares. By this time I realized they were famous in this community. My cousin Dee offered to type out the recipe.

CNIB Campaign Planned by Advisory Board

A meeting of the Hastings County Advisory Board to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind was held at the home of Mrs. Maude Rollins, Foster Avenue, on Wednesday evening.

After the usual reports the fall campaign was discussed, as well as the Eye Bank and the Occupational Therapy Workshop which is now in operation at the Quinte St. Lawrence building in Kingston.

A committee was appointed to find a location in which to hold the Blindcraft sale.

The Christmas party will be held during the week of December 12th, date and location still to be decided.

The November meeting will be held on Tuesday evening, November 23rd., at the home of Mrs. Mary Waller in Foxboro.

Mother's Helper

WHEN VISITING with a tiny baby, be considerate of your hostess' feelings and furnishings. When you put baby down on a couch or rug, protect it with a clean diaper or a large rubber sheet, depending on the child's mobility. Watch the kitchen clutter, too. It's acceptable at home, but when accepting to others, particularly older people. (Thanks to Mrs. B. Tibby, Portland, Maine.)

Brilliant Colors Are Seen In Every Phase of Fashion

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters)—Paris this season gives top priority to brilliant colors in every phase of fashion from costly couture clothes to budget-priced ready-to-wear.

Color and composition, adapted in Yves St. Laurent's modern art mood, emerge as the most influential and far-reaching idea since Andre Courreges launched his space-age look.

St Laurent proves that color and form are the real essence of fashion today. The force of his collection, which has influenced styles from Tokyo to Timbuktu, is essentially based on color rather than cut.

Winter is usually notable for sombre, dark - toned hues. A dark costume worn on a grey day has been standard fashion philosophy since the early 1920s.

The blacks, the browns and the basic greys appeared simultaneously with the first autumn rains. Beautiful colors gradually became symbolic of a luxury which few could afford. A woman who rode round in a chauffeur - driven car might wear a delicate colored coat. But if she took the subway, she donned a dreary - colored, austere outfit.

CHANGED CONCEPT

Now, with one deft stroke, French designers have changed the whole concept: The greyer the day they say, the brighter the color.

Two years ago, Andre Courreges paved the way for today's color craze with two-toned silhouettes cut horizontally round the hips to waistline. It needed St. Laurent to add the final exclamation mark and make a monotone silhouette look practically old-fashioned today.

St. Laurent's Mondrian- and Poliakoff - inspired shifts, cleverly marked with blocks of color, have been more extensively copied than any other clothes shown in Paris this season.

Jacques Heim splashes color about as liberally as St. Laurent. Heim shows such odd combinations as a mustard-gold suit under a fuschia-colored knitted coat. His Jacquard prints were used for tunics and matching tights or long gaiter stockings, some in patterns ranging from fur prints to flower and snowflake designs, or bold, multi-colored geometric squares and stripes.

Heim even gives a color bath to real furs. He dyes modest rabbit and sumptuous mink alike in brilliant shades of pink, red, yellow or green.

A REMINDER

Wedding forms for write-ups are available at The Intelligencer and should be completed and returned BEFORE the ceremony so a report can be published immediately after the wedding.

Pictures may be submitted by your photographer up to three days after the wedding. We cannot publish wedding write-ups submitted later than six days after the date of the ceremony.

Accounts of showers and entertainments in honor of the bride do not belong with the wedding write-up, but should be sent in immediately after they are held, for publication separately.

Like Ostrich With Its Head in Sand Average European Pursues Affluence

By RUSSELL ELMAN

BRUSSELS (CP)—The European this fall nonchalantly continues his pursuit of the affluent society, seemingly indifferent to storm clouds at home and abroad.

The Common Market may be virtually paralysed, the Atlantic Alliance strained and parts of Asia aflame, but life in the Europe of the Six remains relaxed and free of tension.

"The average European, I am afraid, is behaving like an ostrich with its head buried in the sand," an Asian diplomat accredited to the European Community (France, West Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg) observed in a private conversation.

"He is preoccupied with his own well-being which he takes more and more for granted, and that is dangerous."

The prosperity and security of the 1960s have dulled the European's memory and refired his national pride, tarnishing the idealism that inspired him to sweep aside old enmities along with the rubble of the Second World War to clear the way for a "New Europe."

He has closed the book on the war and its horrors and, convinced that Soviet aggression is no longer a direct threat (although German reunification remains a tinder-box), he has lost the sense of urgency that fostered the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) with its American nuclear umbrella. Today, he bankers after a less subordinate role in the Atlantic partnership and a closing of the breach between Western and Eastern Europe.

SEEKS INDEPENDENCE

With the European Community expanding at a creditable four-per-cent annual increase in gross national product, the European only occasionally, and then perhaps begrudgingly, acknowledges his indebtedness to the Marshall Plan and European economic co - operation that helped to lift him from the abyss of post-war despair and defeatism.

Today, he frequently chafes at American investment on the Continent, assails the dollar's pedestal in international monetary affairs and balks at submerging his national identity in the supranational superstructure of the Brussels-based Common Market.

During the 20 years since 1945, the individual European has experienced a deep psychological change which has transformed his way of life. He has stopped yearning for the good old days and now deliberately puts the present and himself before the future and an inheritance for his children.

Assured of employment in a society where workers generally are scarcer than jobs, of steadily improving cradle - to - grave social welfare benefits, an ever-fattening wage packet and access to easy credit, he feels it more important to keep up with the Schmidts and the Duponts than to bury a nest egg under the floor boards.

As widespread poverty fades into history, Europe's streets are clogged with newer and bigger cars; its cities are spilling over into the countryside; its department stores are ringing up impressive sales of television sets, refrigerators and fur coats to men and women with money to burn.

SHUNS POLITICS

Many of the shoppers are the younger set, who find an outlet for their now-found spending power in sports cars, transistors and the latest fashion fads and for their unused energies in the cult of yeah-yeah, James Bond and St. Tropez.

In these good times, the European infinitely prefers an afternoon drive with his family to active participation in the domestic political scene. He is content to let the government (still largely run by the older generation) govern, reserving for election day his democratic (often obligatory) right to protest as did the Belgian voter in May or to endorse as did the West German electorate in September.

He still pays lip service to the ideal of a United Europe, though not committed to its final shape.

He has grown used to a Europe bereft of colonies and to his own country's loss of big power status but, taking for granted the unlikelihood of involvement in war or depression, he is susceptible to Gen. de Gaulle's concept of a European Europe which settles its own problems.

The 75-year-old French president, although bitterly criticized as isolationist and anachronistic, undeniably appeals, to the emotions of more than Frenchmen when he envisages a "constructive entente" of sovereign states from the Atlantic to the Urals, an independent Europe resuming its world "a role worthy of its resources and capacities."

TRIES SLITHERY SPORT

IPSWICH, England (CP)—George Barham, who claims to be the world egg - swallowing champion, is challenging all comers to beat his record of consuming 56 raw eggs in two minutes.

Certain groups of animals STARTED SMALL in stature. Over the years, succeeding generations developed to TREMENDOUS SIZES. The oldest and smallest elephant, for example, was no larger than a big dog. Only recently extinct, THE MAMMOTH was the largest.

PODOKESAURUS, about 3 feet long, lived 200 million years ago in North America. But another SAURIAN CALLED TYRANNOSAURUS had already grown to be 15 times as long as Podokesaurus.

COMPETITION among animals has had much to do with this increase in size and bodily strength. But another important factor is the ENVIRONMENT. The largest species, THE GORILLA, has reached an end point, in growth, if he is to continue to exist in his environment.

Formosa Representatives Working Hard on Official Washington

Contributor Answers Plea Of Candidate

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — John James Buchan, running here as an independent candidate in the Nov. 8 federal election, quipped "I can't even afford a clique string" in describing his campaign budget last week.

He will be able to operate on a shoe-string after all.

Wednesday he received a parcel from an anonymous contributor.

It contained a pair of shoe strings.

His opponents are Murdo Martin of the New Democratic Party; Robert Kilbrigdeck, Progressive Conservative, and Elmer E. Smith, Liberal. The seat was won by Mr. Martin in the last election.

WASHINGTON (CP) — High-level representatives from Formosa, one root cause of the bitter divisions between Communist China and the United States, have been working on official Washington for more than a month.

Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek, U.S.-educated wife of the elderly generalissimo-president of Nationalist China, arrived early in September.

She billed her visit as private and a response to invitations from friends. U.S. officials said they had no inkling of her motives.

Her brother-in-law, Chiang Ching-kuo, visited Washington during a 10-day U.S. tour at the invitation of Defence Secretary Robert McNamara. He is heir-apparent to the generalissimo, now nearly 80.

Mme. Chiang has had far greater welcomes here in the past; in 1941 she addressed the U.S. Congress as a symbol of Free China.

Today, her comings and goings are confined to the society pages but the still is received at high levels and she has shown the Nationalist Chinese flag busily if privately at a time when momentous events are shaking Asia.

DEBATE RISK

The timing of the visits coincides with the looming renewal of the United Nations debate—perhaps later this month — on Communist - ruled mainland China's seat.

It also resurrects the inevitability of the old president stepping aside at some time—and this has been his son's first exposure here.

Mme. Chiang has made several public appearances since arriving with a retinue of nearly 30 and taking up residence first in a lavish hotel suite and then in Washington mansion.

She has had tea briefly—and privately—with President Johnson. More than 1,000 Washington dignitaries have accepted her hospitality at a mass reception.

She can speak with authority for her husband. She and her son have apparently ruled out termination to send Nationalist China's 600,000 - man army—which still gets $100,000,000 U.S. aid a year—back to the mainland.

They have urged that Communist China's budding nuclear armory be wiped out.

They can also continue to count on firm American support in view of Asian events such as Viet Nam which have widened the rift between the U.S. and Communist China.

NOT THIS YEAR

As far Communist China's admission to the UN, and the corollary of Formosa perhaps being turfed out, State Secretary Rusk said after conferring with Mrs. Chiang: "We do not think there will be enough votes for the Communist Chinese to be admitted to the UN (this year)."

Next year, Americans admit, may be different.

Economically, Formosa has done so well that American economic aid to the 12,000,000-population island was ended last June.

Militarily, it still is secured primarily by the U.S. 7th Fleet, the world's most powerful.

As for the heir - apparent, Chiang Ching-kuo, 56, is regarded here as ruthlessly efficient, head of the secret police and probably the most feared man in Formosa.

His anti - Communist credentials seem assured although he spent 12 years in the Soviet Union, joining the Communist party, after an accord between his father and Joseph Stalin in 1925.

P.M. Approves Proposal to Solve Problem

TORONTO (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson Wednesday acclaimed as "a wise and imaginative proposal" the suggestion of Prime Minister Wilson that a mission of Commonwealth leaders attempt to solve the problem of independence for Rhodesia.

Mr. Pearson, interviewed at Toronto International Airport while en route to Guelph, Ont., to campaign for the Nov. 8 general election, said he was notified of the proposal in a telegram from Mr. Wilson Monday.

Following a threat from Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith to declare independence from Britain without the United Kingdom's approval, Mr. Wilson suggested that a mission of senior Commonwealth premiers try to see whether agreement can be reached.

Mr. Pearson said:

"I have wired back that I thought this was a wise and imaginative proposal and we would give it our full support and complete approval. We will do anything we can to help in this matter."

WOULD HE SERVE?

Asked whether he would be a member of the mission, Mr. Pearson said:

"I have no reason to believe I would be asked to take part in it but if I were asked to take part and it was considered important that I should be a member of the mission, well of course I would go.

"But I don't expect that will happen. I haven't heard yet about the composition of the mission."

Sources in London said Mr. Wilson suggested to Commonwealth leaders that four prime ministers be chosen — those from Australia, Ceylon, Nigeria and Zambia.

In Edmonton, External Affairs Minister Martin said Canada will use persuasion rather than force through the United Nations if Rhodesia declares independence.

"I can't see that any action Canada would take would involve the use of force," he said in an interview. "I hope persuasion will continue to be a helpful means of bringing this problem to a satisfactory conclusion."

Canada is opposed to a unilateral declaration of independence by Rhodesia, Mr. Martin said.

WELCOMES GET WIDER

LONDON (CP) — More than 430,000 tourists arrived in Britain in July, 60,000 more than in the same month in 1964. This breaks all records, says the British Travel Association.

Few Kremlin Problems Seem to Have Been Solved Without Nikita

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

A year without Nikita S. Khrushchev seems to have solved few problems for the Kremlin.

Government by committee has been the rule since the unpredictable Soviet premier was ousted from the Soviet scene. Veteran party men are in control, but younger men are pushing steadily toward the top.

For all of them, the Khrushchev legacy has been a maze of domestic and foreign policy complexities to unravel.

Communist problems. The collective leadership seems to be groping — and making moves as if indicating there might be significant changes before long.

Khrushchev's heavy shadow has not been entirely banished. Much of what he initiated in 10 years remains without his dynamism behind it. A confusing struggle seems to persist between two elements of the Communist party, liberal and conservative.

The domestic atmosphere suggests a slowly developing cultural and economic revolution. Abroad, the Kremlin is alert to flashing danger signals warning of the possibility of major war.

A year ago this week, while Khrushchev talked to the orbiting three-man Voskhod space team by radio from a Black Sea resort, the Communist party central committee quietly gathered in Moscow.

Two days later, the central committee announced it had decided to grant Khrushchev's request for retirement because of his age and his health.

It became clear the plotters had kicked him out, accusing him of blundering in foreign and Communist policy, damaging the economy and other sins.

How have his successors done? Today the picture looks like this:

Political: Two veterans of the Stalin era, Leonid Brezhnev, 58, and Alexei Kosygin, 61, hold the top jobs of party chief and premier, respectively.

Much authority seems vested in Anastas Mikoyan, 70, the last of the old Bolsheviks in the hierarchy. He is chairman of the Supreme Soviet presidium, part of president of the U.S.S.R.

Younger men are on the rise, too. Alexander N. Shelepin, 47, and Kirill T. Mazurov, 51, both a generation removed from the revolutionary fever of original Bolshevism.

Shelepin, now chief of the party and state control commission, seems to maintain a balance between the Liberals and conservatives.

Mazurov, increasingly prominent in foreign and domestic affairs, tends toward the conservative elements who worried that Khrushchev's liberalism and de-Stalinization had gone too far.

Economic: Late in September the party central committee adopted measures intended to end some of the economic confusion and woes engendered by Khrushchev's experiments in industry and agriculture. It stressed profits and incentives for consumer industries. In this, it had to deal with conflicting views of the military and other conservative elements concerned with Soviet defensive might.

Cultural: The Liberal wing seems to be holding its own against conservative, neo-Stalinist elements. The party still seeks to keep a rein on its writers and artists, but frequently extends the olive branch.

World Communism: If the new regime intended to mend the tear in the world Communist fabric, it failed. Khrushchev had been China's main target in the debate on how world revolution should be pursued. Today, Peking accuses Moscow of "Khrushchevism without Khrushchev," of a cowardly attitude on questions of war and peace, of retarding revolutions.

In Eastern Europe, the Soviet grip has weakened. The trend has been toward more independence of action, notably in economic policy.

Foreign Policy: The frustrations are as great as, if not greater than, during the Khrushchev era. The Soviets have been bedevilled by Chinese attempts to shut them out of the Asian Sphere, and by the border of Viet Nam.

The policy, over-all, remains the Khrushchev brand of peaceful co-existence, recognizing a danger that small wars could lead to a big one.

Waterloo County Warden Wins Plowing Match

MILLIKEN, Ont. (CP) — Clarence Diamond of New Hamburg, Ont., warden of Waterloo County and Reeve A. C. Rutherford of nearby Vaughan Township Wednesday won their plowing matches here at the 52nd International Plowing Championships.

Mr. Diamond won over a field of 10 in the wardens' class ahead of Herbert Hughes of Churchill, warden of Simcoe County, and J. W. Howell of RR1, St. George, warden of Brant County.

Davie Fulton In Race for PC Leadership

VANCOUVER (CP) — E. Davie Fulton said Wednesday he expects to be a candidate for leadership of the Progressive Conservative party "if and when a leadership convention takes place in the proper circumstances."

The former justice minister in the Diefenbaker government told a press conference it has never been any secret that on a long-range basis he is a potential leadership candidate.

But he declared emphatically the question was of no importance at this time. The Conservatives were united as never before under John Diefenbaker.

Mr. Fulton is seeking election Nov. 8 in the interior British Columbia riding of Kamloops which he represented in Parliament for 18 years before quitting in 1963 to be leader of the B.C. Conservatives.

He said Prime Minister Pearson must say what he is going to do to prevent further scandals in the government.

He said he agreed with Mr. Pearson that the federal election campaign should not be one of "smear and smear" but added:

"He can't refuse to face this issue simply by sweeping it under a rug labelled smear."

Maritimes At Top of List Says Sharp

DIGBY, N.S. (CP) — Trade Minister Sharp said Wednesday the development of the Maritime provinces is "at the top of our list."

Mr. Sharp, speaking at a Liberal rally here, said a new Canada was emerging and the Maritime provinces would make a greater contribution to the country's economy than ever before.

Canada had been expanding faster than ever, he said, and this was the best possible guarantee that the Maritimes would develop.

He said Canadians were losing confidence in "nuisance" splinter parties. Conservative Leader Diefenbaker was the Liberals' greatest friend because he was turning voters away from the Progressive Conservative party.

Pearson Asked to Assist Needy, Not Bright Students

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson was told by university spokesmen today that his $10,000,000 - a - year scholarship plan should be designed to help needy students, not just the brightest ones.

The Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada said in a brief to Mr. Pearson that any federal program of need-repayable aid to students should provide bursaries as well as scholarships.

The group recommended that bursaries be made available in all university years and based on financial need and adequate academic standing.

The scholarships should be limited to first-year college students and based on provincial matriculation standing, the brief added.

Mr. Pearson announced Oct. 5 that his government plans to allocate $10,000,000 annually for university scholarships starting in the fall of 1966. Such a program was promised by the Liberals in the 1962 and 1963 election campaigns.

The prime minister said scholarships worth up to $1,000 a year would be available to deserving students for four years of study. The amounts would vary in line with each student's financial means.

The brief criticizes recommended that the administration of the federal scholarships be co - ordinated with provincial plans.

Federal bursaries should be co - ordinated with the Canada student loans plan and all other forms of student aid to ensure that a maximum number of students will benefit, the group added.

The brief recommended annual conferences of federal, provincial and university officials to plan details of aid programs for students and universities.

It said female students and students in the early years of college should get more support through bursaries than through loans.

Scholarships of up to $250 should not prevent needy students from getting extra help through bursaries.

Copies of the brief were issued to the press in advance of the meeting between Mr. Pearson and a delegation from the universities.

GAC Forced to Revise Thinking on Takeover

TORONTO (CP)—An executive of a corporation seeking to buy part of insolvent Atlantic Acceptance Corp. said Wednesday how a weekend look at the finance company's books last June forced his firm to revise its thinking.

Walter Strothman, vice-president of General Acceptance Corp. of Allentown, Pa., told an Ontario Supreme Court hearing that when GAC first heard Atlantic had defaulted June 30 on some short-term debts it assumed AAC had made a "slip" in scheduling the dates its debts matured.

Two days later Atlantic went into receivership and GAC decided it might be possible to take it over, Mr. Strothman said. At that time GAC had no idea there was anything seriously wrong.

Then GAC moved 30 experts in for a weekend check of some Atlantic offices and as a result changed their whole approach to a possible takeover, he testified.

The hearing, which started Tuesday, is being held to determine whether the GAC bid will be allowed by the court. It would result in about $76,000,000 being made available to holders of secured notes of Atlantic, Montreal Trust Co., receiver and manager for the finance company, has estimated.

OPPOSE BIDS

A group of holders of unsecured notes are opposing the bid on grounds there would be no assets left for them to divide, after the secured notes are paid off.

Mr. Strothman, still on the stand when the hearing was adjourned, said that by June 28 the whole situation had changed and it was too late to worry about shareholders. The only thing to do was to make an offer that would give maximum benefit to creditors.

He said the spot check indicated Atlantic's personal loan business was normal, but there were some "strange" facts in the acceptance portfolio.

The books showed loans had been made to businessmen who had gone into receivership or bankruptcy before and who should have been in their contract with Atlantic.

Africans' New War of Independence Is Against Commerce-Ruling Asians

A Canadian press reporter travelling through East Africa found considerable resentment against Asians who play a major part in the retail trade of the area. Here he explains why.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

KAMPALA, Uganda (CP)—The young African zealot gestured angrily toward a cluster of shops—Indian dukas.

"We won't be content until our cities look more like Africa and less like Bombay," he declared emphatically.

His sentiment in one form or another is expressed throughout Uganda, Kenya and Tanzania over and over again as East African wage a new war of independence—this time against the commerce - ruling Asian traders.

Population of Asians, a term that many includes Indians and Pakistanis, in the three former British territories is estimated at nearly 400,000 as they hold a powerful grip on the retail trade in the area of 25,000,000 people.

The number compares with a total European or white population of only about 80,000—and the whites do not generally compete with the Africans, in small stores and artisan trades, on the same basis as the Asians.

The result is that, with yesterday's political conflict over white rule put aside, racial friction today is far more sharp between the Asian and African than between white and African.

POSES PROBLEM

"The problem of the Asian community is a very serious one—in recent times the most serious one in East Africa," said Amir Habib Jamal, 44, one of Tanzania President Julius Nyerere's key planning ministers, in an interview at Dar es Salaam.

In Uganda, an African boycott against Asian traders five years ago blew up into violence and mobs out down coffee trees and burned houses as they ran amok. After that the government stepped up aid to African traders.

"They have three prices in their dookas—one for the Asian, one for the European and one for the African," said a Ugandan taxi driver in Kampala. "We never win."

An English - born export-import company owner in Nairobi said he is convinced that the Kenya government's regulations against export of capital, and its suspicion that "expatriates" take out Kenya citizenship, are aimed mainly at the Asians.

"The Africans would like to see the backs of them."

Yet it is admitted by many that the Asians played some part in the independence struggle and now perform an important — perhaps indispensable—role in the economy of the country and in professional life.

INDIA BACKS AFRICANS

Observers feel, for instance, that Nigeria in West Africa, with no Asian problem, is prominent in the international field. The Indian government has consistently defended the rights of Indians in white-ruled South Africa, but has taken a different attitude to its people in black Africa.

"Africa for the Africans," has been the Indian government's policy in this respect.

The late prime minister Nehru said in 1950: "We have declared often enough that we do not want any Indians in Africa to claim privileges at the cost of Africans. . . . They must always put the interests of the indigenous population first."

The Calcutta-educated Jamal, who obviously feels affection for his African compatriots, said Tanzania could more easily cope with the racial problem but for difficulties in the sister countries, Uganda and Kenya.

Tanzania emphasized the importance of performance, merit, experience and skill as opposed to the concept of a strictly "black" Africa or "Africanization."

"It's a matter of attitudes, not roles or laws," said Jamal.

ARRIVED LONG AGO

The Asians are by no means Johnnys-come-lately in East Africa. They were here long before the Europeans arrived. Not only had Arabs traded down the coastline from early times but Indians had crossed the Indian Ocean before Vasco da Gama in fact, it was a Muslim pilot who guided the Portuguese explorer to India in the 15th century.

The building of a railway from the coast to Uganda in the 1890s attracted a large number of Indian laborers to the interior. By the time of the Second World War, they dominated much of the trade and commerce in the three British territories, both in the towns and in the bush.

As British author John Hatch says in his The History of Post-War Africa: "In some ways they resembled the Jews of medieval Europe, indispensable as money lenders and traders, but hated for the power this gave them over those who made use of their services."

By 1933 the colonial government, alarmed, restricted Asian traders to towns, but this simply placed African shopkeepers in the bush at the mercy of Asian wholesalers.

EMERGY AGAIN STOPPED

"Whatever the government did to help the Africans, it wound up by helping the Asians," an official said ruefully.

Subsequently, a credit scheme was organized for African traders but this ran into trouble because some of the traders used the money to buy new wives and booze.

Now the whole setup has been reorganized on a more efficient basis, trade expertise has been imported from the neighboring business-wise Sudan, and Africans are making progress.

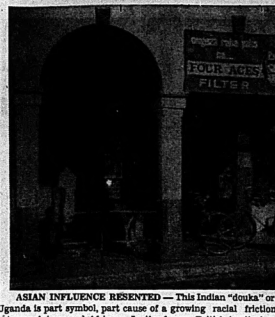
The visitor, however, is struck by the Oriental look of towns throughout East Africa.

Although much of the Asian energies are concentrated on commerce and the lower echelon professional areas, a notable exception is the Madhvani industrial group of Uganda which—with huge interests in the Jinja area and elsewhere—contributes in taxes, duty and excise more than 10 per cent of the country's total revenue.

Whatever the alleviating factors, it is generally recognized that the Asians present a distinct problem in East Africa. They are criticized not only for their business acumen and ruthlessness, but for their aloofness from Africans—there is little intermarriage — and for their competition in the professional class.

It has been noted that the only political assassination in Kenya has been that of an Asian member of Parliament, Pio da Gama Pinto, shot last February.

Tomorrow: An African safari.



ASIAN INFLUENCE RESENTED — This Indian "douka" or shop in Kampala, Uganda is part symbol, part cause of a growing racial friction in East Africa between Asians and Africans. In the former British territories of Uganda, Kenya and Tanzania the Asians number about 400,000 in a population of 25,000,000 but they have a powerful hold on trade and commerce and the lower professional echelons. Charges Laid Against Men Dismissed

WALKERTON, Ont. (CP)—Charges of supplying liquor to a person apparently under the age of 21, laid against two Owen Sound men as a result of a police raid July 16 on a house in nearby Tara, were dismissed in magistrate's court here Wednesday.

Magistrate O. C. McClevis dismissed the charges against both John Stoddard, a distillery salesman, and Robert Gray, a brewery salesman, after hearing the case against Mr. Stoddard. The magistrate said he was dismissing the charges on the ground that Roger Kennedy, 18, of Tara, a minor involved in the case, "could very well be taken for 21 or over."

"He's a big boy," said the magistrate. "In fact, he's a man."

Kennedy was convicted of having liquor acquired illegally and was fined $50.

Mr. Stoddard testified he supplied a case of liquor to Kennedy on the understanding it was for a wedding. As a licensed distillery representative he is allowed to make such sales legally. He testified he had no reason to doubt that Kennedy was of legal age, since he knew Kennedy played on intermediate hockey and baseball teams with men up to 30 years old.

List of Beautiful Words? Surely Cash Has to Qualify

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Wilfrid Funk, the lexicographer, once picked these as the 10 most beautiful words: dawn, hush, lullaby, murmuring, tranquil, mist, luminous, chimes, golden and melody. . . . We don't see how he could make such a list and leave off the word cash. . . . It has a lovely sound to everybody.

Do you have accidents for no apparent reason? . . . Maybe you are among the 25 per cent of all people whom some investigators believe are born accident prone.

Quotable notables: "An investment in knowledge pays the best interest". — Benjamin Franklin.

But getting an education costs more all the time. . . . The expense of attending a private U.S. college has increased more than 85 per cent in the last 10 years.

The safest time of day to drive your car is shortly before noon. . . . The most dangerous time is the early hours after midnight.

Slogies for the ladies: Eugene L. Raymond, president of the American Cigar Institute, says 600,000 U.S. women now smoke the new small stylized cigars.

Napoleon once said, "Water, air and cleanliness are my favorite medicines." . . . He disliked exercise. . . . But research indicates most people's metabolism functions best if they expend from 300 to 500 calories a day in the form of exercise.

Are your wife's diamonds looking shabby? . . . Carol Channing, the musical comedy star, says the best way to clean the gems is to wash them in warm sudsy water containing a few drops of ammonia.

Folklore: if you eat too much pork, in time you'll grow bristles on your back. . . . When you see a new moon, jingle the coins in your pockets — and you'll have enough spending money to last you until the next new moon appears. . . . If it storms on the day of your wedding, you'll have a stormy marriage. . . . Keep a piece of wedding cake in your home, and you'll have good luck as long as the cake lasts.

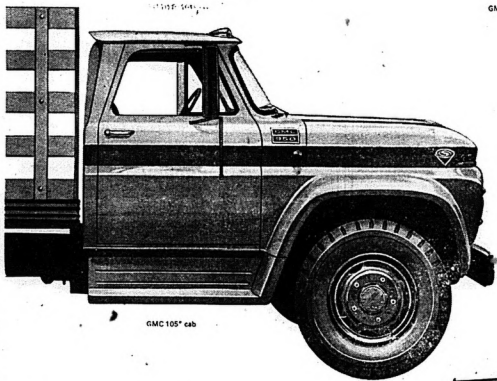
NEW V6 Gasoline Engines!
NEW 92" Cab! NEW models!

GMC Handi-Van



GMC 105" cab

NEW TORO-FLOW 4-CYCLE DIESEL ENGINES
New Toro-Flows are a triumph of GMC Engineering Leadership. Now diesel operational savings and long life are available for medium-duty applications. V6 and V8 Toro-Flows give up to double the fuel mileage of similar gas-powered equipment, without a high initial cost usually associated with diesels. Five power-rated Toro-Flow diesels from 130 hp to 220 hp are available for medium and heavy-duty applications.

NEW GASOLINE ENGINES
For 1966, a new in-line 6, a new V8 and 4 new V6 gasoline engines join the GMC lineup. These strong new V6s develop exceptional torque at low engine speeds. Compact V6 block with short-stroke oversquare design cuts power-robbing friction and heat losses to a minimum.

NEW 92" CONVENTIONAL CAB
Handsomely styled, GMC's new 92" BBC conventional cab allows longer payload length over normal conventional cabs. Construction features lap joints for great strength, excellent sealing; helps reduce moisture-holding nooks and crannies where rust begins. Flat cab floor provides extra foot space, is easy to keep clean. Separate fender, hood, grille and side panels allow single-panel replacement or repair.

NEW MODELS
GMC's range of new engines, new transmissions and differentials, engine-axle combinations, and the new 92" conventional cab bring the total to 397 GMC models available for '66. In the new 92" cab series alone, gasoline engines available include four V6s, two V6 Toro-Flow diesels and four GMC diesels. GMC has been setting truck standards in Canada for close to thirty years. Engineering Leadership is the key. And with a wider model lineup, new engines and a longer list of options, GMC is an even better buy in '66.

SPORTSLICE

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

Some day, the man said, a cow will kill a butcher, a mouse will marry an elephant and Liz Taylor will enter a nunnery. Until then the most improbable happening, baseball-wise, has to be the Miracle of the 1914 Boston Braves.

If the Dodgers win the current world series it won't come under the head of "Miracle" for four teams have come up after losing the first two tilts to grab the gold and glory.

The 1921 New York Giants were the first to do the trick against the Yankees, but that was a best-of-nine competition.

In best-of-seven series, the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers came back against the Yankees, the 1956 Yankees against the Dodgers and the 1958 Yanks against Milwaukee.

The 1914 Braves had languished so long in the cellar they were named honorary members of the Order of Angleworms. They began the 1914 season by losing the first 14 games.

On the Fourth of July, when legend had it the team in first place would win, they were dead last, 15 games behind the leading Giants and five behind the seventh place Phillies. They had lost 40 and won only 26. A minor bush league club beat them 10-2 in an exhibition.

Then overnight something happened. They blasted off like an underground rocket and started zooming. So embedded in the cellar had they been they donned sun glasses and reached ground level on July 19. But once in daylight they took off like a homesick angel.

They started to click like El Greco's castenets. In the space of 72 hours they rocketed to seventh, to sixth, and to fourth. On August 10 they leaped from fourth to second.

Thirteen days later they were tied for the lead, slipped to second and third, then went into the top spot for the first time. September 2 they dropped back a notch and regained control September 8.

From then on they won going away. When the season ended they were 10½ games in front of the second-place Giants and 34½ games ahead of Cincinnati who had supplanted them in eighth place.

From July 4th until they clinched the pennant on September 29th, they set the fastest, most furious sprint major league baseball has ever known.

They won 62 games out of 78, a .797 pace, and from July 4th until season's end they won 68 of 87 or a .782 stride.

But that was only half the miracle. The rest was yet to come. The Braves' world series opponents were Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics, winners of four pennants in five seasons.

Featuring the famous $100,000 infield and the great pitching of Chief Bender, Eddie Plank and Jack Coombs the Athletics were heavy favorites.

But half a miracle is no good. It has to be a whole to be a good one. And the Braves saw to it there were no half measures.

The Braves never faltered in their stride. They went on to bowl over the Mackmen in four straight games, 7-1, 3-0, 6-1 and 3-1 for the first clean sweep in world series history.

That was the Miracle of the Braves, accomplished chiefly by a manager, George Stallings, pitching, infielding and guts. Stallings had a way in making players believe in themselves.

The Braves with the exception of three pitchers, Dick Rudolph, Seattle Bill James and George Tyler, were not a "name team."

In fact after it had so dramatically clinched the pennant, an expert of that era commented, "The team is composed entirely of players with either too little or too much major league experience. The records show the team to be mediocre in batting, inferior in base-running and superior only in infielders and batteries.

And superior, he neglected to add, in miracles.

Grant Had It Figured

"Hit It, Knew It Was Gone"

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Jim Grant pitched perhaps his best game of the year as Minnesota Twins downed Los Angeles Dodgers 5-1 in the sixth game of the World Series Wednesday.

Grant allowed only six hits, none until Ron Fairley led off the fifth with a single to centre. He struck out five and walked none, not allowing a runner to pass second except for Fairley's home run in the seventh.

But he wanted to talk about his home run, not his pitching.

"I watched the pitcher (Howie Pierd) carefully as I waited in the on deck circle while he was purposely walking Frank (Quilici) to get at me.

"I said to myself, 'he's going to throw me a curve. He can't afford to give me a fast ball in a situation like this. We had runners on first and second, you know.

"Sure enough, he threw the curve. I knew it was gone the moment I hit it. I remember starting to run, then stopping and yelling 'a home run, a home run.'

"When I rounded third base, Billy Martin, our coach, grabbed my hand. 'How about that, baby,' I grinned at him. I was laughing by the time I reached the dugout."

Grant, a fairly good hitter for a pitcher, recalled that he had hit three or four home runs during his big league career—none this past season—but couldn't remember his last one.

'Mudcat' Mauls Dodgers

By JOE REICHLER

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Now it was Walter Alston's turn to worry.

Shakon by Wednesday's unexpected 5-1 loss to Minnesota Twins, the manager of Los Angeles Dodgers was undecided whether to pitch right-hander Don Drysdale or southpaw Sandy Koufax in the seventh and final game of the World Series today.

Normally a situation like that is like picking between the Hope Diamond and the Star of India. But in this case, the two Dodger pitching gems have slight imperfections.

Drysdale is the more rested of the two, but he injured his pitching hand while batting during Sunday's game.

Koufax's arthritic left elbow showed no ill effects after Monday's game, but Dodger concern whether he'll have his usual effectiveness after only two days of rest.

"All things being equal, I would rather pitch a left-hander in this park," said Alston Wednesday.

MELE CONFIDENT

Sam Mele, who took a big gamble with Jim Grant Wednesday—and won—had no such problems as he confidently looked forward to the seventh game, fourth in the Twins' home park where they have yet to be beaten by the Dodgers.

"It's Jim Kaat," he said emphatically. "I told him he'd pitch the seventh game even before we played the sixth.

Kaat defeated Koufax 5-1 in Minnesota in the second game of the series but lost to him 7-0 in Los Angeles Monday.

Whereas Koufax pitched nine innings, Kaat hurled only 2 1-3, giving up four runs and six hits.

"I feel fine," said the Twins' left-hander. "I welcome the opportunity to get another crack at them, especially in our ball park."

Never in series history has a home-park been more beneficial to a club. The Dodgers won all three at their park, and the Twins took all three in theirs.

GRANT HOMERS

Grant, pitching with only two days rest, squared the series Wednesday by burling a six-hitter and belting a three-run homer.

Bob Allison's two-run homer off Claude Osteen in the fourth gave Grant the margin he needed. Then he came up in the sixth and blasted reliever Howe Reed's first pitch 370 feet and deep into the left field stands with two men on base.

A record crowd of 49,378 rose in a thunderous ovation for Grant, 21-game winner, as he trotted home. Grant was the first pitcher to hit a homer in the series since Lew Burdette did it for Milwaukee Braves, Oct. 2, 1958. It was the first by an American League pitcher since Jim Bagby for Cleveland Indians in 1920.

Grant, beaten Sunday in the fourth game when he was knocked out in the sixth inning, came back strong as though he had a month's rest. He had a no-hitter going until Ron Fairly opened the fifth with a single to centre.

A seventh-inning home run by Fairly ruined Grant's bid for a shutout.

Osteen, who never before had lost to the Twins in his days with Washington Senators and the Dodgers, finally dropped his first decision to the Minnesota sluggers after beating them six times.

The crafty lefty had shut out the Twins in Los Angeles in the third game last Saturday 4-0.

The Twins started out making life miserable for Osteen in the first inning when Zoilo Versalles led off with a single. He was erased on Joe Nossek' double play, but Tony Oliva kept the water boiling with a single to left.

Earl Battey led off the second with a triple to left centre, and Don Mincher walked, but Osteen escaped with a whole hide.

Again in the third, Osteen was in trouble when he walked Versalles on a 3-2 pitch, but the next three went quietly.

Dick Tresevski, playing second for the injured Jim Lefebvre, messed up Battey's leadoff grounder in the fourth. Allison, who had struck out earlier and had only one hit in 10 trips, ripped Osteen's third pitch and drove it into the lower pavilion in left for the two-run homer that really won the ball game.

VICTORIOUS TWINS—Twins pitcher Jim Grant, left, and outfielder Bob Allison are two happy ball players in Twins' dressing room after they beat the Los Angeles Dodgers, 5-1, to even the World Series at 3 games each. The pair accounted for all the Twins' runs. Allison homered in the fourth with one on base and Grant hit a circuit blow with two on in the sixth. (AP Wirephoto)

Loose Surface In Infield

Was This A 'Dirty' Trick?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The groundkeeper for Minnesota Twins said Wednesday "man-ager Sam Mele likes a slow field," and admitted he added loose dirt to the Metropolitan Stadium infield before the sixth game of the World Series.

Tie Detroit 4-4

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Billy Hicke, who got into 57 National Hockey League games last season and scored only six goals, has put in a claim for a new job with New York Rangers.

The 27-year-old right winger, unloaded to the Rangers by Montreal Canadiens last spring after two straight unproductive seasons, appeared on the power play unit Wednesday night and fired two goals as New York tied Detroit Red Wings 4-4 in a pre-season exhibition game.

Even in his best year, when he scored 20 goals for the Canadiens in the 1961-62 campaign, Hicke wasn't considered a top goal-scoring threat. And the Rangers thought so little of him when they acquired him in exchange for Dick Duff that they farmed him out for the closing weeks of the season.

But the eccentric little Saskaw kept New York in the game with a goal in each of the first two periods Wednesday and Rod Gilbert tied it up for the last time early in the third.

Donnie Marshall, another former Canadien, was the other Ranger goal-getter. Claude Bathgate, Billy Harris, Gordie Howe and Norm Ullman scored for the Wings. It was Howe's end goal in as many nights for Bathgate and Harris, who helped Detroit defeat Montreal 4-3 Tuesday.

Meanwhile the Canadiens had trouble with a Detroit farm club, eventually defeating Americans League 4-3 despite outbooking the minor leaguers 41-20.

GOALIES HOT

Bobby Rousseau, Red Berenson, Gilles Tremblay and Jean Beliveau scored for the Stanley Cup champions, who ran into hot goaltending by George Gardner and Bob Champoux. Ryan Campbell, Claude Laforge and Pat Hannigan replied for the Hornets.

Bathgate, Harris and Don McKenney, all forwards acquired from Toronto Maple Leafs during the summer, signed their contracts with the Red Wings Wednesday.

The Leafs trimmed their roster, assigning centre Pete Stemkowski and rookie left-winger Brian Conacher to Rochester Americans along with defenceman Darryl Sly and right-winger Gerry Ehman whom they had borrowed from their AHL farm club for three days.

Eddie Litzenberger, a 10-year man in the NHL with Montreal, Chicago, Detroit and Toronto, was shipped by the Leafs to Victoria Maple Leafs of the Western League. He has been with Rochester for the last two years.

The Leafs also announced that defenceman Bobby Baun, one of their supplementary nominees for next week's All-Star game, will be replaced by Marcel Pronovost. Baun, at odds with the club over salary, has been absent from the Leaf camp since Saturday.

60 Attend Junior B Camp Opener

Some 60 young hopefuls cavorted over the Memorial Arena ice last night as the Belleville junior "B" squad opened its training camp.

No permanent coach has been appointed as yet. Last night Stu Muirhead help out the management by putting the squad through its initial paces.

It was hard to select the potential wheat from the tare but club president Gordie Bell noted some who showed team potential.

They were there in all ages from midget upwards.

Muirhead put them through an hour of gruelling physical calisthenics before dropping a puck on the ice.

"You cannot tell much from the opening night" Bell said, "but I think we are going to have a pretty fair team by the time October 29th, the opening date rolls around."

Most of the youngsters showed surprising speed considering it was their first seasonal appearance on skates.

A heavy training schedule has been arranged. Practice will be held eight nights before the opening date.

The next workout is scheduled for tomorrow night from 7 to 9 p.m. It is expected the axe will fall on many after the Friday night workout.

Other training camp dates are October 18, 19, 21, 22, 25, 26 and 27th. Times will be published in the sports calendar.

In passing it is noted that Jim Rutherford, former junior player, has joined the RCAF for a five year stint and will train as a pilot. He leaves for Centralia November 15 to start his new career.

Cooking, Park, Crowd

Home, Sweet Home, Twins' Aid

By LEW FERGUSON

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—There's nothing like home cooking and the home baseball park to halt a losing streak, Minnesota Twins' manager Sam Mele said Wednesday. And his "ball park proved it.

"Sure, it helped for us to get back home," Mele said, after Twins defeated Los Angeles 5-1 and evened the World Series at three games apiece.

Mele couldn't stop tossing superlatives in the direction of winning pitcher Jim Grant.

"The guy did a fantastic job, that's all there is to it," he said. "How about the job he did? That's definitely one of his better games, but he pitched some great ones for us this year against Chicago White Sox."

Mele said he had told Grant to throw as hard as he could for as long as he could.

"I kept asking him if he was okay," Mele said, "and he said his stuff was good and he felt good. He's had a cold and a cough for a month. I didn't know how far he could go."

ALLISON HOMERED

The other hero of the Twins' dressing room was left fielder Bob Allison, whose fourth-inning, two-run homer broke a scoreless tie.

Allison said he was expecting a pitch near the plate from Claude Osteen, and he got it—a fast ball which he rode into the left field pavilion.

Said Allison: "Osteen had good stuff, but the background was better here and you could pick his pitches up better."

Left-hander Jim Kaat said he "welcomes another shot at the Dodgers. "I just hope to keep my pitches down and not get into trouble with high stuff as I did in Los Angeles."

"Everybody's available tomorrow," Mele said. "Grant may even be in the bullpen. I'll see how he feels."

WIN SCHOLARSHIPS

BURNABY, B.C. (CP)—Five players from Ontario — among 18 winners of football scholarships announced Wednesday by Simon Fraser University.

They are Robert Boyer and Robert McGrein of Brantford, Ronald Faulkner and Kim Rawley of Ottawa, and Hans Jaanisson of Toronto.

Red Wings Ink Three Ex-Leafs

DETROIT (AP)—Three former Toronto players acquired in off-season deals signed their 1965-66 contracts Wednesday with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League.

Andy Bathgate, Billy Harris and Don McKenney agreed to terms after brief talks with manager-coach Sid Abel.

Bathgate and Harris came to the Red Wings in an eight-player trade with Maple Leafs last May. McKenney was acquired from them during the NHL's annual draft.

SOVIETS ARRIVE

MONTREAL (CP)—Men and women of the top Soviet volleyball teams arrived by plane Wednesday from overseas. They are here for a tour of Canada during which they will be playing ranking teams from the United States.

Jim Brown Takes To The Air

NEW YORK (AP)—Football star Jimmy Brown, who once rejected a $100,000 offer to become a fighter, will be part of the television broadcasting team for the Eenie Terrell-George Chuvalo fight in Toronto Nov. 1, Michael Malitz said Wednesday.

Malitz heads the firm which will handle the closed-circuit television of the 15-round title fight between Terrell, the World Boxing Association's heavyweight champion, and Chuvalo, the Canadian champion.

Brown will do the color commentary between round, said Malitz.

Grant Crossed Alston

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) You're losing 2-0 in the sixth inning. The opposition has a man on second base with two out. A .186 hitter is up next. Then the pitcher. What do you do?

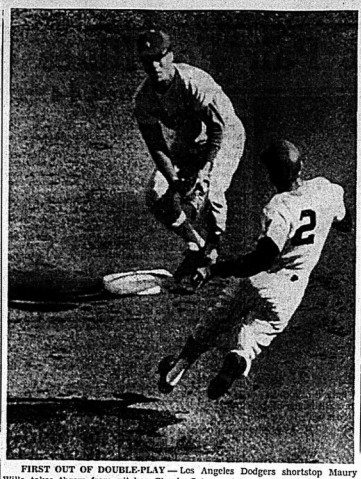
Walter Alston had that decision to make in Wednesday's sixth World Series game. His Los Angeles Dodgers trailed Minnesota Twins and had not been making much headway against Jim (Mudcat) Grant.

Alston chose to walk the .186 hitter, rookie second-baseman Frank Quilici, setting up a force play at each base. He decided to have Howie Reed pitch to Grant.

Grant hit the first pitch into the left field pavilion, a 362-foot homer that put the game at 5-0.

Although Grant averaged only .155 in regular season play and had hit no homers, he was regarded as a good hitting pitcher. He had one double in seven previous at bats during the series.

As it turned out, it didn't make any difference. Bob Allison's two-run homer in the fourth off starter and loser Claude Osteen was enough to sink the Dodgers.



FIRST OUT OF DOUBLE-PLAY — Los Angeles Dodgers shortstop Maury Wills takes throw from pitcher Claude Osteen, steps on second to force out Minnesota Twins Zoilo Versalles for the first out of a first-inning double-play at Metropolitan Stadium. Play started when Twins centrefielder Joe Nossek grounded to Osteen. Nossek was out at first on Wills toss to Wes Parker. (AP Wirephoto)

Call Meeting To Organize Junior Loops

Organization of a district junior "D" and "C" hockey leagues is expected to be made at a special meeting slated for Napanee Monday October 18 starting at 8 p.m.

OHA vice president Jack Devine said today that he expects a four - team "C" loop and a five - squad "D" circuit.

Junior "C" clubs expected to line up are Picton, Napanee, Gananoque and Royal Military College.

The junior "D" league will likely see entries from Wellington, Bancroft, Tweed, Madoc and Campbellford.

This year all junior classifications are "strictly on their own."

The Belleville junior "B" schedule called for games with "C"s clubs, Kingston and Peterborough "B" teams last year. The latter two clubs played an interlocking schedule with the Toronto Metro Junior "B" circuit.

It was felt that an "each-to-his-own" policy would be better for the game, the teams and the fans.

DAVIS DIES

COVINA, Calif. (AP)—Former major league baseball pitcher Curt Davis died here following a short illness. Davis, 61, broke into the majors in 1934 with Philadelphia Phillies and played with Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals before moving to Brooklyn Dodgers for six seasons, 1940-45.

Parker Out For Season?

TORONTO (CP) — Jackie Parker, a defensive backfielder with Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference, may miss the rest of the season because of a knee injury.

Parker injured the knee last Friday in an interlocking game here against Calgary Stampeders.

Tests Wednesday revealed an operation is needed to repair ligament damage. This would force him out of the lineup for the Argos' final three games.

HAWKS BEAT SARNIA

SARNIA (CP) — St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series scored four goals in the third period to edge Sarnia Legionnaires of the OHA Western Junior B series 8-5 Wednesday night in an exhibition game.

62-Year Jinx Faced The Twins

MINNEAPOLIS (CP)—Ever since the World Series began, no team has been able to take one by winning only at home.

That was the 62-year-old jinx confronting Minnesota Twins in the seventh game of the 1965 series today.

The Twins and Los Angeles Dodgers were out-and-out homers through the first six games, the Twins winning the first two here, dropping the next three at Los Angeles and returning to square the set Wednesday.

Twice before, a series went into the seventh game before somebody won on the road. The Dodgers, then based in Brooklyn, and New York Yankees were involved in both occasions.

Johnny Podres, still a member of the Dodgers, broke up the first one in 1955, beating New York 2-0 with an eight-hitter at Yankee Stadium. The Yankees took a grisly revenge the following year, walloping Brooklyn 9-0 at Ebbets Field in the seventh game behind Johnny Kucks' three-hitter.

Cross-Country Meet Slated For Oct. 18

The annual COSSA Bay of Quinte District cross - country championships are slated for the Outlet Provincial Park on Monday October 18th.

It is expected that the greater majority of the 16 secondary schools comprising the district will participate.

Last year eleven schools took part sending some 200 young athletes to the various classifications.

Classifications include juvenile, junior, intermediate and senior.

The juvenile and juniors will cover a course of 1.7 miles; intermediates 2.5 and seniors three miles.

The championships get under way at three p.m.

The first and second place teams plus the top twenty runners in each division, qualify for the COSSA championships.

Evanskun Top Rookie

Faloney Named Eastern MVP

TORONTO (CP) — Quarterback Bernie Faloney and Hanker Terry Evanshen, Montreal Alouettes' outstanding pass combination, were named Wednesday as the Eastern Football Conference Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year, respectively.

Faloney, the ageless veteran who came to Alouettes in an eight-player trade last January, was named the winner of the Jeff Russel Trophy as the player who best combined ability and sportsmanship.

Evanshen is the EFC's top receiver with 30 receptions in 11 games.

In 1964, halfback Dick Shatto of Toronto Argonauts won the Jeff Russel award and Al Irwin of Montreal the rookie honors.

Faloney, who guided Hamilton Tiger-Cats to seven league crowns and two Canadian titles in eight seasons, leads the EFC passers with 102 completions so far this season.

The play of the 33-year-old star has been instrumental in guiding Montreal into the playoffs. Not since Sam Etcheverry bolted the Als four seasons ago when a trade which involved Faloney blew apart, have Als had a strong man at quarterback.

Faloney's record in 11 games this season with the third-place Alouettes includes 1,081 yards gained passing, five touchdown passes and a 51.2 per cent completion average, all second only to the pace of Russ Jackson of Ottawa.

Evanshen, 21, a Montreal native, fifled in his first try to win a spot on the Montreal roster after playing college ball at Utah State. But he bounced back this year.

Included in his 30 receptions are two touchdown passes and a total of 528 yards gained.

Injuries Cause Shuffle

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Alouettes may make a major shuffle before they meet Toronto Argonauts Saturday at Toronto in an Eastern Football Conference game.

Defensive tackle Ted Elsby, who scored a touchdown against the Argos last year, showed up Wednesday with a hurting knee.

"We'll likely sit him out," said coach Jim Trimble. "He was bit on the front of the knee and twisted it."

The shake-up will probably involve moving guard Wilbert Scott to the defensive line at either end or tackle. Scott filled in for linebacker Jim Andreotti for four games when Andreotti had mononucleosis.

Charlie Baillie, who joined the Als three games ago as a replacement for Dick Dalstri, will get a chance at centre.

100,000 See Poles Beat Scots

GLASGOW (AP)—Italy's soccer team is a strong favorite to win its race with Scotland for a place in the World Cup finals.

The Scots, who have been running neck - and - neck with Italy in group eight of the European Zone qualifications, slipped Wednesday night and lost 2-1 to Poland before a crowd of 100,000 at Glasgow's Hampden Park stadium.

That left Scotland with five points and only two matches to go—both against Italy. The two countries are scheduled to clash at Glasgow Nov. 9 and in Naples Dec. 7.

The Italians also have five points, but they have a game in hand and play a home game against Poland Nov. 1.

The Scots seemed heading for victory when their centre-half and captain, Billy McNeill, sent them into the lead in the 10th minute. They did nearly all the attacking but could not add to their score.

Towards the end, Scotland lost its grip on the game and the Poles surprised them by grabbing a win with two goals within a minute.

Chisox Lopez To Retire

CHICAGO (AP)—White Sox manager Al Lopez is "through with baseball" and is prepared for retirement, the Chicago Tribune says.

An exclusive story quotes Lopez as saying by phone from his Tampa, Fla., home that he already had informed the baseball club of his decision to retire.

Lopez was quoted as saying the decision was personal and not due to health or commitments elsewhere. He said he had no other baseball job. Lopez has been offered a number of other major league positions during his career.

"It's all news to me and I talked with Al no later than yesterday (Tuesday)," Ed Short, Sox general manager, told Tribune writer DaVM Condon from Minneapolis, where he was attending the World Series.

Club owner Arthur Allyn was just as surprised. "If he was quitting, I think I would be the first to know," Allyn said.

Lopez has been managing the Sox since the end of the 1956 season. Under his guidance, the Sox won the 1959 American League pennant, although they lost the World Series to the Dodgers that year. They finished second this season.

Nice Guy Role Over For Sazio

HAMILTON (CP) — Ralph Sazio says he is tired of being a nice guy the Canadian Football League referees.

"In 11 games so far this year I've made no statement whatsoever concerning the officials because I've had the viewpoint that these people are out there trying to do a good job," the Hamilton Tiger-Cat coach said Wednesday.

But he said that in the last two games the Ticats have been slapped with 213 yards in penalties to 30 yards for the opposition.

"Maybe it's because I haven't been yapping enough," Sazio said. "I'm wondering right now if I'm not hurting the team by remaining silent."

Sazio said he didn't plan to use Hal Patterson, who came out of retirement only last week, in Monday's game here against Ottawa Rough Riders. An injury to Herb Paterra forced him to change his plans.

Patterson sat on the bench for three quarters of the game and finally saw action in the fourth quarter. Sazio expects he'll be ready to go full tilt against British Columbia Lions in an interlocking game here Sunday.

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Blossom Time, one of the top two-year-old fillies in North America strutted to her 10th consecutive victory in the $5,400 Dixie Stakes at Garden City Raceway Wednesday night.

Blossom Time, owned by Adelen and Gerard Miron of St. Augustin, Que., was the 1-9 favorite and was never threatened.

The victory was worth $1,400 for Blossom Time and ran her earnings to $22,247.

The horse, which will run in the $25,000 Lady Maud Stakes at Roosevelt Raceway in New York City Oct. 23, returned $2.10, $2.30 and $2.10 and combined with runner-up Mac Mir for a $26.70 quinella.

HULL, Que. (CP)—Five bettors walked off Wednesday with $1,358 each by picking the exacts in the 10th race at Connaught Park Raceway.

All had bet $2 on the winning combination of Irish Jubilee and New Key in the mile pace. Irish Jubilee paid $71 to win while New Key paid $20 for placing.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The fourth and Grand paid $31.40 at the Western Fair Raceway Wednesday night when Hold the Phone came in first at $7.70 and Dawn Delight second at $3.40.

Has Rare Collection Of Ancient Guns

COLLECTOR AND PRIZE — Gun collector Jim Gooding holds the prize of his collection — an early Canadian rifle made by John Gurd in London Ont., around 1850. The .56-calibre, muzzle loading, percussion cap model was popular in Canada until about 1886. Gooding, who started collecting guns when he was 14, concentrates on early Canadian rifles. (CP Photo)

By BOB MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP)—For the average man with a rifle rack in his den, falling leaves and the first snow of late autumn usually bring on hunting fever.

But for Jim Gooding they herald the start of another winter of research on antique firearms.

"I'm interested in anything made before 1900 but even more interested in weapons made in Canada before Confederation," says the head of museum services for the northern affairs department.

"The trouble is that there weren't too many guns made in Canada at that time; they usually were imported from the U.S. or Europe."

Gooding became interested in guns while going to school in Toronto and started working summers at the Royal Ontario Museum when he was 14.

"They let me set up a gun collection that summer, and from then on it seemed that whenever any work came up involving guns they let me in on it."

When he completed school he went to work full time for the museum, taking every opportunity he could to work with ancient firearms, and even starting his own collection.

STARTS COLLECTION

"I had to be careful there was no conflict of interest. But it worked out fine. I started collecting 19th-century Winchesters and still have them."

The only exception to his pre-1900 preference is a Winchester used by the Canadian militia on the west coast during the Second World War.

"It probably was made about 1936, but it's hard to tell. The 30-30 carbine used by hunters today is the same as it was when it was last refined in 1894, and even then there were just a few changes from the model of about 20 years earlier.

"Except for telescopic sights and the like, almost all the improvements in today's hunting rifles are in the ammunition.

"If you trace the development of the lever action in the carbine, you find it has changed very little from the 1854 Volcanic repeating pistol, one of the first of its kind made in quantity."

While he still has about 35 rifles in his collection, Gooding says his interest now has turned to writing rather than collecting.

"Collecting can get too expensive.

"I remember when I was driving up from Kitchener to get married in Ottawa after a vintage rifle meet, I got a letter from a woman in Gananoque offering to sell her late husband's collection.

STOPPED EN ROUTE

"I was going to be married on the weekend but decided it wouldn't do any harm to stop in on my way.

"Well, I bought the collection on the spot—and it took every cent I had saved for the wedding, ring, and honeymoon.

"But my wife is very understanding. She loaned me the money for the marriage licence and honeymoon."

Even though he has eased his collecting activities, Jim still has an expensive hobby.

"I've gone into the publishing business, turning out books and pamphlets on old guns. It started a few years ago when I wrote my own book and couldn't find a publisher—so I decided to publish it myself."

Since then he has published 10 volumes, including a six-edition Historical Arms Series on weapons used in North America. These cover everything from reprints of the 1828 British manual of musketry to a history of small arms used by the RCMP.

"It's still a hobby, and it still costs me money. But I hope it may be able to break even in about five years" he says.

The pride of his remaining collection—well down from its peak of 100 rifles—is several pre - Confederation rifles made by Canadian gunsmiths.

The oldest is a percussion cap, muzzle-loading .56 - calibre rifle in London, Ont., by John Gurd. "It was one of the first Gurd made after he came out from Ireland in 1842."

Sets New Receiving Record

REGINA (CP) — Hugh Campbell brilliant flanker of Saskatchewan Roughriders, caught four passes for 83 yards last week to create a new Western Conference receiving record.

Statistics released today showed Campbell with a total gain of 1,103 yards on 64 receptions. The previous mark of 1,165 yards was created last year by Tommy-Joe Coffey of Edmonton Eskimos.

Coffey holds second place in the pass-catching derby, with 1,036 yards gained on 63 receptions.

Reed has gained 1,330 yards on 221 carries for an average gain of six yards a carry. Coleman, 1964 leader, had gained 1,264 yards on 196 carries for a 6.4-yard average gain.

Each player has three games remaining. All clubs except B.C. Lions, with 12, have played 13 games.

Stone Knives, Buffalo Bones 2,500 Years Old Uncovered

CALGARY (CP) — Relics of an Indian community older than bows and arrows have been found in southern Alberta.

Archaeologists digging at Spring Point buffalo jump, about 60 miles west of Lethbridge, found stone knives and buffalo bones about 2,500 years old.

Expedition leader Barney Reeves says deeper diggings may turn up relics 1,000 years older still.

A buffalo jump is a path to a cliff edge, walled by stones, along which Indians stampeded buffalo. If the animals did not die in the fall, they could still be slaughtered more easily.

The buffalo jumps went out of use when horses could be caught and bridled. Mr. Reeves thinks the Spring Point site was not used after about 1750.

The findings include hundreds of spear and arrow points, bone smashers, hide scrapers, drills, awls and pottery. There are bake ovens and food storage pits at the old camp site.

Speculation arose that the Indians may have played a sort of dice game when two small stone discs, grooved on one side, were found.

The work is going faster than it ought to, says Mr. Reeves, because of the fear of souvenir hunters. He says other sites have been destroyed by reckless amateurs.

So far the owner of the land has allowed only his friends and the archaeologists to visit the site.

About 17 layers of soil, each representing a different turn in the climate or a different era of human use, so far have been stripped from the 20-foot-deep excavation.

ANTHEM A FARCE?

EDINBURGH (Reuters) — A national religious weekly said Wednesday the singing of Britain's national anthem God Save the Queen has become a farce and should be abandoned. In a front-page editorial, the British Weekly and Christian World said the anthem now is played less and less on the occasions when it used to be automatic.

PEARSON AND SAINT-LAURENT — Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson who held an electoral meeting in Quebec City, is seen here with former Prime Minister Louis Saint-Laurent. To the 1,000 persons assembled, Mr. Pearson stressed in French the importance of a united country. "This unity is our first aim," he said. (CP Wirephoto)

Old Star of Silver Screen, Sylvia Sidney Debunks Past

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP)—The great brown eyes that used to dazzle the silver screen in sweet bad-ness were glinting with irony. Sylvia Sidney was talking about herself as if she were somebody else.

"I'll tell you what happened," the familiar voice said, clinically cool. "I got old. And why am I making this tour? Because they asked me, that's why."

Miss Sidney treated herself to a guffaw that echoed around the hotel dining room. At 55, the little star, who was once one of the biggest of all, calls her out-look "negative optimistic."

"I'm not downbeat at all," she explains, "but I am a great taker-downer."

There's the matter, for example, of the three roles she undertakes for the National Repertory Theatre Company on a 10-city expedition that ends next April.

The assignment is stylistically wide—a waggish crony of Eva le Gallienne in The Madwoman of Chaillot, Mrs. Malaprop in Sheridan's restoration comedy The Rivals, and the chief of chorus in The Trojan Women of Euripedes. Essentially—Miss Sidney insists, they are alike.

STILL SAME

"I believe in reducing a part to basic emotions — and they haven't changed since drama began, and they won't."

Mention of method acting prompts the lady to hold her nose, do a vigorous thumbs down and challenge: "Try to quote that."

Having started as a theatre guild apprentice at 15, Miss Sidney points out: "I was up to my knees in acting before anyone thought of making the method a cult. It can be a good crutch for acting, but as a crutch for living, it's bad."

Early stage successes were followed by innumerable movie roles, conspicuous among which were Bad Girl, An American Tragedy and Street Scene. Too much, too fast, she reflects, but refuses to linger.

A while back Miss Sidney demolished nostalgic ties with her theatrical past, checking books of press clippings in the trash bin.

"I had packing cases full of stuff," she declares. "It's like carrying a load on your back. I started reading a few of them—of all the boring things to do. Keeping things like that is sick, sick."

The NRT tour is her first extensive journey since travelling afar with Auntie Mame seven years ago. Stock and TV roles have kept her occupied since.

The Tracks

The 29-year-old jockey has ridden 129 winners this season, one more than Frank Barroby.

Barroby, second in the standings for the first time, has not won a race in the East since his arrival Oct. 8, due to suspension of his victories in Vancouver.

Dittfach had been suspended by the stewards for careless riding.

Dittfach also had two third-on the eight-race card to tie for leading rider honors at Woodbine with Noel Turcotte. Both have ridden 29 winners.

Dittfach won with Mink Flyer in the fourth, Arctic Swirl in the fifth, Speedy Lamers in the third and Eddie Shack in the eighth.

Carol Channing in Filmland Where Her Career Started

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Oh, Yes, I remember this town. This is where it all started."

Carol Channing enjoyed the reminiscence. But then, she appears to enjoy everything she does, and her pleasure seemed to be a bit larger than life. The eyes grow in wonderment to seemingly impossible widths, and they are further magnified by large tinted glasses.

Miss Channing's triumphs with Hello, Dolly! have been boundless. After reigning over Broadway for a year and a half, she left to join the road company here. Each week brings records at the Music Center, the latest gross being $143,600.

On a warm afternoon in the Hollywood Hills, she recalled another time when the town treated her differently.

"I came here to find work and I had a dickens of a time finding any," said Sun Francisco-born Carol. "Nobody could figure out what to do with me. Sure, they were very sympathetic, mind you, but they didn't give me a job.

"So I had to find the jobs where I could. I played the Shakespeare Club in Pasadena, the Elks in San Pedro, the Rotary in Bakersfield. When I didn't have dates like that, I'd go down to the joints on Manchester Avenue where the winos hang out.

OPEN INVITATION

"That's where I developed my Marlene Dietrich impression. They loved me down on Manchester. They said I could come back any time I wanted."

But Carol was aiming for better things. She thought she might have a chance when Marge Champion took a shine to the dancing style. Her husband, Gower, was acting an intimate revue called Lend An Ear at the Las Palmas Theatre in 1946.

"Gower was auditioning a thousand people and sent me down the auditions to a minute apiece," Carol said. "When my turn came, I said to myself, get the real effect unless I did all 12 of my numbers. He said that was nice, but he could only give me a minute. I said I would cut each number down to one chorus.

"Well, I started anyway, and Marge was there to tell me to change numbers each time she saw Gower's interest fade. And that's how I got the job."

Lend An Ear launched Carol on Broadway, where she later triumphed in Gentlemen Prefer Blondes. The Champions went on to success as a dancing team. After he had returned to directing, he created Dolly for his onetime discovery.

When will Dolly ever end?

"I don't know," said Carol. "I just signed another contract that will take me into 1967. And Mr. Merrick (David Merrick, the producer) says he'll let me play it after that, too."

CANCEL LATE PLANS

LONDON (CP)—Plans to extend BBC radio broadcasting to the clock have been dropped because there are too few night listeners to justify the expense. At present the last of the BBC's three networks goes off the air at 2 a.m.

Caouette Asks Better Life For Quebec

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP)—Quebec has been treated as a poor relation ever since Confederation and it is time the province took its rightful place in Canada, Creditiste Leader Real Caouette told election rallies in Sherbrooke and nearby Coaticook Wednesday night.

With 30 Creditiste members in the next House of Commons, he said, Quebec "can win back the place it deserves."

"If Quebec is 15 years behind the other provinces, it is not the fault of the English of Toronto or Vancouver, but of the sheep that French - Canadians have sent to Ottawa for 100 years, who think of nothing but serving the cause of their political party."

A western farmer, for example, received an average annual income of $6,500 compared with $1,500 for a Quebec farmer, he said.

"It is time the government gave Quebec farmers and western farmers equal treatment," Mr. Caouette said.

"It is time for the government to guarantee the purchase of agricultural produce in the East as it does for western wheat."

Bad Weather Hinders Exodus Of Refugees

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Squally weather hindered the do-it-yourself exodus of Cuban refugees today while Washington and Havana dickered over terms for a systematic movement of thousands.

Only one small boat, with 23 refugees, braved the tossing Gulfstream to put out from the Cuban port of Camarioca Wednesday.

At least 10 small boats carrying more than 200 Cubans from the mainland have left Camarioca and sailed to Florida since Cuban Premier Fidel Castro opened the doors.

In the meantime, a possibility developed that Castro might free tens of thousands of political prisoners who are in jail because they oppose his regime. The state department reported Wednesday that Castro had replied to the latest U.S. note on movement of the refugees without turning down a proposal that political prisoners be among the first to leave.

Ten small boats were in the Camarioca harbor waiting for port officials to decide that weather was clear enough to let them go.

The weather bureau said it didn't expect the squalls to begin subsiding until Friday.

NOTICE

ONTARIO

THE ONTARIO
MUNICIPAL BOARD
NOTICE UNDER SECTION 30 OF THE PLANNING ACT

TAKE NOTICE that the Corporation of the City of Belleville has applied to the Ontario Municipal Board under Section 30 of the Planning Act for approval of the Zoning Area By-law No. 8021 passed on the 5th day of September, 1965, and that the Board is going to hold a public hearing.

Any person interested may, within twenty days after the date of this notice, file with the Clerk of the City of Belleville notice of his objection to the approval of the said By-law together with a statement of the grounds of such objection.

The Ontario Municipal Board may dismiss the said By-law without further notice, or may appoint a time and a place when any objection to the By-law will be considered.

DATED AT TORONTO this 14th day of October, 1965.

(Sirned)
Miss R. Vickers,
SECRETARY.

Belleville

THE CORPORATION OF
CITY OF BELLEVILLE
THE
BY-LAW NUMBER 8021

A BY-LAW TO AMEND BY-LAW NUMBER 8483, BEING A BY-LAW TO REGULATE THE USE OF LAND AND THE HEIGHT, BULK, LOCATION AND SPACING CHARACTER AND USES OF BUILDINGS.

COUNCIL OF THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE ENACTS AS FOLLOWS:

1. That section 6483 of By-law Number 6483 be and it is hereby amended by adding the following thereto designated as 'D'A.

2. That By-law number 6483 be and it is hereby amended by changing the zoning classification immediately following "DISTRICTS (COMMERCIAL) SECTION 6" to "DISTRICTS (COMMERCIAL).

9a. 1 Permissible Uses
No building, structure or part thereof shall be erected and no land shall be used or changed or used for other than the uses permitted in a "D" District.

9a. 2 Sizes
As in a "D" District.

9a. 3 Off-Street Parking
As in a "D" District.

9a. 4 Front Yard
As in a "D" District.

9a. 5 Rear Yard
As in a "D" District.

9a. 6 Side Yard
As in a "D" District.

9a. 7 Off-Street Parking Option
Notwithstanding the provisions of section 9a. 3 hereof, the owner of land may elect to comply by providing off-street parking as required by the said section 9a. 3 into a fund of the Corporation of the City of Belleville known as The Parking Fund in the sum of $200.00 for each off-street parking space he is unable or unwilling to provide.

2. That the lands attached to and forming part of By-law number 6483 be and they are hereby amended by creating a new district to be known as a "D'A" District, the boundaries of which shall be as follows:

Commencing at the intersection of Station Street and the Northerly limit of Dundas Street, thence Northerly and Easterly along the east bank of the Moira River to the Northerly limits of Dundas Street East, thence,

Easterly along Dundas Street East to the west limit of Pinnacle Street, thence,

Northerly along Pinnacle Street to its intersection with Station Street, thence,

Westerly along Station Street to the place of beginning.

THIS BY-LAW shall not come into force and take effect until the approval by the Ontario Municipal Board.

Read a first time this 5th day of September, 1965.

Read a second time this 5th day of September, 1965.

Read a third time this 5th day of September, 1965.

(Signed)
J. H. Ellis,
MAYOR.
(Signed)
Adam S. Slatker,
CITY CLERK.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Corporation of the City of Belleville has a Zoning By-law in the City's municipal limits which are contained in the Official Plan of the municipality. The Zoning Area By-law, required land owners and developers to provide parking facilities for their buildings and developments and the City further recognizes that in certain circumstances, the above obligation may be unreasonable, and in instances of existing buildings, lead to an uneconomic and wasteful use of the said buildings. Furthermore, the City of Belleville has established a Parking Authority whose function is to provide, acquire, maintain and supervise off-street parking facilities in the City.

The Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to amend their Zoning By-law No. 8483 by designating a certain area in the central business district of the downtown portion of the City whereby new building developments are restricted by the Moira River and Dundas Street East and West, to consider their location in this downtown section of the City. Also over the years the Moira River by fire and the intent of the Corporation of the City of Belleville Parking Authority to provide Off-Street Parking Facilities and to encourage and assist developers to provide parking spaces, are to be considered.

SEE WHOOPER GROUP

SUPERB, Sask. (CP)—A family of four whooping cranes—the rarest North American bird—has been sighted in this western Saskatchewan area. Three Edmonton men hunting geese spotted what was believed to be four adult cranes in the area Monday, John Stark of Edmonton said Wednesday. Latest count of whooping cranes is 52 birds, including eight in captivity at a New Orleans zoo. The birds are counted annually.

Lake Superior Lamprey Eels Being Removed

MARQUETTE, Mich. (AP)—A Great Lakes Fishery Commission group was told of the success of efforts to control the predatory sea lamprey in Lake Superior.

The lamprey, an Atlantic Ocean invader of the Great Lakes, was one of several subjects discussed by members of the Lake Superior advisory committee of the commission's U.S. section Tuesday.

A "very successful" anti-lamprey program was reported by Bernard R. Smith of Marquette, director of the drive for the U.S. bureau of commercial fisheries.

Smith said the fact only 11,800 lampreys were taken from Lake Superior in each of the last two years proved the program's value. In 1961, when the lamprey abounded and the program was beginning, about 67,000 were taken, he said.

A similar program now is in other Lake Michigan and Lake Huron with Lakes Erie and Ontario to follow, Smith said.

UNION CARBIDE

TEXTILE PRODUCTION SUPERVISOR FOR FIBRES PLANT

Union Carbide Canada Limited has an immediate opening for an experienced technically trained supervisor for their new yarns production facilities at Arnprior, Ontario.

The position requires two to five years recent experience in the manufacture of textile yarns, preferably in the field of melt-spun continuous fibres.

The successful candidate's primary responsibilities will centre in the spinning, drawtwisting and yarn finishing operations. Technical and/or university training is a prerequisite.

DIVES TO FAME

YORK, England (CP) — George Holland's fishing story will probably become the family secret. His bait-can dropped into the river and, bending over a low bridge to pick it up, George dropped his car keys into it. A little farther down the stream, George fell in too and took the can and keys. He had to call a mechanic to open the car and disconnect its anti-theft alarm.

Douglas Asks Judicial Probe Into Affair Of Six Socreds

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fierce political fighting broke out Thursday over Dr. Guy Marcoux' allegations of bribe offers and Liberal intrigue in the 1963 "affair of the six."

New Democratic Leader Douglas called for a Dorion-style judicial inquiry to determine whether financial inducement was involved in a pledge to back the Liberals, passed after the 1963 election by six Social Credit MPs.

Veiled threats of law suits were buried at Dr. Marcoux by Revenue Minister Benson and some of the six MPs, who are all seeking re-election as Credit-iste candidates. Dr. Marcoux was an independent candidate and former Social Credit MP.

Former solicitor-general William Browne, Conservative candidate in St. John's East, called on Prime Minister Pearson to "demand" the resignation of Transport Minister Pickersgill.

Mr. Douglas called the transport min i st e r "the savage plumber of the Liberal party."

In Calgary, Conservative Leader Stanfield renewed his criticism of the Pearson government for what he called its lack of integrity.

'QUITE ABSURD'

Trade Minister Sharp said in Quebec it was "quite absurd" to suggest that Conservative grads offered to buy the backing of the six Social Credit MPs.

While fresh allegations and denials flew in all directions, Mr. Pickersgill remained in remote outports on Newfoundland's north shore and could not be reached for comment. He was believed campaigning for re-election in Bonavista-Twillingate.

The 60-year-old minister has been an influential Liberal all his political life since he joined Prime Minister Mackenzie King's staff in 1937.

His only comment so far on Dr. Marcoux' charges has been a one-sentence statement issued by his Ottawa office Wednesday. The statement said:

"I do not wish to make any contribution to political gossip by making any comment on the press reports about Dr. Marcoux's book except to say emphatically that, to my knowledge, no money was paid or offered to any member of Parliament or anyone else in connection with the incident the book refers to."

Mr. Pearson also kept silence on the new issue Thursday. In a one-sentence statement released Tuesday night, he said Mr. Pickersgill had assured him that he had nothing to do with "any offer of a bribe to any MP or to anyone else."

He said the minister had denied only that an attempt had been made to bribe the six MPs. He was not surprised at Dr. Marcoux' charge that Mr. Pickersgill worked with mining magnate John Doyle and Moise Darabaner in preparing the Statement of support signed by the six.

Mr. Doyle is wanted in the United States to serve a three-month jail term imposed on him in May for illegal stock promotion. Mr. Darabaner faces fraud charges in Quebec City involving $115,000, as well as arson and conspiracy counts.

In Quebec, three Creditiste candidates who signed the 1963 pledge of support for the Liberals denied they received or were offered any money. The denials came from Robert Beaute (Quebec East), Lucien Plourde (Quebec West), and Raymond Langlois (Megantic).

Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford) said he will ask his lawyer to see if there are grounds for legal action against Dr. Marcoux. Gerard Perron (Beauce) also said he will consult a lawyer and Pierre-Andre Boutin (Dorchester) could not be reached for comment.

In Kingston, Revenue Minister Benson denied a n o t h e r charge in the Marcoux pamphlet that Mr. Doyle may have received "special" corporation tax exemptions from the Liberal government. He added that he instructed his department to see whether the pamphlet warrants a suit against Dr. Marcoux.

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland denied in Halifax that he had been involved in any way in the alleged 1963 negotiations. Any reference to him in the Marcoux pamphlet was "absolutely untrue," Mr. Smallwood said.

Mr. Doyle could not be reached for comment.

Creditiste Leader Caouette said in Sherbrooke that he had no part in the statement signed by six of his colleagues. He had asked the six to repudiate their pledge of support for the Liberals and they had done so.

He denied Dr. Marcoux' statement that he opposed in 1963 a party investigation into the affair of the six.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said in Saskatoon he was aware Dr. Marcoux carried out an investigation into the affair. He praised his former Quebec lieutenant, Dr. Marcoux, as "a fine citizen and a good MP."

HASTINGS - FRONTENAC CONSERVATIVES yesterday nominated Rodney Webb, former MP for the riding, for re-election bid, as Jeannette and Valerie Clemments serenaded campaign opening at Marmora convention.

Rodney Webb of Norwood Again PC Candidate in Hastings-Frontenac Riding

By HARRY MULHALL

MARMORA — With a phalanx of prominent party politicians to symbolize the Conservative sturdiness of his riding, Rodney Webb of Havelock, yesterday accepted the P.C. nomination to seek re-election as MP for Hastings-Frontenac.

A crowd estimated at 450 packed the town's hockey arena to nominate the man whom they first elected in 1958 to represent Hastings-Frontenac, a constituency which has only voted once against the Conservative sweep of 1958.

With former federal labor minister Michael Starr heading up the platform politicians, the crowd heard their candidate endorsed by Ontario Energy and Resources Minister J. R. Simonnett, Clarke Rollins, MLA Hastings East; Keith Brown, MLA Peterborough; Senator George White, former Senate speaker; Lee Grills, PC candidate in Hastings South, and Douglas Alkenbrack, MP in the last parliament for Prince Edward-Lennox.

And while they cheered the anti-Liberal broadsides of the speakers, the actual climax at the meeting came near its conclusion when Mr. Grills announced a scheduled visit of Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker to the area.

The leader, said Mr. Grills, will stop for a half-hour, Oct. 23, in the village of Stirling and visit for about a half-hour starting at 11 a.m.

The site obviously was chosen with an eye to its central location—touching the constituency borders of Hastings South, Northumberland and Hastings-Frontenac.

The closeness of these ridings was underlined and ineffectual without wife's encouragement, Mrs. Webb was visited in company with Social Credit's national leader, Robert Thompson.

Chairman Diefenbaker was "safely democratic," and "not the vote by corrupt," stated the Quebec City doctor, to the annoyance of some editorial writers back home.

Meantime, the relations between himself and the fiery Mr. Caouette apparently were deteriorating.

Mr. Caouette was the party leader who, by the deputy national leader, Observers spoke of attempts by Dr. Marcoux to curb the powers of Mr. Caouette.

The April, 1963, general election saw the doctor's plurality in Quebec Montmorency plummet to 3,056, a fact some ex-Conservatives believe was the candidate's lack of campaigning

Cabinet Changes In Quebec

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec Premier Jean Lesage said Thursday, following the announcement of the most important cabinet shuffle since he came to power in 1960, that his government wants to put the accent on the social aspect of its policy."

Among the cabinet changes, which involve four portfolios, one moved Revenue Minister Eric Kierans to the department of health and another gave Resources Minister Rene Levesque the additional portfolio of family and social welfare.

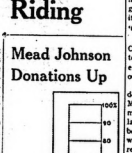
Mead Johnson Donations Up



Mead Johnson, one of Belleville's largest industries, has completed its in - plant campaign and reports an increase in participation from last year's very high record of 70.4 per cent, to a new high of 71.9 per cent. The total returns reached an all-time high of in excess of $1,500.

G. T. Lanning, in the medium sized industry classification, experienced excellent returns in its in - plant campaign. The increase over last year, including the employee giving and the corporate gift, was 27.3 per cent, certainly a commendable effort.

The United Appeal Office is planning more participation this year. In keeping with this, one Front Street store raised contributions over last year's by 67 per cent through greater employee participation.

Pickersgill, Smallwood Not on Plane

* * *

OTTAWA (CP)—A statement by Canadian Press Ltd. today said Transport Minister Pickersgill was not aboard the company's DC4 aircraft anytime during the 1963 election campaign or immediately after it.

The statement also said Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland was not a passenger on the company aircraft during this period.

There were published reports earlier this week that a plane identified with John Doyle, former president of Javelin, had been used to fly to Quebec from Montreal a declaration of allegiance to the Liberals by six newly-elected Social Credit MPs after the 1963 general election.

A pamphlet published Wednesday by Dr. Guy Marcoux, former Social Credit MP now seeking re-election as an Independent, said Hubert Dupuis, charmie, described as Mr. Doyle's lawyer, took the declaration to Montreal's Dorval Airport and joined Premier Lesage, Mr. Pickersgill, Mr. Doyle, and others who were waiting there for Mr. Doyle's plane.

Mild-mannered Doctor Fiery Politician

QUEBEC (CP)—Stocky Guy Marcoux, 41, a mild-mannered suburban doctor, plunged into politics three years ago and has been striking sparks of controversy ever since.

The latest flare-up began with his publication of a pamphlet contending that six Social Credit MPs who pledged their support to Liberals after the 1963 general election were pawns in a scheme initiated by Transport Minister John Doyle and involving Transport Minister Pickersgill.

Dr. Marcoux, a general practitioner, courted the national limelight even at his initial election to parliament, as Social Credit candidate for Quebec Montmorency in 1962.

He married and the father of three children, he succumbed to what he calls party requests and those of his neighbors, as well as to his inherited political ich, and, in the general election of 1962, presented himself as the Social Credit candidate for Quebec Montmorency.

The Conservative tide was on the ebb in Quebec province and the Liberals were still recovering from the setback they had suffered at Tory hands in 1958.

Real Caouette was talking up a Social Credit storm all over the province and, in Quebec City, the 1962 results showed Dr. Marcoux topping the Montmorency poll with 26,480 — meaning a plurality of 20,039 votes over his nearest rival, a Liberal. The seat had been Conservative previously.

He was quickly named Social Credit whip in Parliament, where the party had 30 seats, 26 of them from Quebec.

Several months later he broke into the headlines again with statements about the fate of Chiang Kai-shek's government of Formosa, which he visited in company with Social Credit's national leader, Robert Thompson.

Chiang Kai-shek's regime was "safely democratic," and "not the vote by corrupt," stated the Quebec City doctor, to the annoyance of some editorial writers back home.

Meantime, the relations between himself and the fiery Mr. Caouette apparently were deteriorating.

Mr. Caouette was the party leader who, by the deputy national leader, Observers spoke of attempts by Dr. Marcoux to curb the powers of Mr. Caouette.

Catholic Body Absolves Jews of Collective Guilt

From AP-Reuters

VATICAN CITY (CP) — The Vatican ecumenical council voted final endorsement today of a long - awaited Roman Catholic declaration deploring anti-Semitism and declaring that the Jews as a whole cannot be blamed for the crucifixion of Christ.

The bishops voted to leave out the controversial word "deicide" while stating that the Jews should not be presented as a people "rejected by God or accursed."

By a vote of 1,763 to 250 the Second Vatican Ecumenical Church gave over-all approval to the declaration on the Church's attitude toward non-Christians including the Jews.

The new declaration, with its key passages about the Jews, is a statement denouncing r a c i a l discrimination, will become a decree after one more voting formality: Pr o m ulgation by Pope Paul VI in the council in a public session of the assembly. This possibly will come Oct. 28 or Nov. 18.

The document easily obtained the two-thirds vote it needed for approval. Most of the opposition vote was the largest given to any council document in final ballot.

Opponents included conservative and Middle East prelates opposed to the entire document and progressive bishops who wanted to retain the "deicide" wording that received preliminary approval in the council a year ago.

A council spokesman, giving the vote results, said the bishops in a specific ballot on the "deicide" reference voted 1,821 to 245 to leave it out.

The document as approved last year said "the Jewish people should never be presented as cursed, cursed, or guilty of deicide."

The amended version given final approval today says: "Although the (Catholic) church is the new people of God, the Jews should not be presented as rejected by God or accursed, or guilty.

Voting on this and other amendments started Thursday and was completed today before the final over-all vote.

Another crucial amendment—stating that the church "deplores h a t r e d, persecutions, displays of anti-Semitism directed against the Jews at any time and by anyone"—was approved 1,905 to 199. Originally passages said the church "condemns" persecutions but made no specific mention of anti-Semitism.

Another key amendment—accepted by the largest s i n g l e majority—said the Jews are not to be presented as "rejected by God or accursed" in any discrimination against men or harassment of them because of their race, color, condition in life or religion."

The council said in analysis of the changes indicated about 60 prelates, presumably conservatives, voted against the declaration because they objected to the final over-all vote.

"absolutely untrue," Mr. Smallwood said.

Mr. Doyle could not be reached for comment.

Creditiste Leader Caouette said in Sherbrooke that he had no part in the statement signed by six of his colleagues. He had asked the six to repudiate their pledge of support for the Liberals and they had done so.

He denied Dr. Marcoux' statement that he opposed in 1963 a party investigation into the affair of the six.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said in Saskatoon he was aware Dr. Marcoux carried out an investigation into the affair. He praised his former Quebec lieutenant, Dr. Marcoux, as "a fine citizen and a good MP."

British Govt. Will Oppose Menzies Visit to Rhodesia

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—The British government will reject any suggestion from Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith that Sir Robert Menzies go to Salisbury alone, an informed source said Thursday.

Prime Minister Wilson, attempting to head off the threat of unilateral action by the minority white regime in Rhodesia, has proposed that Smith accept a mission of Commonwealth prime ministers in the hope of finding ways of reopening negotiations between London and the self-governing colony.

Smith now is replying to Wilson in the personal, 3-a. m. Salisbury television interview Wednesday he said the Australian prime minister would be welcome in Rhodesia at any time, but as for other Commonwealth leaders the door was not openly declared enemies" and it would be "mad" for the Rhodesian government to accept advice from them.

Wilson has not disclosed what reception would be represented on the mission, informants have indicated they would include Nigeria, Canada and Ceylon as well as Australia.

NEITHER WOULD AGREE

The informant said neither Menzies nor the British government would accept any compromise to Salisbury alone. He would have to be accompanied by other mission members.

The mission would have no constitutional powers. It would merely try to impress on Smith the gravity of his threat to seize independence without the approval of the British Parliament.

GIVE TACIT SUPPORT

So far Heath and other Conservative leaders have given this stand their tacit support.

Britain has reduced to grant aid to Rhodesia by $2,000,000 less it first gets guarantees that the country will move toward majority rule within a "reasonable time." The Negro population of the country numbers some 4,000,000 compared with 250,000 whites.

The British government now is awaiting Smith's reply to Wilson's proposal for a Commonwealth mission to visit Salisbury in a bid to solve the crisis.

Oshawa Truckers Working, Contract Signed at Montreal

TORONTO (CP)—About 200 striking truckers threw up a picket line as the downtown terminal of Smith Transport Ltd. here today, a spokesman for the company said.

He said Smith Transport drivers were crossing the line and trucks were leaving the terminal. Policemen were present.

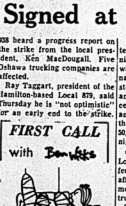
Meanwhile, workers at plants in Oshawa were returning to work after a vote Thursday to end pending settlement of the Northern Ontario wildcat strike which involves some 2,000 men. It started Oct. 3.

A spokesman for striking members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (Ind.) said Thursday night the strikers would try to get 200 men on the picket line at Smith Transport today.

The Oshawa truckers voted Thursday to return to work pending settlement of the southern Ontario wildcat strike which involves some 2,000 men.

The vote came after the members of Teamsters Local 938 heard a progress report on the talks from the local president, Ken MacDougall. Oshawa trucking companies are affected.

Ray Taggart, president of the Hamilton-based Local 879, said Thursday he is "not optimistic" for an early end to the strike.



"If you were half the man of Labi, you'd be up and about."

MONTREAL (CP)—Eight interprovincial trucking companies have signed a contract with an affiliate of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (Ind.) which provides for an hourly pay increase of 51 cents spread over three years and a progressive reduction of the work week to 44 hours from 50, it was announced Thursday night.

Omer Maltavord, chairman of Local 106 of L'Union des Chauffeurs de Camions, a Teamsters' affiliate, described the agreement as a pilot contract for the trucking industry.

The 1,200 drivers affected, most hourly pay now ranges between $1.95 and $2.06, are to receive increases of 20 cents the first year, 17 cents the second and 14 cents the third. The first increase is retroactive to Oct. 1, when the previous contract expired.

The truckers' work week is to be reduced to 48 hours in the first year, 46 in the second and 44 in the third.

Africans May Talk War But They Are Ill-equipped

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—What are the chances of African states going to war with Rhodesia, Britain's former colony? Ian Smith declare his country independent of Britain?

Foreign Minister Joseph Murumbi of Kenya, a top figure in the Organization of African Unity, declared here recently it was time African countries began thinking in terms of war.

But military and security statistics indicates the black African countries would need considerable outside help to match Rhodesia's small but formidably equipped Army and air force.

The African countries have about 400,000 troops among them. Of these, approximately 250,000 belong to the North African nations: Algeria, the United Arab Republic, Morocco and Tunisia.

Of the remaining 145,000 in sub-Sahara Africa, Ethiopia and The Congo (Leopoldville) account for almost half. The Congolese army of 30,000 men is undisciplined and ineffectual without white mercenaries, many of them from Rhodesia.

Ethiopia boasts a modern, Soviet - equipped army of 40,000, plus a powerful air force, but it has to be bogged down in Yemen and cannot afford to relax its guard against Israel.

Cairo and Algiers, in any case, are 3,000 miles from Rhodesia and transport difficulties virtually rule out the prospect of North African troops in any Central African campaign.

Ethiopia is militarily the most powerful independent n a t i o n south of the Sahara, with the exception of South Africa. It has 30,000 men, backed by its own air force. But even if cautious Emperor Haile Selassie decided to embroil himself in a Central African conflict, he probably would not have many units to spare.

Kenya's small army is engaged in protecting its long frontier with Somalia and in fighting Somali infiltrators.

Practices and Procedures Considered Normal Found Lacking in Secret Report

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP)—A confidential report prepared three months ago on insolvent Atlantic Acceptance Corp. found that practices and procedures considered "normal and necessary in the conduct of a commercial financial business" were missing.

The report, prepared by General Acceptance Corp. for Montreal Trust Co., appointed receiver and manager of Atlantic after it defaulted on some debts in June, was filed Thursday at an Ontario Supreme Court hearing on a bid by GAC to take over part of Atlantic's operations. It was dated July 14.

The report says that when Atlantic first got into trouble GAC considered buying the company through purchase of its stock. But after a quick check of some of Atlantic's operations, "it became evident that there was not probably no equity to be acquired."

The 21-page report, kept secret until filed at the hearing, deals extensively with Atlantic's commercial financing business carried on by subsidiaries, Commodore Loan Acceptance Ltd. and Commodore Factors Ltd.

"Our representatives had a difficult time obtaining any satisfactory current information on several of the accounts in this category," it says.

'NO CONTROL'

"There is a paucity of credit information and, as far as we were able to ascertain, no real financial control over this operation.

"Moreover we could find no evidence of credit granting or lending policies or limitations on the amounts of loans permitted to be made to any one borrower."

It says the two subsidiaries were operated by A. G. Woolfrey.

The report, which noted earlier that Atlantic's president then was C. Powell Morgan—who later resigned—said Mr. Woolfrey apparently reported to the president, had no credit authority and all loans were either approved by the president or directed to be made by the president.

"The day-to-day handling of the accounts was left to Woolfrey.

"There appears to have been no reporting system. No reports, internal or otherwise, were made available with respect to delinquency of principal or interest or the condition of the accounts or the related collateral."

CITE AUDITS

The report says GAC's investigators saw no evidence of any detailed accounting or verification procedures carried out by one man retained to do operational field audits.

"On real estate, machinery or other types of fixed-asset loans, apparently no appraisals were obtained and there was no evidence on file of the value of the loan collateral."

Many legal and lien documents were missing, although some were said to be in the possession of Clarkson and Co., working with Montreal Trust.

At St. Thomas, Ont., GAC found industrial loans on which no payments had been made for years and the collateral was either gone or valueless. "We believe this branch will sustain a loss of at least $300,000 in this category."

At St. Thomas the branch, losses of $100,000 were anticipated in retail loans representing mostly home improvement and dairy herd loans. About $225,000 more would be lost on large and industrial loans.

At St. Catharines, losses of $290,000 were forecast for large industrial loans because of high delinquency and poor collateral. "Apparently there is additional home improvement paper in this branch which was originated there and on which another $100,000 loss probably will be sustained."

Child Sustained On Milk Diet Nearly Year

OTTAWA (CP)—The starvation-death trial of James and Hazel Craig heard evidence Thursday that a milk diet of about three pints a day was all that sustained three-year-old Gary Craig for nearly a year before his death last Dec. 17.

A statement to police by Mrs. Craig, 40, said Gary would not take solid foods, except perhaps cereal in small amounts, but he seemed all right almost up to the time he died.

The statement included admissible at the Ontario Supreme Court trial of the Craigs on criminal negligence charges, quoted Mrs. Craig as saying Gary "got a little thar" a few times but he was "not as bad as the other children." The Craigs had seven other children.

Crown Attorney John Cassells conducted his case and defence counsel Denis Lynch called Mrs. Monica Maltby, a social worker on the Craig case, as a witness.

She testified that the family was in an average state of welfare services and said the task of caring for a retarded child among the Craigs' eight presented Mrs. Craig with many problems.

Vagden Mills Well on Way To Objective

After only one day of in-plant canvassing, Vagden Mills Limited was well over the half-way mark in their 1965 United Appeal Campaign.

John Denton, president, said, "We expect to go well over the top this year. The employees are responding admirably."

A large thermometer sign has been placed on the plant bulletin board so the employees can keep an eye on the progress of their in - plant campaign.

Vagden Mills seems to exemplify the trend this year in the medium - sized and major industries. All the industries are reporting gains over their 1964 returns.

County Warden Will Host Councillors

Hastings county warden Fred Beckett of Rawdon township, will host county council members and other area municipal officials at the annual warden's banquet to be held October 30th at Club Canara in Belleville.

Guest speaker for the banquet will be former Foxboro district resident, Professor Ralph Campbell, now on the faculty at Toronto University.

Blane. Mr. Ducharme then went on to Quebec.

Some published reports, including those of The Canadian Press, indicated that Mr. Ducharme travelled in Mr. Doyle's plane with Mr. Doyle, Premier Smallwood and Mr. Pickersgill.

This is not substantiated in Dr. Marcoux's pamphlet, and he said he did not deal with the point in his address or press conference. He added, however, that he believes Mr. Ducharme travelled to Quebec in Mr. Doyle's plane.

Purchasing Agents Hear Queen's 'Prof'

Professor C. Lawrence of Queens University chose as his topic "Organization of Management", in addressing the Purchasing Agents Association of Eastern Ontario in Kingston, Wednesday.

He outlined the complexities of setting up and maintaining a profitable business, consistent with the customers' needs and wants. Advanced marketing management philosophy, to meet the demands of changing times, must have progressive and imaginative research in fields of advertising and selling. The important rule of the customer was continually stressed by Professor Lawrence.

President L. G. McBrien informed the meeting that there will be 28 members and 9 non-members in attendance at the Inventory Control Seminar at Ottawa University, Saturday, October 16th and 22rd and Queen's University, Oct. 30th and Nov. 6th.

President L. G. McBrien presented Sister Raymond Marie with a cheque for $150 and a certificate for $100 towards the highest mark in the purchasing course conducted by C.A.P.A.

Attending the meeting from Belleville were:

H. M. Burley, International Hardware Co. of Canada (1965) Ltd. P. R. Huddleston, Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co. of Canada Ltd. D. A. Laundry, Wilson Concrete Products Ltd. L. G. McBrien, Mead Johnson of Canada Ltd. D. W. Newman, Stewart-Warner Corp. of Canada Ltd. E. E. Palmer, Northern Electric Co. Ltd. J. R. Peoples, Mead Johnson of Canada Ltd. and P. Stalker, Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co. of Canada Ltd.

Ouimet Given Another Term

OTTAWA (CP)—J. Alphonse Ouimet has been appointed to another term as president of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, it was announced today.

The announcement from Prime Minister Pearson's office said the 53-year-old executive has been appointed to another seven-year term as head of Canada's publicly-owned broadcasting service. Mr. Ouimet was appointed president in 1958.

resl, in turn caused by lack of enthusiasm on Dr. Marcoux' part as a Social Credit party spark-plugged by Mr. Caouette.

In the wake of the 1963 election came publication of a statement by six Social Credit MPs from Quebec, pledging support to a Liberal government—the Liberals having won only enough seats to form a minority administration.

It was this statement which the doctor in a new pamphlet, titled Le Meme Sac, (In The Same Bag), says was drafted in a Montreal hotel by Mr. Doyle's lawyer "with the collaboration of the Hon. Jack Pickersgill."

At the time, Dr. Marcoux favored expulsion of the six from the party because "they had tried to enter into an open coalition with the Liberals" and this had broken party discipline.

The Quebec City member's avowed dissatisfaction with the way Real Caouette had run the 1963 campaign as Social Credit doctor leaned toward the western brand of Social Credit rather than the volatile Caouette variety.

In May, 1962, he announced he was leaving the party as such, to sit in the Commons as an independent who still believed in the Social Credit doctrine. He rejoined the party in October of that year after the elections withdrew. Since that time he has been party whip and Social Credit leader in Quebec.

He announced too that he would contest Quebec Montmorency in the Nov. 8 election as an independent.

Independence, Dr. Marcoux said, would give him the chance to speak out more freely.

Unlike 1963, the 1965 campaign for the doctor is of the all-out variety. His big house in Charlesbourg is swarming with political workers.

Canadians Hold 424 Tickets In Cambridgeshire Draw

DUBLIN (CP)—A total of 424 tickets held by Canadians were drawn Wednesday and Thursday in the Irish Sweepstakes based on Saturday's running of the Cambridgeshire race at Newmarket, England, but less than half have a chance at the big-money prizes.

Tickets were drawn on all 85 horses eligible for the English race, but only seven of are expected to start. The final field and odds are expected to be announced in London today.

Holders of tickets on the winning horse will collect $150,000 in the three-yearly international lottery held in aid of hospitals in the Irish Republic, with prizes of $60,000 and $30,000 respectively going to holders of tickets on the second and third finishers.

All 424 Canadians whose tickets were drawn are assured of a prize based on the total of the pool, expected to be around $1,100. There will go to holders of tickets on horses who fail to start or run out of the money.

NEWMARKET, England (CP)—A highly favored Canadian entry in Saturday's Cambridgeshire Stakes at Newmarket Race Track has started coughing, it was reported Thursday.

Quisnett, owned by Murray F. Fleming of Toronto, was being quoted by some bookmakers at 7-to-1 odds. But at least one leading bookie withdrew Quisnett from the list because of the possibility that the filly might be withdrawn.

The favorite for the mile-and-a-furlong stakes is Sassy Footsteps, owned by England's Sir Philip Dunn and quoted at 6-to-1 odds Thursday.

The race, basis of an Irish Hospital's Sweepstake draw has 31 entries, with a prize of nearly £5,160 (£15,480) to the winner.

Harvey Leader, trainer of Quisnett, said the filly is expected to be fit for the race. She continued workouts Thursday "and has not gone better or less."

Other entries, with odds bracketed: Off The Hook (11?) Lady Laughing Park (12-to-1), Fire Rocket and Tarogan (14-to-1), Burning Torch, Finish Fast and Holy Cloud (16-to-1), Barwin, Indian Echo and Prince Leone (20-1), Karelia Ace (25-to-1), Pink Pencil (33-to-1), Aberdeen, Coronado, La Dauphin and Sir Thomas (40-to-1), Cis a Lily, Ghyll Manor, Filomme Arms, London Way, Miss Jeanette, and Petty Cash (50-to-1), Cliff's Erine's Plea, Early Bid and Fancy Boy (66-to-1), Grand Parade and Freda's Legacy (100-to-1) and Rackham (200-to-1).

RECORD PRICE BID

NEW YORK (Reuters)—Paul Cezanne's Maisons a l'Estaque was sold here Thursday night for $800,000, a world record price for any work by the 19th-century French artist. The private bid was by R. J. Roucek of Wildenstein Galleries here. The previous record for a Cezanne was $616,000 paid in 1958 at Sotheby's in London for Garcon au Gilet Rouge.

Liberal Candidate Soon To Announce Location of 2 Industries in Riding

TWEED — Speaking to more than 50 association workers here last night Liberal candidate Robert Temple told them he was calling a press conference in Belleville in ten days to announce the location of a new industry at nearby Marlbank. And a week later he said there will be another announcement of great interest concerning the people in the general area and the Hungerford district in particular.

"Many jobs are involved in the two industries coming here," he said. Families will not be fired with hundreds sons and daughters seeking work elsewhere, he explained, but there will be plenty of employment opportunities at good wages "at home" when the proposed plants are in operation.

Mr. Temple reported that the ever-increasing expansion and employment appeared to be taking on boom proportions. It is a great change from the summer of 1963 he said. He made a similar trip through the riding after the Liberals took the reins of government following the last election. He acquainted himself with management on his "fact-finding" tour at that time.

In Point Anne this week he found the Canada Cement Co. had doubled its work force and some 500 engaged in production. At Belleville Mead Johnson reported a 25 per cent increase in business activity. At Trenton plant managers had similar stories to tell.

EXTREMELY PLEASED

In making reference to the two new projects in line for the Tweed-Hungerford areas Mr. Temple noted he was extremely pleased because he had always felt that part of Hastings South had been neglected. "However, I am not a miracle worker, he observed. I don't pretend to push buttons and get results. What I did do was make a survey and then wrote a number of industrialists in the United States. What has happened since is the result of several replies I received."

In his appeal for support Mr. Temple called on the voters of his constituency to return a majority government. "In the months ahead parliament will be faced with much important legislation involving the provinces, he explained. To deal with provinces who have majority governments it is imperative for the federal government to have a majority," he said.

Mr. Temple referred to incentives for farmers the Liberals had introduced and approved during their term of office."

At an election of officers of the Association Stewart Lessard was named president; Reg. Dunham, first vice-president; Mrs. Fred (Cecilia) Rivers, second vice president; Amelia Bosley, secretary-treasurer.

MacMillans Surrender on Fraud Charges

TORONTO (CP)—George and Viola MacMillan, charged with fraud in connection with the trading last year of shares of Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd., surrendered today.

They were taken to police headquarters and photographed and fingerprinted, then to magistrate's court for arraignment.

The MacMillans, connected with the mining industry for almost 40 years, were in Nevada when the charges were laid Oct. 7. Further charges were laid Oct. 12.

George MacMillan was president of Windfall and his wife the promoter in July, 1964, when the shares rose to $5.60 from 36 cents on rumors the company had found copper on its property near Timmins.

The price of the shares collapsed overnight to 80 cents after Mr. MacMillan announced no ore had been found.

ACCOMPANIED BY LAWYER

The MacMillans were accompanied by their lawyer, Gordon Langlie, when they appeared at police headquarters to answer the warrants that had been issued for them.

A crowd of news photographers also followed them.

In the elevator coming down from their lawyer's office, Mr. MacMillan looked at the photographers and said "I've seen many of these faces before."

The charges were laid after the report of the royal commission on Windfall was made public.

Also charged after the report came are John Bassett, Toronto sportsman and broadcaster, and Gordon Cowbell, former director of the Ontario Securities Commission. He was suspended from his post in August, 1964, and resigned the following month.

He faces charges of breach of trust by a public officer.

P.M. Requests Students Be Given Time Off

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson has asked Canadian universities to do what they can to give students time off to vote in the Nov. 8 election.

The Liberal leader made the request in letters mailed some time ago.

He sought university co-operation in seeing students get off to vote in advance polls and on the regular polling day.

The letter is regarded as a move to help students vote while live some distance away from universities. Many would have to return to their home towns to vote because that is where they were enumerated.

Advance polls will be held Oct. 30, and Nov. 1, for anyone who signs a statement that he likely will be away from home on election day.

A statement issued by the prime minister Thursday said timing of enumeration in early September will make it necessary for "many students" to return home in order to vote.

This was clear from an interpretation of the Canada Elections Act provided to the government by a prominent Toronto lawyer, C. F. H. Carson, the statement said.

Mr. Carson added in his opinion, however, that some students may be able to argue before revision officers that the university constituency is their "ordinary place of residence" and that they can vote near the campus.

Man on Leave From Hospital Kills Officer

SUDBURY (CP)—A man on probationary leave from a North Bay mental hospital fatally shot a 33-year veteran of the Sudbury police force Thursday and then killed himself with his high-powered rifle.

Sgt. Larry Quesnel, 34, was shot through an apartment door as he and a fellow policeman, Constable Mel Valentini, were on their way to pick up Mr. Lawrence Proulx, 42, who was to be returned to the North Bay hospital Thursday following his probationary leave. Proulx later was found shot to death in the apartment.

PC Candidate Guest Of Trenton Kiwanians

TRENTON — Mr. George Hees, spoke to more than 50 members of the Trenton Kiwanis Club and their guests last night at a dinner meeting in the Clifford Hotel. The audience . . . "hand-picked," when it came to guests, were about 50-50 known Liberals and Conservatives and the P.C. candidate for Northumberland got two standing ovations.

Mr. Hees touched briefly on his sports' career, going back to the time when he played football with the Argos.

"You ask me what's the most frequent question asked of me while I'm out electioneering? Well, I'll tell you . . . it's this — 'What the h— happened to the Argos?"

Mr. Hees said a sportsman's career fitted a political candidate admirably for raising and criticism he received while on the hustings.

He paid tribute to his wife as being the one influence in his life in "bring him down to earth."

Mr. Hees said Northumberland needed more industry . . . in fact the whole area needs more industry," . . . and he said he, if elected could approach Canadian industrialists on a first name basis and suggest they start up branch plants in this area.

Northumberland and the -ur- ton area has good roads, good rail service and waterways which could be dredged out to accommodate ocean-going vessels should the need become apparent.

This area, with technical secondary schools in Trenton, Brighton and Cobourg, can produce skilled and stable employees for industry.

"The most important thing is that young people would stay in this area if we had jobs for them. This would prevent the dislocation of the family."

NO FARMER

Confessing that he "was no farmer," Mr. Hees said that he nevertheless had some definite ideas on how to improve the lot of the farmer in this area.

He said he would work on a system whereby farm produce could be sold on the export market, by setting up trade missions overseas in this field and seeing to it that Canadian agricultural items were displayed at trade fairs as well as other export goods.

"Farmers would be able to produce up to their ears, and sell their surplus products on the export market."

Touching on education, Mr. Hees said his party was pledged to a far reaching national program, embracing three fundamental objectives.

The P.C's, if elected, would increase operating grants to $5 per student for 1965 and increase these as required. Any student accepted by a university as a "full time" student would be eligible for the grant to the university.

Capital grants would be provided to support part of the cost of university capital projects approved by provincial authorities.

More substantial federal grants would be given towards research in universities.

More substantial aid would be given to the students themselves in the form of scholarships, bursaries and any other student aid program. The present Canada Student Loan Plan would be retained and expanded.

Mr. Hees said that this ambitious program would be "expensive." "But it's time we businessmen stopped trying to economize on education."

MORE RESEARCH NEEDED

"We are competing against mass production in the United States. In other words, we're competing with giants. We must have more research. We must have more technical skills. We must outthink and out smart the Americans and many other countries in the world, who deal in the export of the same type of export goods we do."

"Canada's whole industrial future is at stake," said Mr. Hees. "If we don't rise to the challenge, we may as well plan on going back to being hewers of wood and drawers of water."

Mr. Hees was introduced by E. M. Parker, Jr., a past lieutenant governor of Kiwanis and president of the Trenton Progressive Conservative Association and thanked by Kiwanian Paul Trips.

At the head table were: Lee Grills; PC candidate in Hastings South; E. M. Parker, Sr.; Keith Packer, general manager of the Trentonian; Clerk Comptroller, W. Lanyr; Francis "Babe" James, president of the Trenton Kiwanis Club; F. J. Arch, president of the Trenton Country Club; Mr. Hees and E. M. Parker Jr.

Station Vacuum Cleaner Damaged

TRENTON — The only accident in the Trenton - Brighton area over-night was one at the Shell Service Centre on Highway 401, in which a large tractor - trailer slid back and ran over a vacuum cleaner, resulting in $400 damage to the cleaner and chagrin on the part of the service station's owner, who used the cleaner for work on vehicles.

Purse Snatcher Steals $11 From Woman

TRENTON — Trenton police are on the look-out for a purse snatcher who last night snatched a purse from a middle-aged woman.

Mrs. Emma Wellman, 84 Campbell Street, said she was walking along Byron Street about 8.00 p.m. when near the George Street intersection a man ran up from behind and grabbed her purse containing $11 and personal papers. The purse strap was torn from the purse which was found later on Campbell Street, the money missing.

John Tremblay needed $400 in a big hurry. As he was reading his newspaper one night he noticed a Bank of Nova Scotia advertisement. It made good sense to John so the next day he was at his nearest Scotiabranch. He met the manager—explained his problem—and after a few quick questions about his job, income and how much money he needed John Tremblay breathed a sigh of relief.

IN 60 MINUTES John Tremblay knew he would have all the money he needed. Of course, this actual customer was not named John Tremblay—and not all Scotia Plan Loans take 60 minutes—the time varies with the circumstances.

But there are more and more people with all kinds of names and jobs coming to The Bank of Nova Scotia to have their money problems solved—quickly. Why don't you?

A SCOTIA PLAN LOAN is one of the best—most practical ways for you to consolidate your debts. Your loan is life-insured at no extra cost. You get speedy service. You get the other advantage of dealing with the interested Scotiabank people. So talk over your money problem—whatever it is—debt consolidation—a new car—with the people at your nearest Scotiabranch. They're ready and waiting to help you. How much money do you need?

Ontario Premier's Address

Ontario Premier John Robarts, in his address to the Ontario-Quebec newspaper seminar last week, dwelt not only on the problems of national unity (he said the crux of the problem facing the two major cultural groups in Canada is their inability to communicate with each other) but on the complex subject of federal-provincial fiscal arrangements.

Mr. Robarts made it clear that while Ontario must have adequate revenues to carry out its responsibilities to the people of the province, it recognized that the federal government must be in a position to effect transfer payments among governments "in order to maintain national standards in all parts of Canada."

"Ontario respects the primacy of the federal government in the field of economic policy for the benefit of the whole country," he said.

In other words, the premier was saying that fiscal autonomy in provincial affairs must be exercised with discretion lest it become a disintegrating factor within the sphere of confederation.

Mr. Robarts put it this way: "We are convinced that the provincial economy, if it exists at all, exists as a part of the national economy. If you accept the arguments that provincial governments must have control over fiscal policy to pursue the development of ten different provincial economies, then it becomes only a matter of time until Canada exists merely as a political system within the lineage of a national economy to weld it together into a dynamic whole.

"In my opinion, the combination of a bicultural country and national economy diluted into regional economies would effectively destroy any chance of maintaining a united Canada. Ontario's position, therefore, is that we must, to some degree, subordinate our own provincial desires and aspirations for the benefit of the whole of Canada."

Mr. Robarts could not have put Ontario's viewpoint with greater clarity. The process of giving effect to such a policy, of course, is more complicated, and the premier said he looked to the province's tax structure committee to come up with recommendations for subsequent discussion round the conference table.

That this division of fiscal responsibilities will continue to be a contentious issue defying satisfactory solution is reflected in Mr. Robarts' comment that he looked forward to "some very difficult and searching negotiations at which the provinces and the federal government will press different points of view."

Mr Robarts has given a strong lead to the other provinces; if the issue is a difficult one, his frank and statesmanlike survey of Ontario's thinking on federal-provincial fiscal policies should augur well for the discussions that must follow.

Thanksgiving Fall

Not every public demonstration in recent times has earned as much approbation as the students' fast on Parliament Hill last weekend.

The demonstration was all the more admirable because of the youthfulness of the participants, some of them as mere 15 years old, indicating a measure of social conscience that their elders might emulate.

The students, of course, were taking advantage of the Thanksgiving weekend to draw attention to the hunger which afflicts millions of people in other parts of the world and which is virtually unknown on this continent.

The fast was sponsored by the Young World Mobilization movement, a group affiliated with the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization. The young people were praised by Prime Minister Pearson and Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp wrote in a letter of comments provided by the students that: "I believe that both governments and individuals should contribute more to the needs of the hungry in underprivileged countries."

About 200 fasters took only clear tea and coffee a daily glass of orange juice from 9 a.m. Saturday to 9 a.m. Monday. Doctors ordered the fluid intake to prevent serious illness.

Motorcycle Curbs ...

The provincial transport department is placing fresh curbs on Ontario's motorcycling boom. They are timely and in the cyclists' own interests because of accidents involving these machines.

The department has announced that, effective immediately, riders holding only temporary permits will be barred from carrying passengers and renting motorcycles. The restriction stems from an increasing number of accidents involving passengers.

The authorities say they are also concerned at the way young persons have been able to obtain temporary permits and rent the machines. Permits are designed for learning and not for travelling.

Lifting of gasoline restrictions has had various effects on the general public. Private citizens can now travel any distance, and use any amount, of fuel they wish. No sooner had the restrictions been lifted, officials stated, than some of the fruit trucking fraternity who do business close to and beyond the legal border line went into action.

Senior Fruit Inspector C. T. Stevenson cited one instance where a huckster was selling peaches to an unsuspecting public in a town not far from here for $1.60 the basket, a price well above the ceiling quotation. The inspector stepped in and before the huckster knew it he had to refund the difference in price to his customers and was hauled over to the proper authorities who preferred charges against him.

A total of 10,342 square cheese, 9,853 regular large cheese, and 5,443 specials, were offered on the Belleville Cheese Exchange this week. The average price was 41.5 cents for white and 41.8 cents for colored.

Sister Mary Fleurette shows a folder on the uses of newspapers as teaching aids to Col. Everett Fairman, left, principal of Harry J. Clarke Public School and Dick Doherty, circulation manager of The Intelligencer. A total of 60 teachers and principals from Belleville's schools attended the Newspaper Seminar at Nicholson College yesterday to explore the use of the newspaper in the classroom.

Study Use of Newspapers As Teaching Aids in Schools

Sixty Grade 7 and 8 elementary school teachers and principals, representing every elementary school in Belleville, public and separate, attended Nicholson College last night.

The Seminar, sponsored by The Intelligencer, was conducted by Sister Mary Fleurette.

The theme of the Seminar was to study the uses of the daily newspaper as a teaching aid in the classrooms.

Sister Fleurette, who attended a newspaper seminar on the use of newspapers in the classroom at the University of Waterloo in August, spoke with great enthusiasm about the possibilities of newspapers.

"I found the seminar in Waterloo one of the most wonderful and rewarding courses "I have used newspapers in every grade from one right on through.

"There is material to be found in the daily newspaper on every subject taught in our schools."

Sister Fleurette told of a speaker at the University of Waterloo Seminar who started a new business course in his school, and with no textbook available, he used newspapers exclusively for a textbook.

"Textbooks are not right up to date," she said. "They can only be relevant in the current textbook, the newspaper, is used to supplement them."

LISTENED INTENTLY

The large gathering of teachers and principals listened intently as Sister Fleurette listed a host of classroom uses for the newspaper.

Suggestions included such things as discussing controversial statements made in the press; touring the "local newspaper; searching through newspapers for answers to blackboard questions; comparing two or more newspapers for news, features, etc.; assigning current topics from current events in the newspaper, e.g. world series, Viet Nam; presenting panels, debates and/or forms on events reported in the newspapers; and collecting scrap books on certain assigned subjects.

Col. Everett Fairman, principal of Harry J. Clarke Public School, thanked Sister Fleurette for her efforts "I am sure that we all will take a closer look into the use of our daily newspapers as teaching aids," he said, "and will make greater use of their possibilities.

Dick Doherty, Circulation Manager of The Intelligencer, thanked Sister Fleurette and the teachers and principals for attending the Seminar and assured the gathering that The Intelligencer will co-operate fully with the schools in tours of the newspaper and usage of the newspaper as teaching aids.

Refreshments were supplied by the Separate School Board.

In Defence of Bums

His name is Eddie Foster.

You probably never heard of him, but then again in a way you know him.

I knew Eddie. In fact a friend and myself lived in the same shabby rooming house with him for a year. We were going to college and money was scarce, so we lived in this dive on Mutual Street, right in the heart of Toronto's slums.

For Eddie it was different. He had lived there 15 years. The five bucks a week room was the best he could do, Eddie wasn't going anywhere.

He was an alcoholic. He used to drink anything. Once he found a half tube of hair cream on the street and he squeezed the alcohol out of it.

Eddie was almost 60. His hair was nearly gone. He was a little, wiry man, and life had been cruel to his once handsome features. His skin, pulled taut over his cheek bones from lack of proper diet, made him look more like a skeleton than a person.

Eddie Foster was a bum. I know he was because I heard so many people call him that.

One night, coming home from watching a college hockey game, we walked past an old, battered hotel on Jarvis Street. We heard some cursing and scuffling. The door came open, and Eddie Foster landed out in the street. The big, burly, slobbering barman, standing there in the doorway in his too-small pants and grimy apron, his face unshaven, his hair unkempt, yelled at Eddie, "Get out of here you bum. And don't come back."

I went over and helped pick Eddie up. He was weeping. I thought some people should see this. They would be astonished that a man who had been kicked around as much as Eddie would still have feelings to hurt

Eddie only went to Grade Four. His mother died when he was born, and with 12 other children, Eddie's "old man" (as he called him) didn't have much time for him. In fact, he didn't have much time for anything except drinking and beating his kids.

Eddie left home when he was 12. He worked in a factory, slinging molten metal for 14 hours a day. It was a man job, but what else could a kid like that do?

The future for Eddie was dim. Nobody cared about him. He turned to the bottle for support.

By the time Eddie was 15, he was a full-fledged alcoholic.

He was 18 when he met her. She was the first person who ever cared. Eddie cleaned himself up for her. He pushed his cursed bottle aside.

When he asked her to marry him, she said yes.

Two nights before the wedding, Eddie dropped into her apartment unexpectedly. She was there with another man. The world had kicked him in the face again. Eddie kicked back, and before he was finished, the man lay dead. The shock was too much for Eddie. He broke down completely and about five years ago she died in the Ontario Hospital where she has been ever since.

The name of the murdered man was Eddie Foster. That's where Eddie took his name from.

He explained it this way: "The only thing I ever did in my whole life that anybody noticed was kill that man. I felt it was only right to go by his name."

To this day, he looks at the precious newspaper clipping about his trial. He reads it every night. It's a sad testament to a man's life accomplishment.

He spent 17 years in prison. When he got out, he was 35, an ex-convict with Grade Four education and nobody to help him.

Where was he supposed to go? Only one place — to the gutter, along with all the other bums like him. And once you get there, forget it. The road out is too steep. It's much easier sinking.

I remember the day I graduated, I said goodbye to Eddie Foster. His eyes were moist, and as soon as we shook hands for the final time, he turned and ran sobbing back to his room.

Eddie Foster is still living the same way, from hand to foot. Every cent he gets, he spends on drink to drown his bitter memories of life.

Sure, Eddie Foster is a bum. There are thousands of bums just like him. But he is not a bum out of choice. He couldn't help it if the only love he ever knew turned her back on him. It wasn't his fault he didn't have the mental capacity to get by Grade Four. He would love to get a job, but who would hire him.

Yes, Eddie is really a bum, but there is one thing we should remember. He is a human being, and should be treated like one. Perhaps, if all the scowls Eddie Foster ever received had been smiles instead, he might not have turned out to be the bum he is.

It is worth thinking about!

Pearson Hopes Additional Federal Aid Can Be Given Before Next Academic Year

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Thursday he hopes his proposed federal-provincial conference to discuss financing of higher education can be held early next year.

After a 30-minute meeting with representatives of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, Mr. Pearson said invitations for the conference have yet to be sent out.

But he repeated an earlier statement that he hoped a program of additional federal financial help can be in effect by the start of the next academic year.

A brief submitted to the prime minister by the delegation endorsed most points made by the Bladen report on higher education published last week, and made four new recommendations as well.

It called for more generous federal tax credits, adjustments to the four Atlantic provinces, with a special federal grant of $2,000,000 annually, till the new equalization payments are arranged.

It said supplementary federal grants to all universities should be based on the number of non-graduate students, rather than on federal research grants should be increased more rapidly than the Bladen report suggested.

ACCEPTS ESTIMATE

In a prepared statement, Mr. Pearson said the government accepts the Bladen report's estimate of the increase of university costs and the need for post-1975-76 with total government spending at $1,704,000,000.

The federal government, he said, is prepared to contribute to university financing so that universities in all parts of the country will have their needs fulfilled.

Secondly, the large-scale use of tax money for university financing was sound only if it serves the "national purposes which are the concern of the federal government," he said.

Thirdly, the prime minister said the government will be justified in spending large amounts from the federal treasury if some young able Canadians were barred from universities because of lack of money.

AID NEEDED

"Adequate measures of student aid are an indispensable part of our approach to university assistance."

Dr. Geoffrey Andrew, executive director of the association, told a press conference after the meeting that Mr. Pearson's statement was "most encouraging" because it recognized that unilateral action should not be taken by the federal government.

Dr. Andrew said the association favors use of scholarships and bursaries during the early university years, with increasing use of loans during the later university years.

Dr. Andrew also said some persons had misinterpreted the Bladen report as recommending establishment of a federal education department.

The association had checked with Dean Bladen and his intention was to recommend that a cabinet minister be responsible for co-ordinating the entire federal education effort, but no federal department should be created, Dr. Andrew said.

Honesty in Govt. Issue, Says Dief

By STEWART MacLEOD

CALGARY (CP) — Intensifying his attack with the "honesty in government" issue, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker Thursday night said that a vote for the Liberals Nov. 8 will mean "an open season on organized crime in Canada."

About 3,200 persons crowded into a Calgary high school to hear the 70 - year - old leader mount his heaviest fire of the campaign against Prime Minister Pearson's Liberal government.

He said that if statements by Dr. Guy Marcoux are correct, it means "we have a government in office that got there by wrongdoing."

He was referring to a pamphlet by Dr. Marcoux, Social Credit member of the last Parliament for Portneuf, Quebec, secretary, concerning alleged representations to six Social Credit members to induce them support the Liberal party.

"He sets out that the sum of $25,000 had been contributed," said Mr. Diefenbaker. And he said the pamphlet adds that Transport Minister Pickersgill helped draft a statement by which the six Social Credit members, all from Quebec, would support the Liberals.

'STATEMENTS CURIOUS'

But the government spokesmen, he declared, the Conservative leader said Mr. Pearson and Mr. Pickersgill say the "curious statements" denying that the transport minister had anything to do with a bribe offer.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the statements were careful and guarded.

He said that among other things he wanted to know whether Mr. Pickersgill had anything to do with drafting the statement. And Mr. Pickersgill should answer other "simple questions" such as whether he went to Quebec City in a plane owned by a multi - millionaire and whether he met Moise Darabazon.

Mr. Diefenbaker, now facing fraud and arson charges in Quebec, was described by Mr. Diefenbaker as a "cornerstone of Liberalism."

Douglas Wants NHA Interest At 3 Per Cent

GALT, Ont. (CP) —T. C. Douglas said Thursday night a New Democratic Party government would make it easier to buy homes in Canada.

If elected Nov. 8, the NDP leader said his party would establish a department of urban affairs and housing to combat the country's housing problems and cut the interest rate on loans under the National Housing Act to three per cent from 6½ per cent.

By 1981, Canada will need an additional 1,000,000 public housing units for low-income families and elderly persons, he told an NDP rally here.

As prime minister, Mr. Douglas said he would make Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. part of his proposed department of urban affairs and housing.

Already 530,000 Canadians are poorly housed, he said, and more than 200,000 families are forced to pay more rent than they can afford.

An NDP government would make NHA loans available to purchasers of old homes as well as to new home buyers.

lings also brought a call for Conservatives to band together and make sure the party wins all three.

It was instituted by Mr. Starr who told the delegates to bend their efforts beyond riding borders — "particularly in Hastings South where we want Les Grills elected again."

"It's necessary for us to win every seat available."

Mr. Webb said party workers must strive to return a government of "sincerity, honesty and integrity."

"Never before have we needed so urgently a change of government, because we all believe that Canada cannot survive without all its provinces."

Achieving national unity was paramount and "the only party to do this would be the Conservatives," he claimed.

There was one noted sidelight on the platform handwringing at the convention—brought about by the presence of Marmora reeve William Shannon.

Reeve Shannon, a former Liberal campaign foe of Mr. Webb, was there to officially welcome the convention to his municipality, but referred to the former cabinet minister as "old" and at the local Liberal nomination. He followed condemnation of the party's representation in his riding by later turning down a nomination to run for the NDP.

Repeating his feeling of disenchantment with federal affairs, he told the Conservatives: "This is true, but it isn't almost at any political group—nor have I joined any particular group no matter what I communicated."

MEMBERS PRAISED

He praised Mr. Rollins in Hastings East and Elmer Sandercock MLA Hastings West "for their help in so many ways . . . that has helped our community."

However, it was Mr. Webb who probably had the apt public word in the issue stirred by his one-time political foe.

"The only thing I'm sorry about," he told his fellow-Conservatives, "is that when I read the paper all this talk . . . I never thought I would have been flown to Ottawa to meet the Rt. Hon. John Diefenbaker."

Had Reeve Shannon spoken with the Conservative leader, "I am sure that today on this platform and in this riding we would have had a supporter.

"Either that, or I would have had an opponent for the Conservative nomination here today."

Mr. Simonett said the Pearson government for weakness in federal-provincial affairs, where policy was patterned after that which "would suit one other province in this Dominion."

"There is no policy. It changes from day, hour to hour."

Senator White of Madoc, who represented Hastings-Frontenac until his Senate appointment in 1957 called for a 10,000-vote majority for Mr. Webb and for workers to "publicly show real display our faith and loyalty in our candidate, our party and our leader."

Sunday School Lesson
Michelangelo of His Day

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Millions of visitors to the New York World's Fair have gazed in awe at Michelangelo's famous statue, La Pieta. The versatility of this great genius, and of his contemporary, Leonardo da Vinci, is almost beyond belief. Occasionally in history, a man stands out as one of the most gifted men of his generation.

Such a man was Bezalel. Ask a hundred readers of the Bible who Bezalel was, and the chances are sky-high that 99 of them will not know. And yet the Bible twice lists the amazing artistic abilities of a genius. (Exodus 31:1-5 and 35:30-34). He was the outstanding artisan in Israel in the days of Moses. He was capable in 'every skilled craft.' He was unmatched in his ability to "devise artistic designs." It was to him Moses turned to create a tabernacle, an ark of the covenant, a mercy seat and other furnishings and symbols fit tent of worship for the people.

There was almost nothing Bezalel could not do with his hands. He could work in gold, silver, and bronze. He was expert in cutting and setting stone. He was skillful at woodcarving. He was the Michelangelo of his day.

He was also a deeply religious person. The Bible says he was "filled . . . with the Spirit of God." His work was wedded to his faith. He used his great skills as an artist to create beautiful designs that would greatly enhance the worship of Jehovah.

Of course, he could not create the great tent of worship alone. He needed other skilled workmen. He needed engravers, weavers, and embroiderers. (Exodus 35:35). He needed the help of all "able men" who had the ability and eagerness to work with him. (Exodus 36:2 RSV).

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR SKILL

There is no substitute for dedicated skill. Anyone can perceive a cathedral, but skilled hands must build it. Piety alone cannot build a house until one takes skilled statesmen, businessmen, scientists, and laborers. It takes people who will dedicate their skills to the good of mankind, and who will see their work as a means of serving God.

It also takes dedicated wealth. To make a sanctuary with rich tapestries and furnishings overwhelmingly costs a great deal. There was no treasury to subsidize the work. It had to be supported by the voluntary gifts of the people. So generously did the people respond, there was more than enough to finish the sanctuary. (Exodus 36:3-5 RSV).

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for October 17: "Bezalel," Exodus 31:1-5; 35: 30 through 36:7; 37, 38.

This is part of the glory of the church. Churches are supported by the voluntary gifts of their members. Someone has said that if the church did nothing more than inspire people to give, it would justify its existences. Churches are maintained by voluntary commitment and support. No one can be compelled to go to church. In America, at least, no one can be compelled to give toward the support of any church. His tax money cannot be used for the benefit of any religious group. Such support must be entirely voluntary. In a sense, the wonder is not that people give so little, but that so many give so much to help support the church of their choice. Every church is a witness to the generosity of its members.

A BORN TEACHER

But Bezalel's greatness went beyond the designing and the use of his own skills. God put it into his heart to be a teacher. (Exodus 35:34). He was also an educator as well as a skilled craftsman, as shared his knowledge with others. He could not pass on his genius, but he could and did, help others to discover their own skills.

Geniuses are born, not made. Genius is the gift of God, not the attainment of men. No educational system can produce a craftsman, an Edison, or an Einstein. Nevertheless, musicians must be taught and trained if Edison's inventions are to be understood and applied.

The educator stands in a supremely important position in society. Minds must be educated, hands trained, if the world's problems are to be solved, and mankind is to go forward. But skills must be related to ideals. Communistic dream leaders too. Communist countries have made amazing strides in education, industry, and the sciences. But communism stifles freedom, denies the rights of the individual, and, worst of all, denies the existence of God. What the world really needs is gifted teachers who love mercy and freedom, who have a passion for justice, and who try to walk humbly with God.

Pentecostals Will Attend Convention

DESERONTO — Rev. John McEwen, pastor of the Pentecostal Church in Deseronto, said today that Sunday School and church workers from his congregation are planning to attend the National Sunday School Convention in Bethel Church, Ottawa. Rev. Gordon Carpenter, is the guest speaker.

The Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada is the fastest growing denomination in Canada. Its Sunday school enrollment is now 73,000. Their Sunday School Missionary Crusade has contributed over one million dollars in 15 years. The annual giving is now almost $100,000 per year.

Rev. James Montgomery, executive director of Sunday School and Youth, leads a convention team consisting of Rev C. H. Stiller, executive director of home missions and Bible Colleges; Rev. C. Scratch, promotional secretary for missions; Rev. R. T. Parkinson, Sunday School and youth department secretary; Rev. A. M. Argue, and Rev. E. A. Francis, field representatives for missions. The team will be conducting seven such conventions from coast to coast.

Emphasizing the central theme of the convention "Go Build," 30 workshop conferences will be conducted covering every major church activity. Among those Christian education specialists conducting these workshop conferences will be district officials: Rev. R. Bombay, district superintendent for the Leach, Sunday School director; Rev. George Smith, youth director; Mrs. Janet Argue, Women's Missionary Council director, and Rev. George Ewald, Men's Fellowship director.

Planning to attend from the Deseronto Pentecostal congregation are Rev. and Mrs. McEwen, Mrs. Bryce Mo[illegible] Sunday School superintendent, Mrs. Ross Kemp, assistant superintendent.

Wave of Denials In Wake of Marcoux Pamphlet

QUEBEC (CP)—A wave of denials has built up in the wake of a pamphlet in which Dr. Guy Marcoux gives what he describes as the background of a manoeuvre to springboard the Liberal party into power following the 1963 election.

In a pamphlet published Wednesday, the former Social Credit member of Parliament for Quebec Montmorency said Transport Minister Pickersgill and mining promoter John Doyle took part in a deal which led six Social Credit MPs to pledge their support to the Liberal party after the 1963 election.

Dr. Marcoux will run as an Independent rather than as a Social Credit candidate in the Nov. 8 federal election.

He said support of the six led John Diefenbaker, Progressive Conservative prime minister, to resign and paved the way for the governor-general to invite Liberal Leader Pearson to form a government.

Dr. Marcoux also told of an offer of $25,000 made to one of the chief organizers of the Social Credit party by an individual who wanted the names of at least five MPs prepared to "sell themselves".

SURE MONEY OFFERED

At a press conference, Dr. Marcoux said that while he is sure the money had been offered he had no way of knowing whether any was ever accepted by the six.

In Ottawa, Mr. Pickersgill said in a statement issued by his office that he had no knowledge of any money paid or offered to the six MPs.

In Toronto, Prime Minister Pearson said:

"I have spoken to Mr. Pickersgill and he has assured me that he had nothing to do—directly or indirectly—with any offer of a bribe to any member of Parliament or anyone else on the matters referred to in the reports on Dr. Marcoux's book."

In Quebec, similar denials that any money was involved came from three of the six Social Credit MPs who signed the statement promising to support the Liberal government—Robert Bresile, Quebec East; Lucien Plourde, Quebec West; and Raymond Langlois, Megantic.

Gilbert Rondeau, member for Shefford, said when reached at his office in Granby:

"I am going to wait until I read the pamphlet before making any statement. I will turn the whole thing over to my lawyer to see if any legal action should be taken."

In St. Joseph de Beauce, Gerard Perron, member for Beauce, described the pamphlet as "simply ridiculous and the product of an extraordinary imagination." He did not want to comment in detail until he had seen his lawyer.

Still unavailable for comment was the remaining member who signed the statement—Pierre Andre Boutin, Dorchester.

Real Caouette, leader of Le Ralliement des Creditistes, said when reached by telephone at Sherbrooke that he had had no part in the decision of the six members to give their support to the Liberals.

His only connection with the affair was that he had asked the six to repudiate their decision and they had done so.

In the pamphlet, Dr. Marcoux said Mr. Caouette, who broke away from the Social Credit party after the 1963 election to form the Quebec-based Ralliement, was opposed to any investigation into the actions of the six who threw their support behind the Liberals.

ASKED FOR DETAILS

"I have never opposed an inquiry," said Mr. Caouette, "but I have asked Marcoux to let me have precise details in order that I may be able to act."

Dr. Marcoux had only made unproven statements, he said.

The Creditiste leader said Dr. Marcoux had always spared the Conservatives and Liberals in the Commons. More than 80 per cent of Dr. Marcoux's votes had been in support of the Liberal party.

Mr. Caouette claimed the cost of the pamphlet and its publication had been covered by the Union Nationale and Conservative parties. He said the pamphlet did not carry the name of the printer and Dr. Marcoux could be prosecuted for this as it was required by law.

In Halifax for a speaking engagement, Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland denied being involved in any way to attempt to get Social Credit members to support the Liberals.

Mr. Smallwood said he hasn't seen the pamphlet but that any reference to him in it is "absolutely untrue."

Dr. Marcoux said the pamphlet is the forerunner of a book he is writing and which he hopes to have printed within a few months.

Entitled Dans Le Meme Sac (In The Same Bag) the pamphlet mentions Moise Darabanez, a Quebec businessman now before the courts on charges of fraud, arson and conspiracy to commit fraud and arson.

URGE TO BUY EARLY

MONTREAL (CP)—Expo 67 officials announced Thursday that fair-goers who buy admission tickets a year or more in advance will save 28 to 45 per cent compared to those buying tickets at the fair's gates. This plan is designed to encourage advance ticket sales in order to stimulate early interest in expo they said. One-day admission tickets bought between Jan. 12 and July 31, 1966, will cost $1.80 compared to $2.50 during the exhibition. Seven-day tickets will cost $6.50 between the advance dates compared to $12 at the fair time. Season tickets will cost $20 compared to $35.

investigation," Mr. Thompson said at a press conference.

"As party whip at that time, Dr. Marcoux was charged with responsibility of the investigation. He talked it over with me, and I agreed it should be carried out. He has kept me informed from time to time of the results, but not the final results."

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK R. PUGH

Pugh – Rooke

Archdeacon A. S. McConnell performed the wedding ceremony in St. Thomas Anglican Church, Belleville, on Saturday, October 9, 1965, when Anne Wallis Rooke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rooke became the bride of Frederick Robert Pugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Pugh of Lindsay. Mr. Don Davenport was organist and accompanied the Junior boys' choir, who assisted in the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length sheath bridal gown of white guipure lace in Empire style featuring a scooped neckline and elbow length sleeves. A full train of peau de soie edged with matching lace highlighted the back of the dress. A bouffant veil flowed from a wedding ring headdress of peau de soie. She carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations and trailing ivy.

The maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Rooke and the bridesmaids, the Misses Mary and Sarah Rooke, all sister of the bride, were identically attired in full length gowns of gold peau de soie styled along Empire lines with scoop necklines and elbow length sleeves. Each carried a bouquet of yellow and bronze 'mums.

Mr. Robert Rowe of Toronto was groomsman, while Mr. Warren Alip of Toronto and Mr. Peter Rooke, brother of the bride of Belleville were the ushers.

For the reception in St. Thomas Parish Hall the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a brown jersey suit with autumn print silk blouse and a corsage of yellow baby 'mums. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a teal blue dress with matching hat and a corsage of pale carnations.

The bride donned a burnt orange wool dress with matching jacket, brown accessories and a corsage of white carnations for the honeymoon trip to Eastern United States.

Upon their returns the couple will reside at 210 Nipissing St., North Bay, Ontario.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES LAWRENCE STEWART

Stewart – Ray

Rev. George Southall officiated at the marriage of Beverley Ann Ray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Ray, R. R. 1 Halloway, and James Laurence Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Stewart of Cannifton. The ceremony took place on Saturday, October 9, 1965 at Bethel-Zion United Church. Mrs. Phyllis Lott was organist and the soloist was Mrs. Vivian Ray.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an Empire waisted sheath gown of satin peau de soie and French Guipure lace, fashioned with a scoop neckline, elbow-length sleeves and a chapel train. Her bouffant veil was gathered to a white rose headdress and she carried a bouquet of red roses and stephanotis.

Mrs. Dolores Ray of Cannifton, matron of honor, wore a full length royal blue peau de soie dress with Empire waist and a train at the back. She wore and train at the back. She wore a headdress of flowers and a small net veil in matching shades. The bridesmaids, Miss Sheila Ray of Halloway and Miss Susan Ray wore dresses of the same style as the matron of honor, but in lighter shades of blue. Miss Ann Sullivan of Plainfield, flower girl, wore a white terylene batiste dress trimmed with light blue lace.

Mr. Wayne LaBrash attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Mr. Ken Ray and Mr. Robert Kerr. Master Brian Walker of Orillia, nephew of the bridegroom, acted as ring-bearer.

At the reception held in the church hall the bride's mother wore a sheath dress of jade silk matelasse with a matching velvet hat and a white gardenia corsage. The bridegroom's mother assisted her in receiving the guests, wearing a claret red crepe sheath dress with a red brocade hat and a corsage of white gardenias.

For her wedding trip to Cape Cod, the bride donned a suit of beige and brown English tweed with a matching hat, dark brown accessories and a yellow rose corsage.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart will live at Foxboro.

Teskey – Osterhout

Helen Elaine Osterhout daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burton D. Osterhout of R. R. 1, Carrying Place and Lorne Gilbert Norland Teskey, son of Rev. George Teskey and Mrs. Teskey of Wellington, were united in marriage by Rev. George Ambury in Albury United Church on Saturday, October 9, 1965, at 2:00 p.m. Mrs. M. Woodcock was organist and Mr. Jack Grant was soloist. Both are from Peterborough.

The bride, given in marriage by her father wore an Empire gown of peau silk over taffeta with a self bow at the waist, and a long controlled skirt. The bodice of Guipure lace featured a scalloped neckline and lily point sleeves. Her tiered silk illusion veil was caught up with a cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of red carnations and white stephanotis.

Mrs. Wayne Branton of Belleville, sister of the bride was matron of honor. Mrs. Harley Aman and Miss Beverley Birdie, both of Belleville, were bridesmaids. All were identically attired in peacock blue floor length gowns of chiffon over taffeta with Empire waists, round necklines and bodices of Guipure lace. They wore matching headdresses and carried semi cascade bouquets of white and feathered Centennial 'mums sprayed pink.

Mr. Alvin Higgins of Carrying Place was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Wayne Branton of Belleville and Mr. Harold Teskey of Wellington.

At the reception at the Shrine Club in Belleville, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing an Indian turquoise chiffon over taffeta dress with Chantilly lace bodice, matching accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a dress of grey wool with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

For her wedding trip to Quebec City the bride chose a two-piece white wool hand embroidered suit with cranberry accessories and an American Beauty rose corsage.

On their return, the couple will reside at Carrying Place.

MR. AND MRS. LAURENCE F. BONIN

Bonin – Fobert

Barbara Agnes Fobert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Robert of Belleville and Laurence Frank Bonin of the RCAF Station Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Florian Bonin of Gibsons, British Columbia, were united in marriage by Rev. Father Reginald Sweeney in Holy Rosary Church, Belleville, on Saturday, October 9, 1965, at 11 a.m. Mr. John St. Pierre of Trenton played the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mr. W. Mann of Belleville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father wore a floor length gown of white sati-peau featuring a controlled skirt, scooped neckline, long lily-point sleeves and a cathedral-length cape train of Alencon lace. Her four-tiered bouffant veil of silk illusion fell from a crown of tear drop pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis and trailing ivy.

The maid of honor, Miss Doreen Bonin, sister of the bridegroom, wore an A-line, floor length gown of aqua turquoise organza over taffeta with an Empire bodice of Chantilly lace. Her headdress consisted of a single flower from which fell a circular veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of turquoise poms surrounded with white poms and ivy. The bridesmaids, Miss Evelyn Tobin of Kingston and Miss Geraldine Fobert of Belleville, cousins of the bride, wore identical dresses, hats and bouquets as that of the maid of honor, but in shrimp tone.

Mr. Bernard Fobert of Toronto, brother of the bride, attended the bridegroom and Mr. William Brady of Belleville and Mr. Gordon Scott of Toronto, ushered the guests.

At the reception and dinner held at Club Canara the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a brocade dress and jacket patterned in bronze on avocado green, with green and beige accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother assisted, dressed in a midnight blue gown and jacket of lace over satin, with pink accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

For her wedding trip to Vancouver, British Columbia, the bride chose a tailored two piece camel suit with lynx collar, camel and brown accessories and a corsage of yellow Sweetheart roses.

On their return the couple will live in Belleville.

Susanna's Family Fare

SOME LIKE IT COLD

Dear Susanna: Your most interesting and informative column has prompted me to send you a small idea: For an attractive buffet centrepiece, a nice, green, well-shaped cabbage can be decorated with toothpicks onto which cheese squares, olives, pickles and fresh fruit pieces have been stuck. Completely eye-catching and edible. — F. E. P.

Rightho! As soon as the coffee party ladies group has left, we'll boil the centrepiece for father's dinner. — SUSANNA

DRAPE THAT GAZE

Dear Susanna: Anyone can easily make lovely, sophisticated criss-cross organdy curtains that lend sheer beauty to a room and at the same time protect it from the gaze of neighbors.

Using the plain, soft criss-cross colored organdy simply add rows of horizontal tucking to each curtain. Make the top tuck two inches deep and add an extra inch to each succeeding tuck. Do be sure that your curtains are wide enough so one gets the full effect of the overall picture. — Mrs. I. S. Stager

A little extra stress to impress never hurt anyone; but for anyone who finds these instructions a little puzzling, please let me know, as Mrs. Stager's idea is excellent and these curtains make up delightfully. — SUSANNA

Dear Susanna: Buttons sewn on with crochet thread rarely come off. — L. S. S.

(If you have any hints for running a successful household — or any problems — write to Susann, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope when requesting pamphlets.)

WEDDINGS

GRAHAM — ROUSHORN

The wedding ceremony was performed in Queensboro United Church of Linda Colleen Roushorn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Henry Roushorn, Stirling (formerly of Queensboro), to Elwood George Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Graham of Cooper. Rev. W. Sedgewick officiated and organist music was provided by Mr. Alvin Miller of Belleville who also accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Robert Bell of Selby.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a bridal gown of peau de sole featuring an heirloom lace bodice dotter with seed pearls. Her veil of white tulle flowed from a crown of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and golden 'mums.

Mrs. Freeman Holgate, sister of the bride, as matron of honor and the bridesmaids, Mrs. Glen Whitelaw, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Linda Roushorn, niece of the bride, were dressed alike in gold embroidered peau de soie gowns and wore wedding ring headdresses of the same material with matching veils. Each carried a bouquet of white and gold 'mums. The little flower girl was Miss Sharon Holgate, niece of the bride, who wore a white peau de soie dress with gold cummerbund. She carried a tiny bouquet of golden baby 'mums.

Mr. Kelvin Fox attended his nephew as groomsman, while Mr. Murray Graham, cousin of the bridegroom and Mr. John Roushorn, brother of the bride, were the ushers.

A reception was held in the Queensboro Orange hall at which the United Church Women catered. The bride's mother wearing a brown figured silk dress, beige accessories and a corsage of pink 'mums received the guests. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother in green satin with lace overlay dress, black accessories and a corsage of white 'mums.

For the wedding trip to Detroit, New York, Lake Placid, Niagara Falls and Toronto the bride chose a powder blue suit with pink accessories and an orchid corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham will reside at Cooper.

LLOYD — STUART

DESERONTO — Marilyn Elaine Stuart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Stuart of Deseronto and Cyril Edward Lloyd, son of Mr. Bert Lloyd of R. R. 2 Napanee and the late Mrs. Lloyd, were united in marriage by Rev. B. Finley of Deseronto United Church, Saturday, October 9, at 2 p.m. The bride was Mrs. L. Tunnicliffe.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full length white embroidered nylon tulle over satin gown. Her shoulder length veil was held by a pearl tiara. She carried a crescent cascade bouquet of red roses.

Miss Linda Lee of Deseronto, Miss Diana Brooks of Kingston and Miss Patricia Stuart of Deseronto, the bridesmaids, were identically attired in emerald green long Empire line gowns with white velvet jackets. They wore headdresses fashioned of emerald green flowers.

The groom was assisted by Mr. James Lloyd of Napanee, Mr. Rodney Lloyd of Napanee and Mr. James Stuart of Deseronto ushered the guests.

The reception was held at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall, where the bride's mother received the guests attired in an ensemble of brown embroidered peau de sole with pink accessories.

The bride chose a pink double knit suit with a white hat and black accessories for a trip to Niagara Falls and the Northern U.S.A.

On their return the couple will live at R. R. 2 Napanee.

PRINGLE — SHANNON

The marriage of Beverley Gilmour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Whitney Shannon, of Westmount, Quebec, to Dr. Donald Franklin Pringle, of Lachine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis Pringle, of Belleville, took place on Saturday, September 4, at St. Matthias Anglican Church, Westmount. The Rev. J. N. Doidge officiated.

Mr. Earl W. Storey played the wedding music and the boys' choir was in attendance.

Slateblue peau de soie and apricot dalsies and pom poms, yellow and orange gladioli, and candles in candelabra decorated the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of eggshell peau de soie, having a fitted bodice and long sleeves, and the A-line skirt falling into a long train. Her veil of tulle illusion was held by a crown of pearls and she carried a bouquet of stephanotis and gladioli blossoms.

Miss Sandra Shannon, as maid of honor, Mrs. Jean D. Rolland, and Miss Diana King as attendants, wore floor length dresses of bronze peau de soie, having fitted bodices and A-line skirts of cocoa brown peau de soie. They wore headdresses of apricot daisies and buckleberry leaves and carried semi-cascade bouquets of apricot daisies and oak leaves.

Little Miss Mary Ann Locke of Belleville, niece of the bridegroom, as flower-girl was in a frock of copper bronze peau de soie, fashioned on empire lines. Her headdress and bouquet were similar to that of the bridesmaids.

Mr. Ronald Fox of Belleville, acted as best man for Dr. Pringle and the ushers were Dr. Terrence Porter of Kingston, Dr. John Locke of Belleville and Mr. Richard Shannon, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Shannon, the bride's mother, wore an ensemble of champagne cut velvet and a matching hat, green accessories and a corsage of champagne cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Pringle, mother of the bridegroom, wore an ensemble of blue appliqued brocade and a hat and accessories of the same shade, and a corsage of pink cymbidium orchids.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the St. James' Club. Later Dr. and Mrs. Pringle left for the Laurentians, the bride travelling in a paddy green frock, under a paddy green and charcoal grey coat. She wore a matching pillbox hat, and accessories and a corsage bouquet of white gardenias.

GRAHAM — ROUSHORN

QUEENSBORO—The United Church, Queensboro, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, October 9th, 1965, when Linda Roushorn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Roushorn, and Elwood Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Graham of Cooper, were united in marriage. Rev. Wendel Sedgewick was the officiating minister.

A reception was held afterwards at the Orange Hall in Queensboro, catered to by the United Church women.

QUESTION:

You mentioned roast stuffed pork shoulder. What kind of stuffing? I'd like to stuff lamb and veal shoulder too. Please keep up the good work.

Cindy C.

ANSWER:

I'll keep trying Cindy.

STUFFING FOR SHOULDER PORK OR VEAL OR LAMB

These amounts are sufficient for a 3½ to 4-lb. boneless shoulder.

2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine,
2 tablespoons chopped chives or young green onions,
3 cubes freshbread pulled into crumbs,
½ teaspoon salt,
¼ teaspoon accent,
¼ teaspoon rosemary,
¼ teaspoon pepper.

Gently saute chives or onion in butter until soaked but not brown. Add seasonings. Remove heat and gently stir in crumbs. (Note: 1 crumb my fresh bread in the blender . 1 broken slice at a time.) Cover opened-up shoulder roast with stuffing (or fill cavity from which bone is removed), roll up like a stubby jelly roll and tie firmly. Roast pork at 325 deg. F., allowing 45 minutes per lb. If meat thermometer is used internal temperature should be 185 deg. F. Roast Lamb at 325 deg. F. 25 to 35 minutes per lb., 170 deg. for rare"; 180 deg. for "well done". Roast veal at 350 deg. F. 25 minutes per lb.

QUESTION:

On our visit to Switzerland we liked Fondue Bourguignonne so much that we brought all of the utensils back home. Can you give us the varieties of sauces for 4 - 6 people.

Mrs. Q. S.

ANSWER:

As you know this dish is cooked at the table in a special deep metal fondue pot, narrow at top to prevent spattering butter, but an electric frying pan can be made to serve. Butter should be clarified to remove all water to prevent spattering.

3 lbs. beef tenderloin cut in ¾" cubes.

Three or four sauces are used — at least 1 cup of each: mustard sauce with capers, savory tomato sauce, dilute chutney, sweet and sour sauce, mushroom sauce or catsup, mayonnaise with garlic and herbs. All centre of table (preferably round) have hot clarified butter in deep fondue pot or electric frying pan). When butter is golden tell seated guests to pitch in. Each one impales a cube of beef on tines of steel fork, dips it into the butter to cook to his liking — rare, medium or well done. He dips it into one of the sauces spooned on to his plate and eats it sizzling hot. This is time-consuming but great entertainment. Serve crusty French bread and tossed salad with it. I have mailed to you the recipes for the sauces.

ST. MICHAEL'S C.W.I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League of St. Michael's parish was held on Tuesday evening, with the president, Mrs. G. F. O'Brien, presiding.

Among the many interesting reports given, was one on the dinner, put on by St. Michael's School Board for the staff of teachers and employees, and convened by Mrs. J. R. Rashotte, also one on the dessert bridge and euchre, convened by Mrs. M. Lack. Both committees and their committees are to be congratulated on the success of the events.

During a period of discussion, Director, Monsignor Sullivan, was complimented on the recent changes in the sanctuary, according to the new Liturgy.

Volunteers for Red Cross knitting and sewing were asked to attend a tea and bazaar at Hastings Manor next week.

Members were reminded of the rummage sale to be held on the Hall premises of St. Michael's Academy.

INTRODUCES SPEAKER

Monsignor Sullivan welcomed and introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. J. E. Buchan, chairman of the Belleville General Hospital building committee, who spoke on "The New Hospital" — a timely project, which has been just signed at noon that day; also one of interest to all.

The speaker described the various modern services and facilities on all floor levels, and stated that the hospital, which is equipped with air-conditioning throughout, should be in operation by January 1st, 1969.

In conclusion, Mr. Buchan remarked that, from the standpoint of excellence and efficient operation, the hospital would not be equalled by any in Ontario, and members of the County of Hastings should be justly proud of their hospital.

On behalf of the Catholic Women's League, Mrs. J. Morey thanked Mr. Buchan for an inspiring talk, and presented him with a small gift, as a token of appreciation.

Monsignor Sullivan closed the meeting with a prayer, after which refreshments were served by Mrs. J. Farrell.

"Portraits-of-Mexico" Delight Huge Audience

By A. HENDERSON

Long before the appointed hour the Collegiate auditorium was again filled to near capacity for the showing of "Portraits of Mexico," disapproving the old superstition of the number "13", and approving of the photographic gems produced by the Hollywood camera team of Curtice Nagel and William Moore. It was also the premiere of the 13th annual World Travel and Adventure series presented by the Kiwanis Club of Belleville.

Mr. G. F. Bradley, president of the club, introduced the narrator, Mr. Curtice Nagel, who in turn introduced his teammate, Mr. William Moore. Mr. Bradley also tendered appreciative thanks to those who have so faithfully supported the travelogues, and also to the business men.

OVER 70 PRESENTATIONS

Curtice Nagel, noted world traveller who recently returned from Spain, has produced over 70 presentations in technicolor of which Mexico is the most fascinating, the most picturesque, and the most educative country in the world. It is a land of exquisite color, a land of conquest, of hills and valleys, of Mexico City, the capital, having up-to-date skyscrapers, broad tree-shaded streets as the Avenida with a four-lane traffic.

Mexico occupies 76,000 square miles, has a population of 33,000,000, of Spanish descent. There are also many Indian tribes, with gay and colorful costumes, and their own typical dances, one of the outstanding dances is that of the dance to the Sun God.

ACAPULCO

Acapulco, one of the largest cities, is noted for its numerous fiestas, its colorful costumes; its archaeological ruins; boating trips, each boat adorned with festoons of flowers; its deep-sea fishing of the sail fish, and too, are the lovely beaches for swimming, with their golden sands, the "marital" beach at Caleta, and the "afternoon" beach at Las Hornos. At the Quebrada Rocks, daredevil divers leap from the 100-foot cliffs into the narrow gorge below, all for a few pesos.

From the El Mirador Hotel, one of the many luxurious hotels, there is a magnificent view over the broad waters.

WONDERFUL CATHEDRALS

Mexico City is noted for its wonderful cathedrals; lovely towering monuments; one building a golden angel on its 120 foot tip; dancing fountains; the United States Embassy; excellent cafes, and the latest University, established in 1517, with an attendance 48,000 students, and 4,000 professors. There is also a tremendous Stadium seating 1,100,000. Baseball is quite popular.

Other fine scenes included the great pyramids, some still lofting those of old Egypt. That of the Pyramid of the Sun at San Juan Teotihuacan, has a larger base than that of Cheops, and is 217 feet in height. Another fine monument was that of Juarez, the leader who instituted the Reform Laws.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES

As Mexico is partly in the north temperate zone, and partly in the torrid zone, the fruit is grown in the hot valleys, and include the pineapple, and huge bananas, while the grains, including wheat and corn are grown in the cool zone. Markets are colorful, held on Fridays and include fruits, flowers, many vegetables, chickens and turkeys, rugs and pottery. Very little money is exchanged, barter being the mode of exchange.

The Chapultepeck Park is one of the most beautiful in the world with its shaded walks, blorious flowers. Some gladioli were seen as tall as the men who carried them to market.

GOLDEN ALTAR

At Morelia the great cathedral towers more than 200 feet high, and the great aquedcut is still in use. At San Miguel de Allende is one of Spanish Colonial style, while that at Saseo, has an altar of gold, all handcarved.

Mexicans are lovers of music, which occupies an important place in their culture. Music is everywhere, at the fiestas, the carnivals, and accompanies all dances and the ballets, at which floating, voluminous gowns are worn, in gay colors, one being in all-white, known as the wedding ballet, all of which were lovely in portrayal, and exquisitely graceful.

WASH DAY

Monday was wash day, where the women gather at the community laundry at Taxco, rubbing the soiled garments with water and vim, as also at the sea shores where the children were bathed with the pet pig looking on, Mr. Nagel mentioned that he had given a shirt to be washed (it came back minus buttons!)

One of the last scenes was that of the Hall of Monoliths seen in the Mitla Ruins near Oaxaco, another was that of the special meal accorded the two travellers and photographers, and included the most delicious wands, beginning with a fruit cocktail topped with delicious, mouth-watering strawberries, and included homemade bread, made while you wait, mixed by hand, and patted out into round dises like pancakes.

Other scenes included gorgeous sunsets, green, green valleys, and high mountains; fishing fleets, the fishermen using bucket nets, and some butterfly nets. A most rewarding and educative travelogue.

The next travelogue will be held on November 18, entitled "There'll Always be An England," by Dr. Charles F. Taylor.

Indiscreet Kisses Depict Immaturity

DEAR DORIS: My boy friend is in the navy and we have found true love between us. We plan on getting married when I finish school. Don't think because I am 17 I'm young and foolish or this letter is of no use.

Well, I went to my girl friend's against his will because he can't stand her. We went for a drive with two guys, one who liked me. Well, to make it short, I finally let him kiss me because I got so tired of refusing. I held this back from my fiance until Sunday last. He wanted to die and after four hours of begging, promising and pleading, he agreed to give me another chance.

Last night I was down to her place again. Her boy friend's friend coaxed for a kiss. I said I was engaged and he said "Can I give you one little kiss for the bride?" So I said o.k. Then I learned she had bet him ten dollars he couldn't get near me.

Now I'm scared it might get back to my boy friend and I'm never going to stay around where there's boys. Please help me forget. — PETRIFIED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR PETRIFIED — Do you still need proof that you are young and inexperienced and un-ready for marriage? The odds against you are tremendous. You don't yet know what you will be like when you are grown up, nor what your likes and dislikes will be.

Don't try to forget what you've done. Let it tell you something about your own feelings and the kind of boys who attract you. And give yourself time to learn poise, self-control, and how to handle all boys, before promising yourself to one of them.

Building That Housed Three Prime Ministers Readied for Demolition

By ANN RUEBOTTOM

OTTAWA (CP) — While the building she lived in for 32 of her 89 years is being prepared for demolition, Mrs. Adolphe Caron reminisces about the historic Ottawa landmark.

A fragile but quick-witted woman with sparkling brown eyes, she was the oldest tenant of The Roxborough, a downtown apartment building which has housed many members of Parliament, including at least three prime ministers, since it was built in 1910.

"If I told you all I know, I'd be blacklisted," she says. Then, covering up a wry grin, she adds, "they were all a most respectable crowd."

The private red-brick building on Elgin Street has been bought from its private owner by the national capital commission. It will be torn down within the next few months to make way for a new $20,000,000 human and natural history museum.

RENTS NEW SUITE

As an auctioneer hurriedly sold off her old home's interior fittings and furnishings to a crowd of bargain hunters, Mrs. Caron chatted with reporters Thursday in the comfortable hotel suite she now rents just across the street.

She talked about the many prominent political figures she has seen come and go during her life at The Roxborough, including Prime Minister Mackenzie King who used to wheel his mother for walks in her wheelchair through its narrow hallways.

Former prime ministers Louis St. Laurent and Arthur Meighen lived there at one time, as did Governor-General Georges Vanier before he moved into Government House.

Mrs. Caron came to The Roxborough in 1913 as the bride of Adolphe de B. Caron, clerk of the Senate. She is the former Mary Montague Howard of New York City.

Her father-in-law, Sir Rene Adolphe Caron, served as minister of militia in the cabinet of Sir John A. Macdonald.

Church Groups

ST. COLUMBA WOMEN

President Iris Stotesbury opened the October meeting of Presbyterian Women of St. Columba with a welcome to the many members and guests in attendance. An inspiring worship service was conducted by Muriel Hutchinson.

June Rammore reported for the Christmas Cake project. Several girls will assemble in the church kitchen one afternoon this month for the purpose of making the cakes. It was decided to purchase a dress rack to be used at rummage sales and other events.

The president has accepted an invitation from St. Margaret's Anglican Church to pour tea at their fall tea and bazaar.

A coffee party will be held at the church next month. Convenors of this event will be Mary McLaughlin and Dorothy Kidd.

A nominating committee consisting of Mary McLaughlin and Lorene Siler was formed. Convenor of the rummage sale to be held later this month, Mary McLaughlin, reminded all of the date.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Bakay of the Bell Telephone Company was introduced by Marna Devolin. Mrs. Bakay gave a fine commentary, accompanied by colored slides and recordings, entitled "The Changing Years." Voices from the past, accompanied by their pictures on the screen, included Edward VIII, Sir Winston Churchill, John F. Kennedy, Rudolph Valentino and Enrico Caruso. Also depicted were cars, clothing, household appliances and telephones from the year 1900 until the present.

Mrs. Bakay was thanked on behalf of the group by Dorothy Kidd.

Refreshments were served by hostesses Lois Fisher and June Dunsmore.

MOUNT PLEASANT-RAWDON MESSENGERS

RAWDON — On Sunday morning, the Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Messengers held their Thanksgiving meeting at the church hall. Mrs. Raymond McConnell and Mrs. Clarence Scott were in charge of the primary and junior study chapters.

Bonnie Williams played quiet music and the devotional was conducted by Keith McConnell, Judy Graft, Gordon Spencer, Linda Hoard, Gail Merrick and Janet Scott. Mrs. McConnell gave the special meditation.

Judith McAdam conducted a Thanksgiving contest and presided over the program. Lorain Jeffs gave a piano solo and Gail Merrick sang a selection.

Plans were made to hold another meeting on October 31.

Homosexuality Not Hereditary Condition

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a divorcee with a 17-year-old son I have raised alone. I asked his father to please leave home when the boy was seven years old.

I was always proud of the job I did as a mother. David is an excellent student, a gifted musician, and popular with both boys and girls. He is self-reliant and never complains because my work takes me away from home five or six days at a time.

A few days ago I was cleaning the apartment and I did something I have never done before. I turned David's mattress — and I wish I hadn't. Under the mattress I found 15 magazines of nudes. A further search of the room turned up about 50 additional nudes. What makes me sick, Ann, is that the pictures were of males, not females.

ANN LANDERS

I divorced his father because he was a homosexual. Can the sickness be inherited? — DESPERATE.

DEAR DESPERATE: No. The problem is not hereditary. It is a psychological disturbance and it calls for professional treatment.

Ask your family doctor to suggest a councillor for the boy and don't lose any time.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am appalled by bits and pieces of conversations I've been hearing lately. Here are some samples:

Mrs. A.: "Our son and daughter are driving from Oregon to New York next week. They won't have to spend a dime for food or hotels. They've written to friends along the way."

Mrs. B.: "My husband and I are going through the Mayo Clinic next month. The folks who used to live next door moved to Rochester five years ago. We're going to write and ask if we can stay with them."

Mrs. C.: "Our daughter's husband is being transferred to Toledo next month. Can they stay with your sister while they are house hunting?"

Ann, my husband and I have travelled extensively and we wouldn't dream of calling friends or relatives to ask for free housing. Is something the matter with us? — LITTLE ROCK READER.

DEAR READER: Somewhere there must be people who just love to have folks move in with them. I don't happen to be one of those people but then maybe something is wrong with me.

Those who go only where they are invited invariably enjoy friendships that last longer.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 16-year-old girl who is babysitting and starving. I arrived on the job at 8:00 o'clock. My boy friend came at 8:30 to keep me company.

We both get three good meals a day at home but that's not enough for growing teen-agers. Right now we are chewing out on our nails because there isn't a thing in this house to eat. Don't you think it is rotten not to leave some snacks for the sitter?

Please print your answer in the paper. I know this lady reads your column because once she clipped out a letter about sitters who talk on the phone a lot and she left it where I would see it. — HUNGRY H.

DEAR H.: Most women leave a soft drink or some fruit for the sitter. This is a nice practice but the woman doesn't owe you refreshments.

You are hired to sit, Kiddo, not eat. If you must have nourishment at frequent intervals, bring something from home — especially since you seem to be entertaining guests on the job.

Asks Women To Act as Altar Servers

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)— An American prelate has proposed that women should be given a bigger place in the Roman Catholic Church and be allowed to act as altar servers at mass and as "deaconesses," it was announced Thursday.

Archbishop Paul Hallinan of Atlanta made his proposal in a written intervention submitted to the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

He said that in proclaiming the equality of man and woman, "the church must act as well as speak by fraternal testimony, not only in abstract doctrine."

He recommended that in liturgical functions, women should be permitted to act as lectors and acolytes.

After proper study and formation, women should be allowed "to serve as deaconesses in proclaiming the word of God and in providing those sacraments which deacons do, especially solemn baptism and the distribution of the eucharist (holy communion)."

He said women should "be encouraged to become teachers and consultants in theology when they have attained competence in this field."

Nuns, he added, should be fully represented and consulted "in all matters concerning their interests."

this is the way we "weigh" your baggage now on all our North American flights!

We carry these two, free, whatever they weigh!

You carry this one!

This 3-suiter is about the size of one of the cases you may take free of charge now. But it's the overall size that counts! This rule applies as well to those rather sizable accordion-type flight bags and to military-type duffel or dunnage bags which exceed the overall 62" maximum. But, under these circumstances, only one other case (maximum 45" total outside size) will be allowed free and must be placed at the passenger's feet. The exceptions to this would be sporting

The second bag must not measure more than 55" in total outside size to earn a free trip. You'll find that most 2-suiters fall within this size restriction.

Attaché and make-up cases typify this third piece of free baggage. Maximum total outside dimensions of 80" must be observed and the case must be placed at the passenger's feet. Handbags, cameras and other small articles may still be carried.

Good news for air travellers! Now the three pieces of baggage each passenger may take on a trip free of charge are not weighed—it's the overall size that counts! This rule applies as well to those rather sizable accordion-type flight bags and to military-type duffel or dunnage bags which exceed the overall 62" maximum. The exceptions to this would be sporting equipment, live animals and containers or the duffel-type bags mentioned previously. One other important point to keep in mind is this: if your final destination is outside North America, your baggage will still be weighed . . . 44 lbs. Economy . . . 66 lbs. First Class. U.K. Switches Policy on Nuclear Force

LONDON (AP)—The British government, in a policy switch, now believes that a proposed Atlantic Alliance nuclear force should be scrapped, and that renewed efforts should be made to halt the spread of nuclear weapons.

This major shift in force and defence policy has set backers within the U.S. government, qualified sources said Thursday.

Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart first indicated the change when he told a New York press conference Oct. 7 that the various proposals for a nuclear force under the banner of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization should be weighed against the possibility of obtaining an agreement with the Soviet Union to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons.

Quinte Kiwanis Is Staging Its Second Outdoors Show

Want to try your hand at archery, see artifacts recovered after a century under the water, or inspect an exhibit of old time rifles and fowling pieces?

Or maybe your liking runs to modern day sporting equipment, such as power toboggans, camping equipment or sleek powered cruisers.

If so, the second annual Quinte Kiwanis Outdoor Sports Show now on at the Belleville Armories is the place for you.

All this, and more, is on display at the Kiwanis show which opened Thursday evening and will continue Friday evening and Saturday afternoon and evening.

Club president Bob Carleton and vice-chairman LeRoy McBrien, doubling as program chairman, have put together a fine show, despite the fact a couple of exhibitors withdrew at the last moment.

ARCHERS ON HAND

Members of the Belleville Bowmen, local archery club, one of whose members this year won the Ontario field archery championship, demonstrate the fine art of archery.

At another booth featuring displays of duck and geese decoys made by one of the club members, old time rifles are on show, while a booth attendant demonstrates the art of making lures designed to attract even an over-fed fish.

At another booth the Quinte Aqua Divers have displays of old boat anchors, hoisting blocks and other boating equipment lost when boats were sunk a century or more ago.

Then there is a wild pheasant display by the RCAF Fish and Game Club, and a display of fur pelts and survival equipment by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests.

Attracting a lot of interest on the part of the kiddies is a color film conservation show staged by the Carling Conservation Club, under the direction of local representative Al Hardy.

Then there are commercial exhibits of classy new boats and outboard motors, winter power toboggans and almost everything for outdoors living and play.

Ald. Geo. Brown's Hobby Is Wild Life Conservation

He is Alderman George Brown, past president of the Quinte Club and internationally known outdoor sportsman and conservationist.

Alderman Brown, regional operator for East-Central Ontario Hydro at Belleville, and long time outdoor enthusiast, in the past dozen years has given close to 700 talks on wild life conservation in all parts of Canada and the United States.

In popular demand as speaker by wild life and conservation clubs, Mr. Brown has ranged as far as British Columbia, Texas and California.

He is president of QueOnt. Wild Ducks Conservation and works closely with the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, Canadian Wild Life Service and the Quebec Department of Fish and Game.

And as an extra hobby, when he isn't earning his salary with Hydro, hunting ducks and geese, or lecturing on conservation, Mr. Brown spends his time making decoys in his home workshop.

Alderman Brown's decoys are so realistic so as to confuse the ducks. He estimates that he has made up to 2,000 decoys of all types.

A resident of Belleville some years ago, Mr. Brown was transferred to the Ottawa area and while there had a regular wild life and conservation TV show on CBOT, Ottawa. He returned to Belleville a couple of years ago but still holds his card as a member of the Association of Canadian TV and Radio Artists.

As a wild life conservationist Mr. Brown has been instrumental in getting many persons, particularly farmers, interested in fish and wild life re-stocking. Many farm ponds which he encouraged farmers to build are now being used to start fish and wild fowl, later to be released in district lakes and woods.

"Farmers are helping a lot in our re-stocking efforts," Mr. Brown says.

Abitibi woodgrain panels are torture-proof

Fact is, none of these lovable household demons has a chance against an Abitibi Woodgrain panel. Thanks to Abitibi research, a super-tough surface coating protects the finish for a lifetime. No worry about scratches, fingerprints, crayon marks and the like. Common household stains clean with just a wipe of detergent. And there's never a need for waxing or finishing of any kind.

Installation is easy. Each 4' x 8' of 4' x 7' panel is V-grooved for authentic plank effect and concealed nailing. The cost? Much lower than you would expect (an 8' x 12' feature wall can be panelled for as little as $18.00!).

Ask your lumber or building supply dealer to show you the whole range of the Prestige and Classic lines.

By HARRY MULHALL

The fundamental issue of the federal election is honest government, Michael Starr, labor minister in the Diefenbaker Cabinet, told a party rally here yesterday.

In a hard - hitting speech frequently broken by applause, he lashed Liberal claims for majority government and told Hastings - Frontenac Conservatives:

"They can't get away from the fact that the basic ingredient of any government is honesty and integrity — no matter who that government puts through in the way of legislation."

Mr. Starr noted charges (by Social Credit MP Guy Marcoux) that Transport Minister Pickersgill was involved in a secret deal to line up Social Credit MPs with the Liberal government.

The Minister had denied the allegation but, added Mr. Starr: "Where there's smoke, there's fire — and, there's an awful lot of smoke lately."

Prime Minister Pearson has said he knows nothing of the Marcoux allegations, said Mr. Starr.

"Mr. Pearson said the same thing in the House of Commons when a charge was made against the Minister of Justice."

The Prime Minister, he added acidly, apparently suffered from amnesia" . . . and he's exhibited that same amnesia now."

The Liberals claimed their administration was frustrated by being a minority, he said.

"What are they frustrated in? Is it because they have been caught and frustrated in the nefarious activities they have been indulging in?"

He said honesty in government "is an old - fashioned issue, maybe."

"Let them change this as often as they can. This will not be erased from the minds of the people when they go to the polls on November 8."

LESAGE MARKED

Mr. Starr said a prime reason for Liberal attention to Quebec was that Quebec Premier Lesage was marked as next federal Liberal leader.

He was interrupted by applause from the rally when he added: "Anything that has to be announced of vital interest to Canada — Mr. Pearson goes to Quebec to see Mr. Lesage."

He said it is "quite obvious that Mr. Pearson is practically through as leader of the Liberal party."

"The Liberals wanted to get rid of Pearson when he was leader in the official opposition, and he has done everything he would change their minds since he was prime minister."

He lashed out at a Quebec "clique" that was "deciding the fate of Canada for the rest of the provinces."

"We all have the right to say what we want, not to agree to what one province wants."

National unity cannot be attained by handouts to one sector but by "equal opportunity for all across this country from sea to sea."

If the shape of Confederation is to be changed it must be done at an open conference of leaders from across Canada — "not behind closed doors, not under the table as the experience has been for two and a half years."

He said what was being heard from Quebec is the voice of a group which wants to dictate "to everyone else — but they are not speaking for the Canadians in the province of Quebec."

FIT TO BE P.M.

He charged Liberal politicians were teaming up to downgrade Mr. Diefenbaker in the campaign.

"This man was fit to be prime minister of this country because no one can point a finger at him in respect of honesty and integrity," Mr. Starr, said.

He forecast Liberal election disappointments in Ontario, particularly in the southwestern regions of the province where the government was hoping to make gains. Instead, he predicted they will lose two seats there.

The Conservative party was experiencing a new upsurge of enthusiasm and spirit after its 1963 defeat, he told the convention.

"If this feeling is a reflection of what is going to happen on November 8 compared to the laxity now prevalent in meetings of other parties then I can see nothing else to be gained than a great many seats for our party in the election in Ontario."

His recent "major disagreement" with Mr. Wagner involved a promotion list including the names of higher echelon officers on the force which, Mr. Brunet said, Mr. Wagner refused to approve.

Charles Bonney, Princeton, Wins Plowing Title

By IAN MacLAINE

MILLIKEN, Ont. (CP)—The days of keeping them down on the farm are race indeed, Canada's two top plowers in 1965 declared Thursday.

Charles Bonney, a 38-year-old beef cattle and mixed produce farmer from Princeton, Ont., won the Canadian plowing championships in a showdown with Tom Hickman of Chilliwack, B.C.

Both men had previously won the Canadian title—Mr. Bonney in 1958 and Mr. Hickman in 1961—and this year's was considered a rubber match by many plowing officials here who raised the two in a class above the other 14 competitors from eight provinces.

But novice Keith Robinson, a last - minute replacement for Douglas Reid of Brampton on the Ontario team, almost gave the province a 1-2 finish.

Mr. Bonney was given 164.9 of a possible 200 points in the two-day event with Mr. Hickman counting 160.9 and Robinson, 24, of Cookstown, 158 points.

Two-man teams from every province except Alberta and Newfoundland were represented at the 1965 Canadian championships held in this hamlet on the northern outskirts of Metropolitan Toronto.

Day's Brisk Driving In North Uganda Can Take You Back Through Centuries

An exciting 400-mile safari through seven of Uganda's kingdoms and districts is described in this story by Canadian Press reporter Joseph MacSween.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

MORUITA, Uganda (CP) — You can get all layers of history in just one day's brisk driving into Karamoja in northeastern Uganda.

But you need a government permit for this 400-mile safari into the past—for territory where tribesmen war over cattle and where life is changing dramatically for nomadic herdsmen being brought to terms with the 20th century.

The journey takes you through seven of Uganda's 16 kingdoms and districts from bush green area beside the equator to the stark, semi-desert region near the Kenya border, with Mount Elgon towering to 14,000 feet in the distance.

Preparations begin at Kampala, the Uganda capital, where the sawing cough of marauding leopards can sometimes be heard in the early morning on the outskirts of the modern city.

"I don't think you're an American spy," jokes Adoko Nekyon, minister of planning and community development, as he authorizes the travel permit for a Canadian reporter.

DRINK BLOOD

Nekyon, whose conversation is spiced with quotations from Plato and various philosophers, was a fantastic contrast with some of his countrymen encountered only a few hundred miles away later in the day.

These lean citizens smear their lips over blood-and-milk cocktails which they take from their beloved cattle the way their people have done since time immemorial.

You speed out of Kampala on a modern highway, along the northern shore of Lake Victoria, and at the town of Jinja you cross the Nile where the mighty river begins its 4,033-mile meander from the heart of Africa to the Mediterranean. Fishermen take 300-pound perch from Lake Victoria, second largest inland body of fresh water in the world after Lake Superior.

You see the Owen Falls dam and hydro-electric station which has converted the source of the Nile into a power plant supplying not only a host of local industries but other parts of Uganda and Kenya.

"What fun," Winston Churchill once wrote, "to make the immemorial Nile start its journey to the sea by going through power turbines!"

LAND IRRIGATED

The ubiquitous maize—bananas—tree lines the highway, often providing protective shade for coffee plants as well, and cotton is an important product in this rich area. There are tea plantations and impressive irrigation systems throw acres of spreading water high in the air.

Tall, flowering trees provide patches of vivid color in Jinja, a prosperous town of 40,000 which was once only a squalid cluster of duokas—Indian shops. Now industries include everything from cotton gimeries to tea, from beer to castor oil and from steel and copper to golden syrup and plastics.

A Canadian-backed firm has a copper smelter at Jinja.

Roaring along highway Kyabajinga — named after the local king—just beyond Jinja, the car is hit by a flying rock and the windscreen shattered.

Barefoot mechanics, shuffling about on the broken glass without apparent discomfort, install another in less than three hours. Kiddies in school uniforms gaze wide-eyed.

Strolling Africans offer to help. The motorist who suffers a mishap need rarely feel alone since invariably the road, seem cluttered with pedestrians, especially women carrying home the family water supply on their heads.

ELEPHANT COUNTRY

It all seems far from the popular conception of darkest Africa. But soon you are, indeed, swinging through elephant country where trees have been knocked awry by the huge beasts. The car stops to let a couple of baboon families cross the road. A stately giraffe blocks the way before loping off with ungainly grace.

The car is stopped again, this time by Uganda soldiers, at the border between the small territories of Bugisu and Sebei, where travel was restricted last March after conflict over cattle resulted in 12 murders.

"All is quiet, but you'd better get back before dark," advised a sentry after examining the travel permit.

Two parties of tribesmen were later encountered, perhaps fleeing a danger area with their cattle, which blocked the highway. An attempt at picture-taking was greeted with furious shouts, but the herdsmen were somewhat placated by handfuls of shillings and assorted coins.

The wild aspect of these men was in tune with the dramatically changing landscape—rolling plains and sharp bluffs, covered with coarse grass, thorn scrub and semi-desert plants.

Generally, however, the people of these remote regions greeted visitors with smiles and waves. The tall, fine-featured people of the north, the people of Karamoja, many half-naked, seemed to carry themselves with a prouder air than the shorter, thicker Bantu tribes of the south.

CATTLE COME FIRST

They wage a hard battle for survival in this inhospitable area, subject to drought and flood and unpredictable intervals—our visit came during a prolonged dry period.

The struggle to exist in these conditions has forced tribal life into a strange pattern in which cattle are more important than human beings and life is divided between settled agriculture and nomadic herding.

In a society in which cattle are traditionally a symbol not only of survival but also of status, many of the Karamoja tribe resist the Uganda government's efforts to get them to settle down and farm the arable land by reasonably modern methods. And sometimes those who do settle down are raided by those who don't.

The strangest experience of the day came in the short equatorial twilight, when some 50 tribesmen, faces painted with red and yellow clay and carrying reeds instead of the spears of yesteryear—now forbidden—came marching along the road.

After exchanging guarded greetings, we continued our journey northward but returned as darkness fell to find the men —clad only in blankets—in a frenzied sing-and-dance session at a village, a cluster of shacks beside the road. A group of soldiers had arrived from a nearby camp and looked on in apparent indolence.

'SIMPLY A MEETING'

Drums urged the warriors to ever - greater frenzy in their strange dance until, in a sudden hush, they broke off and began going through the motions of hunting or fighting with their make-believe spears. Occasionally a new figure emerged from the huts and hurtled himself into the middle of things. Giggling, naked boys looked on to delight. There were no women in sight.

Soon the warriors marched away, carrying their giraffe-hide shields, and a couple of officers left the military party and came over to the car.

Was it a war party?

"No, it was simply a meeting," a major replied.

Tribal elders, he explained, had urged the young men to give up the traditional warlike habits and instead plant maize (corn) of their own—and quit raiding other farmers. The dance was merely evidence of high spirits and potent beer.

Did the young men take the advice?

A quiet laugh was the officer's only reply.

Just then, by a bizarre coincidence, a tractor chugged into the darkened village. As if in testimony of things to come, the farmer on the tractor drove up the road after the departing warriors, his harrow clanging along behind.

Tomorrow: A Canadian teacher leaves for home.

"Unaccoutred as I am to tonsilment exercision," said Mushmouth, putting his trained turtles through their leapfrog calisthenics, "I am forced to take a bow because of my predicksent of the recent world serious argumen-yillon."

"I was slightly off-beam in my arithmaxetical convolutions. I called the Dodgers four straight. They made it in three and one, which adds up to four anyway."

"And didja know, boss?" asked the Mush, "that this was the first world serious in history where two cities celebrated the victory?"

"My cousin Fishmouth, who wolks in Brooklyn foamed me this mornin' and told me the ole but still loyal fans of the Brooklyn Bums had the joints jumpin' from Greenpoint to Canarsie."

"The nude-foamed schapers were lifted high in the belts and histros. Fishmouth swore that the pitchers of Sal Maglie, Don Newcombe, The "Duck," Gil Hodges, Jackie Robinson, and others of the old Bums which hang over the bars, were smiles."

"Out in L.A. they tell me the population went wild. Even the orange trees bowed in rustling tribute to the Dodgers in general and SK and LJ in particular. In case you're wonderin' SK is a guy named Koufax and LJ is Lou Johnson, not the guy that runs operations in the White House."

Mushmouth was right.

Magnificent Sandy, already acknowledged the King Arthur of the knights of the Mound Table, decorated his crown with its most brilliant gem yesterday.

And Lou Johnson, second banana in the Dodger hero bunch, summed it up correctly—in my book.

In a dressing-room interview during the "Bums" bubbly binge, the homer-smashing Johnson, a toothy grin splitting his face wide open, presented to Koufax:...

"You the greatest, Baby, You the greatest"

Koufax proved beyond a doubt he is the greatest pitcher in the game today. A sensational three-hit shutout relying only on his famous fast ball ("My curveball working") and retiring twelve of the last 13 batters to face him in a row overshadowed the brilliant performance of the Twins superb Mudcat Grant in the sixth game of the series.

The series was rather reminiscent of the Stanley Cup playoffs last year. It resolved itself into the fact that the first team to win on "foreign pastures" would cop the goodies and the gold.

The experts said the Twins would not defeat Koufax and Drysdale, the Dodger aces, in their home Chavez Ravine.

They did just that—and the cornfields of Minnesota sprouted new tassels and there was plenty of foam where the deer and moose roam.

Two up and two to go with the Dodgers kings of the mound out for at least two games. So far the Dodger bats might as well have been toothpicks.

But under the California skies it was another story. The Dodgers didn't need their ace hurlers.. They uncovered dormant heavy artillery and as the Twins wobbled, wavered and bush-leagued, blasted their way to three straight victories.

And that, mes amis, is where the Twins lost the series.

Had the real Minneapolis Twins stood up in one of those three disastrous schnauzies, the boys from Bloomington would have banked the major share of the series loot.

Mudcat Jim Grant proved that in his sixth game victory.

The King and his determined Dodger court, their backs to the wall on foreign soil, proved they didn't need the heavy artillery to reduce the Minnesota army.

All that was necessary was the wizardry of the royal flipper and a one-gun direct-hit blast from the Johnson howitzer.

Koufax Brilliant ★★★★★ ★★★★★ Johnson, Gilliam Helped

'Sandy Booted 'Em Home'

By JOE REICHLER

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Sandy Koufax figured to dominate the World Series before it started and it turned out just that way.

The 29-year-old ace of Los Angeles Dodgers, who is called the best pitcher in baseball, won Thursday's clincher 2-0 with a brilliant three-hit effort. The left-hander struck out 10 Minnesota Twins.

Although he lost his first start in the second series game, Sandy allowed only one earned run in 24 innings in three starts. His final strikeout total of 29 was only two short of the series record of 31 set by Bob Gibson of St. Louis Cardinals last year.

Koufax' performance in coming back with only two days of rest made him the Dodgers' No. 1 hero.

Jim Grant, who beat Don Drysdale in the opener and also came back with two days rest to whip Claude Osteen in the sixth game, came high on the Twins' totem pole.

In essence, it was Dodger pitching with three shutouts and the ability of Los Angeles' supposedly weak hitters to all but match the Twins in home-run power that swung the balance.

THIRD IN ROW

It was another satisfying triumph for the National League, which has won eight of the last 12 series and three in a row. The Dodgers go into the record books along with the 1921 New York Giants, 1935 Brooklyn Dodgers and 1958 and 1958 New York Yankees as the only clubs to bounce back and win after losing the first two.

The startling difference between the games played at Metropolitan Stadium and at spacious Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles was reflected by the results. Not until the final day did they have to play the last of the ninth inning.

Maury Wills and Ron Fairly, each with 11 hits, were the big producers for the winners, but Lou Johnson, the much-traveled 31-year-old outfielder, was a key man for the Dodgers Thursday.

Called up from Spokane in May after Tommy Davis suffered a broken ankle, Johnson sparked the Dodgers in May and June. In the final game of the series, it was his home run off the left field foul screen that gave Koufax all the margin he needed.

DOOMS KAAT

Johnson's homer, leading off the fourth, doomed Jim Kaat, who also was pitching with two days' rest. When Ron Fairly followed with a double to the right field corner and Wes Parker singled to right scoring Fairly, Kaat was done for the day.

Sam Mele's relief meatput the stopper to the Dodger attack but it was the same old story—too late.

Koufax' best friend was Jim Gilliam, an old sidekick' who was brought back from the coaching staff to the active list in May to fill a third base emergency.

When Sandy gave up a double to Frank Quilici in the fifth and walked pinchhitter Rich Rollins, manager Walter Alston came out to talk with him. The best batter, Zoilo Versalles, slammed a hard grounder down the third base line that Gilliam gloved behind the bag in time for the vital force play at third base.

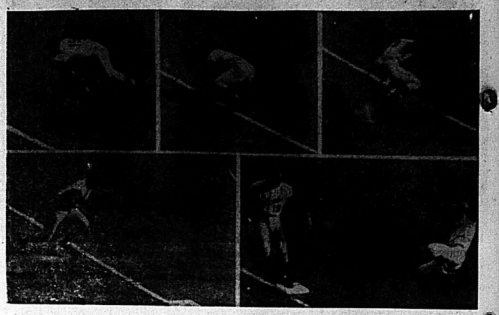
FINISHES IN FLOURISH

Koufax, who had struck out six in the first three innings and then let the fielders do the work, finished with a flourish. After Harmon Killebrew singled with one out in the ninth for the third Minnesota hit, Koufax struck out Earl Battey and Bob Allison for the final outs.

The southpaw star was an iron man all year despite an arthritic elbow that had threatened to curtail his career. He finished the regular season with 26 victories, leading the National League for the fourth successive season in earned run percentage.

Adding his World Series achievements, he made 44 starts in 1965, completed 28, turned in 28 victories, pitched 339 innings and struck out 411.

The payoff will be rich, although retiring official will be known until commissioner Ford Frick announces the financial cuts. It was estimated that each Dodger would get about $9,800 and each Twin about $6,500.



GILLIAM'S GREAT PLAY STOPS TWINS' RALLY—Dodgers' third baseman made this great fifth- inning play to snuff out a Twins' rally in final World Series game Thursday. "Just Didn't Hit Him"

Twins Pay Tribute To Koufax

By LEW FERGUSON

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Twins paid tribute Thursday to Sandy Koufax as a great pitcher after the left-hander had buried Los Angeles to the world championship.

"It took another great performance by him to beat us," manager Sam Mele said following the 2-0 loss in the deciding seventh game. "My guys played well. I told them they did a fine job, to keep their chins up and we'll start after another one next spring."

American League president Joe Cronin also paid tribute to Koufax, saying: "He had li- he's a great pitcher."

Cronin said also that Dodger third-baseman Jim Gilliam's play in the fifth inning "turned it around. . . . If the ball had gone through, it would have tied the game."

Cronin referred to Gilliam's stop of Zoilo Versalles' hard grounder past third. It cut off one Minnesota run and possibly a second tally. Frank Quilici was on second base and pinchhitter Rich Rollins on first.

'TURNING POINT'

"Gilliam's play could have been the turning point," Mele agreed. "Rollins has a chance to score from first, depending on what happens in the left field corner. It was a great play, no doubt about it."

Mele explained two controversies which developed between the Twins and plate umpire Ed Hurley.

One was on an interference call against Joe Nossek, called out while batting as Versalles tried to steal second in the third.

"He (Hurley) said Joe interfered with Rosebore, so what could I say?" Mele said.

The other was a complaint by coach Billy Martin to Hurley in the same inning that Koufax was not coming to a complete stop before making his delivery.

'THAT WAS THAT'

"The umpire didn't agree," Mele said, "So that was that. "Our pitchers pitched well. We just didn't hit that son of a gun.

"Jim Kaat wasn't throwing bad, but you give those guys two runs and you've got to stop them right there. We stopped the rally, but they already had the two runs."

Kaat raid the home-run pitch he served Lou Johnson was no mistake.

"I threw him a slow curve and then a slider. . . . I wanted to bust a fastball past him in tight. I got it there, but he got around on it. I knew it was gone if it was fair.

"Bon Fairly hit a high slider that hung, and Wes Parker was just trying to meet the ball and chopped a fast ball down and got it through for the other run."

Kaat said Koufax is amazing.

"He deserved it. But I felt Gilliam's play won the game. If that ball got through, we might have made Alston make a change."

ENTER MEET

KINGSTON (CP)—Two veterans of international competition will headline the Ottawa St. Lawrence Inter collegiate Athletic Association track and field meet at Royal Military College Saturday. Chris Wilkinson, a native of Fredericton, will carry Bishop's University colors in the mile and three-mile events, while Mark Arnold, a Montrealer attending Sir George Williams University, has entered the 120-yard hurdles.

Coach For King Koufax

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles Dodgers was named winner of the Sport Magazine Award as the outstanding player of the 1965 World Series.

He will receive a 1966 convertible sports car. Koufax also won the award in 1963. Bob Gibson, St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, was the 1964 winner.

REPRESENT CANADA

MONTREAL (CP) — Four cyclists, three from Montreal and one from Calgary, will represent Canada in the Tour of Mexico set, 26-Nov. 14 in Mexico City. Pierre Dandre, Dominico—Mure and Marcel Roy of Montreal and Gary Dejont of Calgary will make up Canada's amateur team that will cover the 1,812-mile tour.

Gaels Meet Blues

Mustangs Seek 3rd Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

University of Western Ontario Mustangs, leaders in the Ontario - Quebec Intercollegiate Athletic Association football conference, go after their third victory in a row this Saturday and coach John Metras isn't worried about complacency.

"Nothing is going to bother this gang of mine too much," Metras said Thursday as his team prepared to go to Montreal for a game against McGill University Redmen.

But McGill coach Tom Mooney hopes to give the Mustangs lots to worry about despite his team's winless performance in two outings. Mooney figures McGill's defence will give Western's power-packed offence a handful of trouble.

Queen's University Golden Gaels, meanwhile, visit University of Toronto Blues Saturday to see which team will still have a chance at first place with a win and loss each and a defeat will virtually eliminate either club from the race for top spot.

Metras doesn't plan to break up his winning combination for Saturday's contest, but he'll dress Rich Hawkins as the backup man to quarterback Bob Israel. Israel will start at quarterback as he did against Queen's and Toronto.

Cats, Lions Tangle; Als Meet Argos

Injuries Hurt East

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Knee injuries have forced changes in both lineups for Saturday's Eastern Football Conference game between Toronto Argonauts and Montreal Alouettes in Toronto.

Jackie Parker's injured knee means Toronto coach Bob Shaw will have to come up with two men to replace him.

And Montreal coach Jim Trimble is faced with a major shuffle of both his offensive and defensive squads because defensive tackle Ted Eleby showed up Wednesday with "tape-extension" of the knee, a high-sounding term that means he twisted it.

Hamilton Tiger - Cats meanwhile, can open up a four-point lead in first place in the EFC if they defeat British Columbia Lions in a Canadian Football League interlocking game in Hamilton Sunday.

Saturday's contest, with the kickoff at 2 p.m. EDT, will be carried on the CBC eastern network with the Toronto-Hamilton area blacked out. There will be no television of Sunday's game, which also begins at 2 p.m. EDT.

Parker had an operation Thursday night for removal of cartilagements in his left knee that will probably sideline him for the rest of the season.

SPLIT HIS JOBS

His defensive backfield job will likely go to Grant McKee, 26, an Edmonton Eskimo castoff picked up by the Argos. Shaw has recalled quarterback Gord McTaggart from East York Argonauts of the Ontario Rugby Football Union to be around if anything happens to quarterback Pete Liske. Parker was Liske's backup man.

The Argos, with a 1-10 record, will be making their last home appearance of the season and backfield star Dick Shatto, who plans to retired at the end of the schedule, will be honored. His sweater number, 22, will be retired by the club.

Saturday has also been proclaimed Dick Shatto Day in Toronto by Mayor Philip Givens.

Trimble said he will probably sit Eleby out in the game. He will probably move guard Wilbert Scott to the defensive line at either end or tackle.

Charlie Baillie, who came to Montreal three games ago to replace Dick Dalatri, will start at centre and Don Estes will move from centre to replace Scott at guard.

COULD MOVE UP

The Als, in third place, have already clinched a playoff spot in the east but are four points behind Ottawa Rough Riders who are idle this weekend, and have a chance to move up to second place.

Hamilton will have Hal Patterson, Bobby Kuntz and Mel Anthony in harness again Sunday against the Lions.

The game is vital to the Lions, who are tied with Saskatchewan Roughriders for the third and last playoff spot in the Western Football Conference. The Roughriders play Winnipeg Blue Bombers in Regina Sunday.

The Lions have two doubtful starters. Defensive end Dick Fouts re-injured his leg and end Jim Carphin is still troubled by a stretched achilles tendon which kept him out of action last Saturday when the Lions lost 14-12 to Edmonton Eskimos.

Reception For Johnson

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Lou Johnson, a wanderer in the bushes for 13 years, is going to be welcomed home at last with a special homecoming parade Oct. 21 at Lexington, Ky.

An obscure laborer in the Dodgers' vineyard at Spokane when the season started, the 31-year-old outfielder wound up taking bows for his World Series performance.

It was Johnson's fourth-inning home run off Jim Kaat that gave Sandy Koufax all the margin he needed Thursday in the seventh game and final Series victory over Minnesota Twins, 2-0.

Johnson got his big break when Tommy Davis suffered a broken ankle May 1. The Dodgers' pennant hopes appeared dead with their slugger out of action. But a call to Spokane brought Johnson.

Six major league organizations had tried Johnson and found him wanting. This was his last chance and he knew it. Determined to make the most of it, Lou immediately started off on a hot streak for the Dodgers.

STARTED TO WIN

Johnson started to win ball games. Pitchers began throwing at him and he was out for a time after being hit on the head.

At the end of the regular season Johnson had hit .259, with 12 home runs, 58 runs batted in and 14 stolen bases for 131 games.

In the series Johnson had eight hits in 27 at bats for 16 total bases, including two doubles and two homers. He drove in four runs and batted .296.

"I'm here to stay, said Johnson in the Dodger clubhouse after the series triumph. "I know Davis will be back next year but so will I."

Johnson was with 19 different clubs in 13 years. He was discarded as a farmhand by New York Yankees, Chicago Cubs, Los Angeles Angels, Milwaukee Braves and Detroit Tigers. He got to the Dodgers' farm from Detroit's Syracuse club.

Beavers Will Tour Europe

MELVILLE, Sask. (CP) — Sherbrooke, Que., Beavers of 1965 Allan Cup winners, will open a 12-game tour of Europe in December, Gordon Juckes, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said Thursday.

Juckes said efforts to organize a European exhibition tour by a second CAHA team have been unsuccessful.

He said national teams from the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Sweden and Finland will tour Canada and the U.S. this season.

Juckes said the Beavers will leave Canada Dec. 23 or 24 and go first to Sweden to play in the annual Ahearne Trophy tournament.

The Beavers will go next to Czechoslovakia for three games Jan. 6 and 8, then to East Germany for a game Jan. 11 and to Moscow for games Jan. 13, 15 and 17. The club will return to Canada Jan. 18.

Juckes said the Canadian national team, entered in the 1966 world tournament at Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, March 3 to 13, will play one game in Czechoslovakia and two in Yugoslavia to warm up.

Shack Shouts

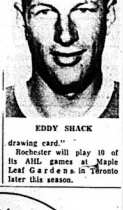
"Back To Leafs, Or Quit"

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Eddie Shack hasn't even started the American Hockey League season with Rochester Americans and he's already fed up with life in the minors.

"If I don't make it back to the Leafs in one month, then I'll quit hockey," Eddie said Thursday night.

He was sent down to Rochester from Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League this season after seven years in hockey's big time.

"I know at least three teams that want me," said Shack. "New York and Boston world take me, and I know Detroit has been making trade suggestions to Toronto this year. Heck, I could make $2,000 a year more playing for Detroit right now. Instead, I'm being used as a drawing card."



EDDY SHACK

Rochester will play 10 of its AHL games at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto later this season.

Centreville Defeats Cannifton

Centreville edged Cannifton 8-5 last night to win the EOBA intermediate semi-finals. The winners meet Ajax for the championship. The 3-5 series went the limit.

Last night's game, it was stated may be protested due to a Cannifton charge that the winners used an ineligible player.

Centreville scored twice in the first and added singles in the third and fourth. They added the winning run with two in the seventh.

Cannifton marked singles in the first and second, two in the seventh and one in the ninth.

Bill Hill started for Cannifton and was relieved in the seventh by Howie Meeks.

Brennan had two triples for Centreville, Bartch had two singles and Dunn and Kingston one each.

Billy Hill's triple and Meeks single were the Cannifton hits.

The score:

Centreville	201 100 200	6-6-4
Cannifton	110 000 201	5-2-4

BCI Blanks Moira 27-0

By DAVID TEMPLER

In gridiron action last night at Moira field the visiting BCI Senior Collegians overwhelmed the Trojans 27-0. The Moira Juniors easily defeated BCI Juniors 21-12.

The senior game was never in doubt after the first two minutes of the game. After the kickoff McCreary went 20 yards to give BCI a first on the Trojan 43. In three caries Kirk Lightfoot gained the 22. Hallam dove to the 18, Lightfoot advanced to the 12 and Ron Walsh drove around the right end for the winning major at the one minute fifty-second mark in the first period.

A minute late BCI penetrated to the nine yard line but could not score. Moira could not move the ball either and a bad third down snap gave the BCI a first on the 13 yard line. Aided by McCreary and Lightfoot positional fullbacks for the touchdown lunge after only six minutes of elapsed time.

Four minutes later great blocking by Chalmers, Thibeau and Lorne sprung Walsh for a 68-yard gallop around the end for BCI's third major. Walsh converted.

The last play of the first half found BCI on the five-yard line of Moira but time had run out.

In the third quarter Jim McCreary fielded a Trojan punt on the 14-yard line and weaved 96 yards for a touchdown. Walsh converted.

A rouge kicked by Walsh in the final quarter completed the scoring.

JUNIOR GAME

Drives by Baker and Hulser for BCI resulted in Tom Boulton scoring the first major. Moira retaliated. Quarterback John Holgate found Peter Bishop on the 12-yard line on a pass from the 50. Dave Loder went over left tackle for the score.

A 40-yard punt return by Don Curran and drives by Bishop and Holgate allowed Dalton Lambert to score from the 10. Loder converted.

On the kickoff BCI marched back down the field but settled for a single kicked by Ling.

Moira took over but an aerial play backfired when Durrmond intercepted and dashed 25 yards for a touchdown.

The BCI kickoff was fielded by Curran for the Trojans. A great runback gave Moira a first down on BCI's 11-yard line. Lambert scored the touchdown with only two minutes left in the half.

In the second half BCI was outplayed by a fighting Trojan team. John Holgate passed to Loder in the end zone and Harry Smith burst through off tackle to round out the last two majors of the game.

Ten Pin Topics

By AUS WATKIN

It is the hope of the writer that this weekly column will serve to keep all ten pin bowlers of all ages better informed as to what is going on past, present, and future in the fast growing sport. If all sides of the game are to be given equal coverage it is imperative that all league secretaries and other interested parties get any information on their leagues or tournaments to me by Wednesday of each week. Just call 968-6503 and leave your messages or information with whoever answers.

LADIES' PROVINCIAL CHAMPIONSHIPS

This year these championships are being held at Bowlerama Lanes in Hamilton, Ont., on Nov. 13 and 14th and have teams, doubles and singles. Any WIBC member is entitled to enter and it is understood that Belleville delegates to the Provincial Association's annual meeting which is held at the same time on the Saturday, will be trying to get next year's tournament here in Belleville. It is obviously a necessity to show these larger centre how interested we are, and so come on girls let's get with it. Entry forms can be obtained from City Association secretary Dorothy Anderson or from Grace Poste at the counter at Brunswick Bowl.

LEAGUE NEWS

The Thursday night Bowleros League has completed five weeks and the league race is a tight one. Loewen's Coolers and the Tryhards are tied at the top with 17 points, closely followed by Nomads with 16 points. Ladies show Audrey Hinchey with 157 and Grace Poste with 153, and men's, Wally Lavergne 182 and Aus Watkin 178 as high averages.

The men's Major "A" finds a similar jam for first place with Dow Kings and Don's Delivery tied for the top with 11 points. After four weeks high single is Toots Holway 258 and Aus Watkin 234.

Last Sunday night the ladies organized a Classic League, to go with the men's Classic League, already operating. Five teams showed up and I hear that quite a few others have signified intention to be in there this coming Sunday. Anyone interested can call the Bowl league secretary, Kay Moreau at 968-5916.

The Tuesday night Mixed League has Darrah Paints out in front with 15 points and five other teams following closely with 13 points. For the ladies it's Carm Miller 163 and Marilyn Thurgood 162 and for the men Jim Fraser 186 and Dewey Irish 180, are tops in the average race.

Ladies' Wednesday Afternoon League has the perennial champs, Paul Bros. Drugs, on top with 13 points, closely followed by three teams with 12 points. High average for the league is Audrey Hinchey 164.

Mixed Foursome Golf Draw

The Bay of Quinte Country Club rings down its seasonal events curtain Saturday with a mixed foursome tournament to be followed by the annual "Hardtimes Ball".

Weather permitting some thirty couples will tee off for gross and net awards with a special award for beating the pro.

The tournament gets under way with the first foursome teeing off at 10.30 a.m. The last leaves the tee at 1.00 p.m.

In passing it is noted that in the report of the winners of closing Field Day tournament the name of the winner of the ladies' most improved player was inadvertently omitted.

The draw follows:

10.30—Charlie Cox, Betty O'Brien, Dan Mahoney, Betty Brimacombe.

"From There—Don't Care"

Hawaii-Bound Koufax Aloha's Baseball

MINNEAPOLIS — (AP) — Sandy Koufax said Thursday he was going away as far as he could and forgetting about baseball as long as he can.

That's too late for Minnesota Twins. They would have paid his expenses if he had departed a day earlier.

Before leaving for Los Angeles Sandy had his arm and pocketbook examined by a doctor. Koufax lingered there long enough to shut out the Twins with a three-hitter in the seventh and final game that gave the Dodgers the World Series.

Most of the other 50,596 loyal Twins' rooters, however, stood up and cheered Sandy when he went to bat in the ninth inning.

The splendid southpaw said he would "leave shortly for Hawaii and then go on from there. Where I don't know—and I really don't care right now."

Koufax, who has a bad elbow, he will undergo a thorough examination of his arthritic left arm before he chose to pack ice for at least a half hour after every game.

The Dodger club physician will take xrays of the arm to see if there has been any change in the condition of the arm.

"Right now it feels fine," Koufax said. "The fact that I know I don't have to use it for a few days probably makes it feel even better."

Few among the capacity crowd were aware that Koufax, who had allowed Twins only two runs in 24 World Series innings, striking out 29, has been forced to swallow anti-inflammatory capsules three times a day for months in order to reduce the fluid in his elbow joint.

Thus, the fact that he was able to accomplish his latest masterpiece working with only two days' rest was all the more remarkable.

"I think I was fortunate that it was a cool day. I don't think I would have been able to go nine had the day been warm," Koufax credited his fast ball with his latest success.

"I didn't have my curve ball all day," he confessed. "I thought my curve was just fair in the first three innings; then suddenly I lost it. I finally gave up and relied on my fast ball through the last four or five innings."

Juniors Win

Quinte Whips Trenton

By Robert Snelfella

Quinte Secondary School's Senior football team whipped Trenton 20-7 to record their third win in as many contests in Bay of Quinte High School action yesterday afternoon.

Their Junior counterparts doubled Trenton 20-12 for their initial victory of the season.

In the Senior game Trenton left the starting block with a roar, and marched downfield almost at will against a frail Quinte defence. In six plays they reached pay-dirt, with their big fullback, Doug Davis, taking the ball over from three yards. The convert was kicked by Vic Witriak.

But their offence petered out at this stage of the battle, as Quinte tightened up.

Late in the first quarter the Saints started a drive on their 16 that churned its way upfield. After going over 90 yards they reached the Trenton one yard line, where they were stopped.

The winners tied the score, however, in the second quarter when Bill Leslie smashed his way through the Trenton line for the major. Paul Whalen booted the convert.

Quinte's Grant Vandervoort took the opening kickoff in the second half 100 yards for a T.D. on a picture play, but the score was nullified by a border-line roughing call.

Vandervoort got his revenge later in the game as he carried the ball 43 yards for a touchdown run. Whalen's convert attempt was good again.

Particularly outstanding in the Saints' win were Dave Muir on defence and Mike Shoniker on offence. Harry Hurst, Harold Townsend and Paul Whalen also played well for Quinte.

For Trenton, Phil Dupius and Jim Shoniker were two defensive stalwarts and Doug Davis and Vic Witriak on offence.

John Hall was one of the big reasons why the Quinte Juniors won. He continually ground out yardage and scored one touchdown. It came on a 70-yard gallop on an end run.

The second quarter defensive-player George Farrar blocked an attempted Trenton punt in the very half the length of the field with the pigskin to score.

Earlier in the game Jim Dafoe had gotten Quinte's first touchdown on a power play from a few yards away from the goal line.

Randy Castellaris recorded Trenton's first score when he romped around the end from eight yards out, and later he ran across another for Trenton's final touchdown.

Trail Western Pack

Weekend Will Decide Fate of Eskimos

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach Neil Armstrong promises his Edmonton Eskimos "will give more effort" in a bid to nail down a Western Conference playoff berth.

But his club's fate rests with others—the weekend Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The Eskimos, trailing the WFC pack, must win their remaining three games to retain hope for a playoff spot. The first obstacle is Calgary Stampeders, the front runners, Saturday night in Calgary.

The Eskimos also need several defeats for Saskatchewan Roughriders and British Columbia Lions, who are deadlocked for the third and last playoff position three points ahead of Edmonton.

This is where Winnipeg and Hamilton come in. The Blue Bombers face the Roughriders in Regina Sunday. The same day the Lions visit Hamilton for a clash with Ticats.

BOOST EskIMO CHANCES

A Winnipeg victory, which would ensure the Bombers a playoff post, and a B.C. loss would considerably enhance Eskimo chances.

Quarterback Eagle Day, troubled for several weeks by a knee injury, will be on duty for Calgary in the Roger Kramer, with stretched knee ligaments, were Ron Albright or Dick Suderman are Kramer's possible replacements.

The Eskimos aren't healthy either. Fullback Bill Tobin is on the injured list and due for another goal-line stand, and fine-backer Gordon Kelly was injured in the B.C. game which Eskimos won 14-12 last Saturday.

"I expect another knock-down - drag - 'em out affair against Winnipeg," said Roughrider coach Eagle Keys.

Saskatchewan will be without offensive end and punter Marcio Fabi victim of a stretched Achilles tendon in the Riders' 21-20 win over the Bombers Thanksgiving Day.

The Winnipeg crew came out of Monday's clash generally healthy and reports say tackleman Roger Savoie should be ready to leave the 30-day injured list.

May Be Justified

Coaches Break 'Silence' Rule

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Football League prohibits coaches from publicly discussing shortcomings of game officials.

But several have been doing it lately and a check of penalty statistics indicates they may be justified.

Dave Skrien, coach of British Columbia Lions who play an interlocking series with the Hamilton Tiger-Cats Sunday in Hamilton, claimed this week that Edmonton Eskimos were guilty of two fouls in a 75-yard touchdown run by Jim Thomas that helped Eskimos defeat B.C. 14-12 last Saturday.

Frank Clair, Ottawa Rough Rider coach, was incensed Monday in Hamilton at an offside call that wiped out a long touchdown play from Russ Jackson to Ted Watkins as his team lost to the Ticats.

And Hamilton coach Ralph Sazio hinted Wednesday that instead of turning the other cheek when the calls go against his team, he may start squawking.

The statistics show that in 10 CFL interlocking games played in the West, the eastern team drew the most penalties.

The most one-sided involved Hamilton and Saskatchewan Roughriders in Regina when the Ticats were slapped with for 131 yards and the Roughriders three times for 25 yards. Totals for the 10 western games show eastern clubs with 91 penalties for 776 yards while western clubs have 51 penalties for 373 yards.

But don't get the idea that the eastern teams are being victimized. When western clubs are in the East, the shoe is on the other foot.

Of eight interlocking games in Eastern Canada, western squads drew most of the penalties in six of them. The most one-sided was seven penalties for 45 yards against Winnipeg Blue Bombers in one penalty for five yards against Montreal Alouettes.

It's the best way to find out what people really think about a whisky: how do they like it when they don't know which brand they're drinking?

If you've tried Bonded Stock yourself, the playback won't surprise you. Bonded Stock is a great Canadian whisky. You can conceal the label but you can't disguise the flavour. It's an extremely mellow whisky with a deceptively smooth flavour.

The other thing that's deceptive about Bonded Stock is its price. But the price doesn't fool people with taste.

And what could be fairer than that?

NEW YORK (AP) — Soap opera is easily recognized even when attempts are made to disguise it.

There are, of course, continuing characters and a continued story. More than that, there are the tense emotions—all the continuing characters have their individual problems. Then there is the tendency to sit around and talk and talk and talk about the problems.

There also are some stock situations. One is the naive young man mixed up with a scheming sophisticated woman. Another is the fatal accident the which the wrong person is held responsible.

Producers, stars and the publicists of ABC's The Long, Hot Summer have denied that the series is basically a soap opera.

APPEARS DIFFERENT

However, this viewer tuned in Thursday night on the windup of a story continued from last week and found that a naive young man was mixed up with a scheming, sophisticated woman and that the wrong person was being held responsible for a fatal accident. And they were talking, talking, talking about it.

The continued story is popular—one after all those scenes when each hour or half hour was a self-contained story. The Long, Hot Summer successfully demonstrated in the twice-a-week Peyton Place last season, is that the audience will return for the rest of a story if they can be hooked by the first instalment.

That may be true when there is more than one show a week. But there are some viewers who don't want to be kept dangling for seven days. And it is somewhat disconcerting and unsatisfactory to tune in on a tale which is already half-told.

The Long Hot Summer obviously is considered to be a two-night show—no fist fights or gun play and the commercials are aimed at the feminine consumer.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Jockey Hugo Dittfach rode four winners on the eight-race card at Woodbine Racetrack Thursday to take over the leadership of the jockey standings at Woodbine's autumn meeting.

He has ridden 33 winners at the meeting and 133 for the year.

British Maid, owned by Windfields Farm, was an easy winner in the first of his Dittfach aboard and combined with Cipliner, in the second for a $61.20 daily double.

Dittfach rode Money Galore to victory in the third and V. Gill in the fourth.

The quinella of Bright Object and Mitil's Folly in the sixth paid $15.20.

Movie Column

Frank Sinatra Busy Man With Movies and Specials

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Movie plots are wilder than ever. Now they've got Frank Sinatra pulling a $1,000,000 robbery on the Queen Mary via a submarine.

That is the essential plot of Assault On A Queen, which is being filmed under the joint auspices of Sinatra Enterprises, Seven Arts and Paramount. Since Sinatra already has completed a mass raid on Las Vegas casinos (Oceans 11) and commandeered a Nazi train (Von Ryan's Express), he shouldn't be be able to manage piracy on an ocean liner?

"Why not?" he agrees. "It's a good story and a forerunner to the field of the next picture. My book has been laying around for 10 years.

"But listen, you can get away with these stories—if you hook the audience in the first eight to 12 minutes. And if you keep moving fast. And we move fast in this one, believe me."

You need only to watch Sinatra at work to understand the swiftness of his operation.

"LET'S GET MOVING"

"What are we waiting for?" he asks when there is a lull in shooting. "Let's get moving."

And there very rarely waits during the scene in which he, the buxom Italian, Virna Lisi; Tony Francisca and others plotted their outrageous scheme. Weeks of pre-shooting stage were chattering and pounding hammers despite the call for silence. "Incredible!" exclaimed Sinatra as runners were dispatched to quiet the noise.

The lull gave me a chance to inquire about the plans of the phenomenon known as Sinatra.

"On Thanksgiving eve I'll have a special on television," he reported. "A week before that, CBS is putting on the World of Frank Sinatra. They've been following me around for six months, shooting everything I do, almost."

After Assault On A Queen, Sinatra will play his usual three weeks at his Las Vegas base, The Sands. Then in January he plans to film Any Wednesday, the Broadway hit comedy about a tycoon who maintains a girl-equipped apartment which he visits mid-week.
